Rail Firemen Widen Strike To Include Fifth Road

Federal Mediators Hint at Peace Break As Union Pacific Division Is Struck

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The locomotive firemen's strike was extended to a fifth major railroad—the Union Pacific—yesterday, as Federal mediators hinted at a possible peace break over the weekend.

Union firemen were called out on Union Pacific trains running between Los Angeles and Salt Lake City.

An official of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, which originally struck four rail systems on Wednesday—Southern, Santa Fe, and the western rails of Pennsylvania and New York Central—said the Union Pacific southwest district had been helping Santa Fe keep in partial operation despite the walkout.

Negotiators Meet

At just about the same time that the Union Pacific partial strike was called by the firemen, Chairman Francis O'Neill of the National Mediation Board announced in Chicago that for the first time since the walkout Wednesday morning, he had brought the representatives of the railroads and union together.

The negotiators held a "full, frank discussion," and returned to their own headquarters to consider once more the issues, O'Neill said.

The chief issue is the brotherhood's demand that a second fireman be assigned to diesel-drawn trains having more than one engine. In the eleventh hour before the strike the union modified its demand, asking that a second fireman be assigned only to multi-engined diesel-driven high speed passenger trains—thus exempting freight trains, mail trains, local service trains, and the like. The union also offered to arbitrate the modified demand.

Arbitration Refused

The union's demand is based on its claim that two firemen are required to carry out the firemen's duties on the multi-diesel locomotives in order to maintain high safety standards.

The railroads contend that rail rules provide for safety with but a single fireman, and point to conclusions of two fact-finding boards backing up their stand. They refuse to arbitrate the modified union demand as to passenger trains on the ground it is a foot-in-the-door approach by the brotherhood. They say the union's demand is outright "featherbedding," that is, make work for a job that doesn't have to be done.

The brotherhood counters the featherbedding charge with the contention that the companies maintain beside the regular locomotive engineer and firemen, a third man—called a "supervisor"—to check the big diesel engines. That job, the union insists, should be performed by the second fireman.

Meanwhile, the 18,000 striking

D. C. Lawyer Finds Human Bones Buried Decade Ago

Frederick, Md., May 13 (AP).—The skull and thigh bones of a man or woman who probably died a decade or more ago were found in a mountain field in northern Frederick County today.

The moss-covered remains were brought here by sheriff's deputies.

They were found by Warren H. Cannon, a Washington (D. C.) patent attorney who purchased a farm recently on Friends Creek rd., a few miles south of the Mason-Dixon line. He lives at 201 Taylor st., Chevy Chase, Md.

He was planting seedlings at the time. Residents of the area said the field was last farmed about 15 years ago. The county medical examiner started an investigation.

70,000 Watch Procession

4 Area Heroes Honored by Veep At School Patrol Parade

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

In one of Washington's more zestful processions, 23,000 schoolchildren paraded down Constitution ave. yesterday in tribute to the Nation's school safety patrols.

A crowd estimated by police at 70,000 watched youngsters from New Jersey to Florida and Virginia to Wisconsin show their stuff, capped by Vice President Barkley's presentation of AAA Patrol Lifesaver Medals to seven brave boys and one girl.

The eight lifesaver-medal winners included three D. C. schoolchildren and one from Glenmont, Md.; Richard L. Allen, 11, 4400 Georgia ave., Petworth; Lester L. Engel, jr., 11, 4409 14th st. ne., Bunker Hill; Billy Manville, 12, 2712 6th st. ne., Noyes, and Barbara Jacobs, 11, 11701 Galt ave., Silver Spring, Md., Glenmont School.

The others: Freeman Martin, 12, Indianapolis; Gurnie Randall, 11, Lorain, Ohio; George Sherman, 14, Lansing, Mich, and John E. Stotler, jr., 15, Kantner, Pa.

The young heroes and the young heroine had risked their lives to rescue other school children from the paths of oncoming automobiles. Young Sherman was seriously injured when he snatched an 11-year-old girl out of the path of a wild-running car.

Barkley warmly praised them as having served "beyond the call of duty." One by one, the Veep pinned gold pins on their chests with such comments as:

"Congratulations, my friend. I am honored to pin this on you for service well done and I hope that in all your future efforts you will be as successful."

The Vice President paid honor to "the concerted and organized efforts among our schools throughout the Nation to save the lives of our schoolchildren."

So successful has this work been, he said, that in the period from 1922 to 1948 the death rate at intersections decreased by more than 30 percent "due to our safety

Airline Strike Of 17 Hours Is Called Off

New York, May 13 (AP). — A strike of 700 Pan-American World Airways flight attendants, supported by 3000 maintenance workers, was called off today 17 hours after it began.

The walkout, which began last midnight, was canceled in late afternoon when both sides agreed to submit disputed issues to arbitration.

An airline official said the strikers had agreed to return to work immediately.

Agreement came after a 3½-hour meeting conducted by Federal Mediator Ross J. Foran.

Refuse to Cross Lines

The strikers, and the maintenance workers who refused to cross their picket lines, are members of the CIO Transport Workers Union.

The flight service employes—stewards, stewardesses and pursers—walked off the job early after the collapse of eleventh-hour mediation talks.

The union had demanded an $8-a-month wage increase, a system-wide seniority program and improved severance pay. The union said the company offered to arbitrate the wage issue but not other demands.

A spokesman for the airline said that except for some delays, flight schedules were being maintained throughout the giant system. Supervisory employes were carrying on the maintenance work, he said.

Flies Routes to 67 Countries

Pan American flies routes to 67 foreign countries and United States territories. It operates no domestic runs, but has terminals in New York, New Orleans, Miami, Houston, San Francisco, Seattle and Brownsville, Tex.

Pickets marched before all of these terminals.

William Grogan, TWU international vice president, said present wages range from $187 to $282 for stewards and stewardesses and $292 to $352 for pursers. They spend about 85 hours monthly in the air and also perform preflight duties on the ground, he said.

Pan American, which operates a fleet of 140 planes, has a total of 14,000 employes.

Policeman Rides Cow-Catcher to Catch Suspect

Covington, Ky., May 13 (U.P.).—A patrolman commandeered a switch engine, rode the cow-catcher and leaped off to capture a robbery suspect here today after a mile-long ride.

The chase started when a hardware store operator cried an alarm after seeing John H. Grey, 35, Cincinnati, Ohio, leaving the store "stuffing something in his pockets." The cries attracted Bill Hilgeforth, who trailed the suspect to the Louisville & Nashville Railroad tracks.

When police arrived, Hilgeforth pointed out the man fleeing down the tracks on foot. Patrolman Richard Harlowe jumped on a switch engine and the 13-block chase was on.

We Get Our Hope—Bob Hope Will Do Big Celebrities Show

By Sonia Stein
Post Reporter

Whom did you hope The Washing Post would bring to town for the big show staged annually in connection with its National Celebrities Golf Tournament? Hope, we said. And Hope it is.

Bob Hope

Bob Hope, nimble-witted comedian known from one end of the NBC network to the other, known in virtually every armed forces establishment all over the world, and known as far and wide as motion picture film will reach, will pinpoint his activities here the weekend of June 3 and 4.

After playing golf Saturday, at the Army-Navy Country Club, Hope will emcee a star-studded show, the Bob Hope National Celebrities show, at the National Guard Armory that evening.

"Could I, or would I, go on like this day after day if I didn't get a lift out of it?" Hope asks of people who think he's killing himself with his schedule of personal appearances—many of them benefits or servicemen's shows.

'No Pussyfoot,' Is Democratic Cry at Chicago

Session Hears Ruffle, Flourish and Call: 'To (Smoking Hot) Arms'

Chicago, May 13 (AP).—Democratic leaders today said the party cannot win the 1950 elections by "pussyfooting," but must campaign, as in 1948, with "guns smoking hot."

Speakers at a national committee meeting opening an unprecedented three-day party conference and Jefferson Jubilee hit a common keynote — a warning against over-optimism.

"Look what happened to the Republicans in '48" was the chord of caution sounded by Democratic Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., the new vice chairman, Mrs. India Edwards, and leaders of the party's Senate and House campaign committees.

3000 Attend Meeting

Three thousand top Democrats from all parts of the country are in town for what probably will go down as the biggest political pow-wow outside a national convention in the Nation's history.

The climax of the big show comes Monday night with a major speech by President Truman in the stadium, preceded by a gala parade.

Sunday afternoon the President's Cabinet will hold a unique public session in the Opera House with Vice President Barkley in the chair.

Mr. Truman is due to arrive about 9 p. m. (EST) Sunday.

All members of his official family except Secretary of State Acheson, who is in Europe, will make "reports" on their departments at the Cabinet meeting.

The emphasis then will be on the workings of the Government. But today the talk was all politics.

Anderson Sums It Up

Senator Anderson of New Mexico summed up the Democrats' 1950 campaign problem by saying:

"It would be better for us if the Democrats went into this election scared and then fought as they fought in '48 — with their backs to the wall, with their guns

Recordings Smuggled Outside

Iowa Life-Term Convict Taps Secret Parole Board Sessions

Des Moines, May 13 (AP).—The case of a prisoner who used an "electric grapevine" to listen in on secret parole board sessions and smuggled wire recordings outside the walls set Iowa officialdom buzzing today.

Gov. William S. Beardsley ordered an immediate investigation, saying he was particularly interested in how 47-year-old Pete Hellyer, a life-termer, was able to smuggle out the spools of wire recordings.

The story was disclosed last night in a copyrighted broadcast by Jim Bormann, news director of radio station WMT at Cedar Rapids.

Bormann interspersed his broadcast with excerpts of recorded interviews between parole board members and prisoners seeking clemency. He said he got the recordings from an intermediary for Hellyer in a Chicago airport rendezvous.

Bormann related the story as follows:

Hellyer entered the Iowa men's reformatory at Anamosa 19 years ago to serve life for a sex crime. Later, he was placed in charge of the prison radio shop, which pipes standard broadcasts through the institution. In this shop he built a wire recorder and a powerful radio transmitter.

Months ago, with the connivance of other prisoners, Hellyer's microphone was planted in the warden's conference office. His electric eavesdropping of parole board interviews was recorded on wire smuggled into him.

Helley made hand-tooled leather bags, which he was permitted to mail to friends and purchasers. In some of these bags, Bormann said, the prisoner ingeniously concealed the wire recordings.

Truman Hits Foes of New Trade Accord

Sees 'Yes, But Boys' Aping Isolationists Of 1920s; He Calls For ITO Approval

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Fargo, N. Dak., May 13.—President Truman tonight lashed the "yes, but" opponents of a new trade accord among the free nations and said the United States has no alternative.

Calling for prompt congressional approval of the International Trade Organization charter, Mr. Truman told North Dakota wheat farmers:

"There is no room for economic isolationism in a world torn between freedom and Communist tyranny.

"The United States has no choice but to work with the free nations of the globe in mutual assistance and partnership."

On Last Lap of Tour

Heading east across the North Dakota prairies on the last lap of his "give-'em-facts" tour, Mr. Truman spread his Fair Deal message on everything from flood control at Fort Beck, Mont., to the farmer's stake in international trade at Fargo.

From a platform beside the depot, he warned that the ITO opponents today, like the "economic isolationists" who erected the high tariff barriers of the twenties, are just as "short-sighted or selfish" but don't call themselves isolationists any more.

"Now they say, 'yes, we believe in international cooperation, but'—" he told the crowd. These "Yes, but boys", he said, "would cut down international trade, force down living standards of other free peoples and ours, too, and let the Communists take over."

He told the farmers they must have a dependable foreign market for their produce to avoid a postwar collapse. In order to sell goods abroad, he said, we must buy abroad.

"The United States cannot prosper behind closed doors or high tariff walls," he continued. "The United States cannot hope to remain at peace behind such foolish, artificial barriers."

Cited As a War Cause

Charging the high Smoot-Hawley tariff "reprisals" of the twenties helped bring on World War II, he said we must not again "start down the road to economic isolation."

"Do not be misled by the hysterical clamor of the high-tariff lobby" was his message to employers and workers who are "sincerely worried" about an increase in imports.

"Fundamentally, there is no more reason to be afraid of fair competition from foreign goods than domestic goods," he said.

He said the ITO charter, signed by 57 countries, provides the way for free nations to settle their trade disputes in a spirit of "give and take" around a permanent conference table.

Then, appealing directly to his own Democratic House and Senate, he said:

"I hope Congress will ratify the charter soon, so we can set up the organization and get on with the job."

Saying "This is the way to defeat communism," he told the Fargo crowd:

"So far every effort to return to isolationism has been defeated.

"I am confident that we shall

Two-Thirds Slash Required in Total Of 33 in Country; 8 to Leave Here

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Communist Czechoslovakia was ordered yesterday to cut its embassy staff here two-thirds and to close two consulates, in what obviously was a retaliatory move.

The State Department indicated it might take further and still more drastic steps in the current war of diplomatic pressures. In a statement the department said it was "examining the situation not only with respect to the present but also for the future."

The department's move followed only a few days after the Czech government had demanded removal from that Soviet-dominated country of 40 of the 60 Americans on duty at the embassy in Prague and the consulate at Bratislava. Ambassador Ellis O. Briggs was warned that the Czech government would not be responsible for their safety after today.

Delivered in Two Capitals

Yesterday's note to Czechoslovakia was delivered simultaneously to the Czech Foreign Minister by Briggs and to Ambassador Vladimir Outrata, who was called to the State Department to receive it from Llewellyn Thompson, acting Chief of the Division of European Affairs. It left no doubt that it was directly inspired by the Czech initiative in reducing American diplomatic staffs in that country.

The United States note said:

"In view of recent actions of the Czech authorities with reference to the United States, the Czech government is requested within a reasonable time to close its consulates in Cleveland and Pittsburgh and reduce the number of its total personnel in the United States, including all categories except representation at the United Nations, in accordance with the present reduced scope of relations between the two governments."

The State Department said this "request," which under diplomatic usage is tantamount to an order, called for a two-thirds reduction in the 33 Czech diplomats and staff officials now in this country. Of these representatives, 16 were said to be stationed at the New York consulate, two at Cleveland, two at Pittsburgh and 13 in the embassy here.

Cut of 8 Here

A two-thirds reduction would result, in addition to closing the Cleveland and Pittsburgh consulates, in removing 10 officials and staff members from New York and at least eight from Washington, a total of 22.

While the State Department did not release the exact text of its note yesterday, it issued a statement which was described by Press Officer Lincoln White as closely resembling the note. The

Big 3 End Cold War Talks

Western Powers Pledge Aid To Southeast Asia Against Reds

By Glenn Williams
Associated Press Reporter

London, May 13.—The Big Three Foreign Ministers tonight ended a three-day cold war council, confident the West can build freedom into a dynamic force that will secure defenses against communism and win prosperity at the same time.

The whole sickle-shaped realm of struggle ringing the Russian-led Communist world was the field of their discussions.

"The ministers agreed upon the main lines of their policy in all parts of the world," said a communique—the fifth and longest since Secretary of State Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Bevin and French Foreign Minister Schuman began their deliberations.

They expressed determination to fight "Communist imperialism" in southeast Asia with firm encouragement and to support new independent states there.

The three ministers decided to set up a committee of experts to consult with other interested governments, particularly Germany and Italy, on increasing migration from overcrowded Europe.

They declared themselves basically in agreement on the importance of the "political development of the peoples of Africa" and the improvement of their economic and social conditions.

The desire for an early treaty of peace and independence for Austria was reaffirmed.

And finally, the diplomatic chiefs agreed to meet again in New York before the next meeting of the United Nations in September.

No spectacular changes in policy were disclosed. None had been expected. In general, more and better application of old policies appeared to be the general decision.

The communique summed it up by saying the three ministers believe "a closer coordination in the employment of their joint resources" will achieve the purpose of "reducing the risks of war and establishing the conditions of a lasting peace."

This coordination by the three

State Dept. Reply

Editors Get Rebuttal to McCarthy

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The State Department has mailed 500 American newspaper editors a point-by-point denial of some of the major assertions that Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) made in a speech to them last month.

McCarthy addressed the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention here on April 20. The State Department's first response, relating to McCarthy's charges that the agency is "thoroughly infested with Communists," was made by Secretary Acheson. But he did not address himself to the specific items in McCarthy's speech.

Last week, Assistant Secretary Edward W. Barrett sent all ASNE members—and most prominent newspaper editors in the country—a letter analyzing what he called "some of the inaccuracies in the Senator's speech."

Jessup Had Denied Charge

If Barrett's analysis is correct, the inference can be drawn that at least four of McCarthy's statements had been proved false before McCarthy repeated them to the editors' meeting:

1. In reference to Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup, McCarthy told the editors, "Why does he always join Communist fronts? Why not anti-Communist organizations?"

Barrett pointed out that in testimony to a Senate subcommittee weeks before McCarthy made this charge, Jessup testified that he had joined no Communist front organizations. Among the groups to which he did belong were the American Legion (he was a former post commander), the American Philosophical Society, the Foreign Policy Association and the American Bar Association.

Jobs Confused

2. McCarthy told the editors Jessup "had control" of the magazine of the Institute of Pacific Relations, through his position as head of the IPR Research Advisory Board, "at the height of the Communist Party line campaign . . . to smear Chiang Kai-shek and deify all the Communists," in 1943.

Barrett said "Dr. Jessup was not chairman of the Research Advisory Board" of the IPR in 1943. "He was merely one of 50 trustees." These facts had been brought out

7500 MPH Wind Sets Record in Navy Test Tunnel

The Navy announced yesterday it has succeeded in whipping up a 7500-mile-an-hour wind in the test tunnel of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., according to the Associated Press.

The big wind, which at least equals the record for man-made blows, whizzed through the 16-inch-square test chamber during research on rockets, missiles and aerodynamic design. The models stay in one place while the air whistles past.

The Navy pointed out that the feat does not mean missiles or aircraft will be able to travel at 7500 miles per hour "in the foreseeable future," but the ability to create such speeds is an important step in basic research.

'Happy Harry Carnival' Marks Annual Gridiron Club Funfest

The Democrats had a "Happy Harry Carnival," the Republicans a vote-making machine that produced nothing but snow, and General Eisenhower complained that Temptation "won't leave me alone."

It all occurred at the Spring Dinner of the Gridiron Club at the Hotel Statler last night, a dinner that saw notables basted and lambasted with satire and irony.

Guest of honor—in the absence of President Truman on his "whistle-stop tour"—was Chief Justice of the United States Fred M. Vinson. The Chief Justice addressed the 65-year-old club off the record.

The opening skit featured this theme song by the Democrats:

"We're off to fool the voters
Our wonderful neighbors out there
We promise them full security
And old age that's free from care.

Rains, Wind Whip River Tide Against Winnipeg Dikes

Winnipeg, Man., May 15 (AP).—Violent rain squalls accompanied by 30-mile winds lashed Winnipeg tonight whipping up a tide in the flood-swollen Red River that put heavier pressure on the dikes protecting the city.

At 9 p. m. (EST) the river stood at 30.2 feet—a rise of an inch in three hours.

Brigadier R. E. A. Morton said that if the river went up two more feet—to 32.6 feet—the Army would begin mass evacuation of the city's population to Army camps throughout Canada. He said essential workers remaining would be fed and housed by the Army.

Already more than 70,000 of Winnipeg 350,000 inhabitants have fled.

Farm Bureau Setup Fight Due Tuesday

A long-developing, slam-bang row is expected to start before the House Agriculture Committee Tuesday, when the House takes up the Granger bill to divorce the Farm Bureau from the Cooperative Extension Service.

The title of the bill gives as its three prime purposes:

1. To free the Extension Service from "political activity."

2. To free it from "the performance of nongovernmental functions."

3. "To promote economy in agricultural work."

A similar bill has been introduced in the Senate by Chairman Elmer Thomas of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The opening of the hearings will end efforts to accomplish voluntarily the separation of Government and bureau activities that have been under consideration for several years.

Groups Supporting Bill

Supporting the bill are other farm groups, particularly the National Farmers Union and the National Grange, both of which, incidentally were active in the organization of farm bureaus when they first started, just before World War I.

Joining them are many businessmen, particularly insurance men, oil station operators, grain and livestock dealers, farm machinery merchants, dealers in hardware, lumber, salt, twine, farm and electrical appliances and many others.

These businessmen declare it is unfair for them to be taxed to support farm bureaus that are in business competition with them in consumer cooperatives. Behind them are their own industry groups, plus general business associations and many chambers of commerce in rural areas.

Another potent force for the bill is the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities. This group, in August, 1948, made a report in connection with the Department of Agriculture, urging separation of the bureau from any Government agency and particularly from the public tax system.

In the two years since that report, negotiations have been carried on seeking a voluntary separation. In fact, action on the Granger-Thomas bill was held up for months in the hope that a solution could be found without congressional action.

Called Action for States

Recently, however, the American Farm Bureau Federation broke off such negotiations. It declared that the matter is one for action by the individual States, and not a matter of Federal or national concern.

This indicates it intends to fight to the last for the advantages it holds. These vary in different States. They are greatest in the bureau's biggest States, such as Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, etc.

Many observers view the recent bitter attacks by AFBF President Allan B. Kline on Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan as a part of this fight rather than a disagreement over the ideologies of the various farm proposals.

The farm bureaus originally were educational groups set up to aid farming. Both the Grange and, in other sections, the Farmers Union took part. The bureaus got their name through being started as a "bureau" in the Binghamton (N. Y.) Chamber of Commerce. This bureau employed the first county agent. The development of the farm bureau into a powerful political force is traced in the land-grant college report, as follows:

"In the beginning the purpose for which county farm bureaus were organized was to promote education for farm people through an extension service.

"Progressive farmers who desired the help of a trained agriculturist organized county farm bureaus to employ local agents and to assist them in the development of sound agricultural programs and in making technical information available to farmers.

Strong Impetus Given

"A strong impetus was given to the farm bureau movement by the passage of the Smith-Lever Act and by the fact that several State organizations, in authorizing State participation in cooperative extension work, stipulated that county farm bureaus should or could be formed to serve as local groups to sponsor and direct extension work.

"By 1920 a sufficient number of county farm bureaus was organized on a State basis to lead to the organization of the American Farm Bureau Federation. By this time, also, several State farm bureaus had developed commercial activities, and, through the AFBF, became quite active in promoting legislation . . ."

After a full discussion of the complaints of other farm groups, the report added:

"This committee expresses its conviction that it is not sound public policy for extension to give preferred service to any farm organization or to be in a position of being charged with such actions."

Opposing the bill will be the AFBF and many of its political and business friends. Among them will be Dean H. P. Rusk of the College of Agriculture of the University of Illinois. Dean Rusk was the sole dissenter from the report of the land-grant colleges recommending the same aims as in the Granger bill. He also was chairman of the task force on agriculture of the Hoover Commission for Reorganization of the executive branch of the Government. The full commission ignored most of the task-force proposals.

Bolling Displays to Feature Armed Forces Day Saturday

Armed Forces Day will be observed here Saturday, May 20, with a parade, fireworks and military displays.

Highlighting the day's events will be a 6-hour demonstration of weapons and equipment of all services at Bolling Air Force Base.

Starting at noon, the show will include a mock attack on the base by 90 Navy planes; demonstration of flame throwers, planes zooming up from jet-assisted takeoffs; and exhibition of a new high-speed laboratory for processing aerial photographs as well as 400 static exhibits.

On both Friday and Saturday, destroyers and smaller warcraft will be on public display at the Naval Gun Factory. A destroyer will also be open for inspection on those days at the Naval Ordnance Plant in Alexandria.

Saturday at 10 a. m. marching and motorized units of the armed forces will parade along Constitution ave.

The celebration will end Saturday evening with entertainment and fireworks on the Washington Monument Grounds, starting at 8:15 p. m.

Armed Forces Day also marks the close of National Defense Week sponsored by the Reserve Officers Association.

Oliver Gasch, chairman of the ROA's National Defense Week Committee here, said high ranking officers including Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger and Vice Admiral Leland P. Lovett will speak on military preparedness during the week to school and civic groups.

COOLS OFF—A. F. (Mote) Bergman, of Leetsdale, Pa., rests his tired feet and cools off with a cold beer on his arrival here yesterday after walking 63 miles in celebration of his sixty-third birthday. He said he walked from his home to Annapolis, Md., to Baltimore and then on to Washington in 11 hours and 45 minutes. Bergman, a member of the Leetsdale Lions Club, said he accepted no rides. He estimates that he's walked just about 260,000 miles in his lifetime

Slump in Farm Realty Prices Is Checked, U. S. Agency Says

By The Associated Press

Fairly stable farm product prices and improvement in general business conditions have checked last year's decline in farm real estate prices, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

Values for the country as a whole in March averaged slightly above those of last November, although they still were about 3 percent below values of a year ago.

A department survey showed that there is a strong demand for good farms for full-time farming and smaller ones for part-time farming.

The number of farms listed for sale, however, was smaller than in 1949.

The greatest strength in prices in recent months was reported in the States from North Dakota and Minnesota southward through Texas and Louisiana. Scattered other States, including Indiana, Kentucky, North Carolina and Florida, also showed gains.

Last year's downward trend continued, on the other hand, in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast regions.

For the country as a whole, land values are still more than double the prewar (1935-39) aveage.

The number of farm sales declined last year for the third consecutive year.

The department said real estate dealers report an increase this year in the number of inquiries to buy farms. However, the demand was said to be more selective than a year ago, with buyers more cautious and seeking farms that are more likely to pay out over the long run.

Interest in purchase of small acreages for part-time farming was said to be strong in Northeastern and Southeastern States.

The changes in land values by States since last November include:

Increases — Maine, 1 percent; Connecticut, one; Indiana, two; Illinois, three; Michigan, one; Minnesota, two; Iowa, two; Missouri, two; South Dakota, two; Nebraska, two; Kansas, two; North Carolina, two; Florida, four; Kentucky, one; Mississippi, two; Louisiana, one; Oklahoma, one; Texas, two, and Arkansas, two.

Decreases—Vermont, two percent; Massachusetts, one; Dhode Island, one; New York, one; New Jersey, two; Delaware, one; Maryland, two; Virginia, one; South Carolina, one; Montana, two; Idaho, two; Wyoming, one; Colorado, one; New Mexico, one; Arizona, three; Utah, ne; Nevada, two; Washington, two; Oregon, three, and California, two.

House Action Slated Monday On Parkway Funds Measure

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The House is slated to act Monday on a bill to signal completion of the Washington-Baltimore Parkway from the District Line to near Fort Meade, Md.

The measure, strongly plugged by Federal road officials and Maryland representatives, carries authority for a 13-million-dollar appropriation.

Maryland is constructing the 13-mile stretch from Baltimore to Fort Meade.

Representative Lansdale C. Sasscer (D., Md.) is author of the bill. But Representative George Fallon (D., Md.), of the House Public Works Committee, is expected to manage the legislation on the floor.

The limited access roadway would come into the District over a bridge crossing the Anacostia River, through Anacostia Park to New York ave. ne., extended. The Commissioners have assured Congress the city will provide funds for the New York ave. extension if Federal funds pay the construction costs through Anacostia Park.

Other public works actions in the Washington area:

1. The Senate District Committee hopes to send to the Senate floor Monday or Tuesday a House-passed bill authorizing construction of another bridge across the Anacostia River in the vicinity of East Capitol st. Thus far nine of the 13-member committee have signed a report favoring the legislation.

2. A House Public Works Subcommittee will meet in a closed-door session at 10 a. m. Monday to hear further testimony on legislation authorizing a $9,500,000 building in or around Washington to quarter the Old Age and Survivors Insurance Bureau. The agency of 4000 employes presently is located in a warehouse-type building on the Baltimore waterfront.

Maryland House members and other Baltimore interests are scheduled to testify on their alternate plan for building new Old Age headquarters in the Baltimore area with private financing.

Also on Monday, Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) plans to file a bill authorizing the Commissioners to borrow 23 million dollars for a 10-year expansion of Washington's overworked water purifying distribution system.

There were no cheering statements on the pay check aspects of District legislation at the Capitol yesterday.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee set Monday, May 22, as the probable day when his group will send the pending deficiency money bill to the House floor. The District's 119 million dollar appropriations measure for fiscal 1951, he said, also will be readied for floor action at the same meeting.

Thousands of workers on Federal and District payrolls may miss at least one pay day under this action timetable on the deficiency bill.

Whether the District supply bill or the deficiency measure gets floor priority will depend on the subsquent urgency of the payless picture downtown, Cannon said yesterday. "Neither one should take much time once they come up for consideration," he added.

Last Tuesday the District paid all its employes except the three judges of the Municipal Court of Appeals. District Auditor Arthur B. Pilkerton said 4461 city employes would go home payless May 23 if the deficiency bill has not been approved, as it now appears.

By June 6, he said, this figure would jump to 15,000. The total District payroll is about 18,000 workers.

Montgomery College May Get Bliss Electrical School Site

Montgomery County Manager Irving G. McNayr is studying a request for a $365,000 item in the budget to buy Bliss Electrical School, Takoma Park, for the Montgomery Junior College.

Dean Hugh Price of the junior college has inspected the Bliss School. He said it would "give us plenty of room for the next 15 years."

Price said that at the Bliss site, the school would be enabled to carry on athletics in Jesup Blair Park and the physical education classes could use Silver Spring elementary school, a block away.

The Bliss school is on a six-acre tract between Takoma and Chicago aves., just beyond the Piney Branch rd. underpass and the District Line.

If County Manager McNayr proposes the expenditures and it is approved by the County Council, the war surplus buildings now used by the junior college at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School will be available for use by the high school.

Bliss officials would not comment on whether they would move the school, which has about 400 students, in the event the sale is made.

Baby A-Bombs Ready For U. S. Jet Fighters

Blown From B-36

Search on For Body of Bombardier

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
LIEUT. FREEMAN HORNER
. . . Plunges to death

Forth Worth, Tex., May 13 (AP).—First Lieut. Freeman B. Horner, 32, formerly of Miles City, Mont., was presumed dead today after a freakish accident that blew him from a B-36 bomber more than five miles in the air.

Horner, a bombardier, was blown from the craft late yesterday when the bombardier's sighting window blew out while the B-36 was flying at 28,000 feet, about 80 miles south of Phoenix, Ariz. The bomber was en route from Fort Worth to Fairchild-Susan Air Base, Calif.

Air and ground crews searched today for Horner's body.

Airmen explained the accident as an explosive decompression—the violent blast of air from within a presurized plane out into the thin air of a high altitude.

At their modest home here Mrs. Horner accomplished today the hardest job "I ever had." Mrs. Horner told her three children that their daddy was believed to be dead. "They took it pretty well because they're so young and it won't sink in for awhile."

The children are Wayne Greg, 2, Gary Bernard, 3, and Shirley Ann, 5.

The Horners first met when she was working for the Reconstruction Finance Corp. in Washington during the war. They were married in 1943.

'Independence' Bond Drive Opens Monday

By The Associated Press

The Treasury launches Monday a Nation-wide 650-million-dollar savings bonds drive to run through July 4.

President Truman is scheduled to get into the drive-starting activities Monday night, speaking briefly on objectives of the campaign in a hookup of radio networks and television from 10:30 to 11 (EDT).

The President is to speak from Chicago at 10:55 and be presented to the airways audience by Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, who will speak from Philadelphia.

Snyder will be in Philadelphia Monday for a bond pageant in Independence Hall Square that includes a reenactment of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

The 1950 series E savings bonds campaign has been entitled the "Independence Drive" and based on this slogan: "Save for Your Independence: Buy U. S. Savings Bonds."

Fifty-three reproductions of the original Liberty Bell—exact except as to the crack—will be transported on local tours in every State and in the Territories in furtherance of the campaign.

Various events are scheduled over the country Monday to get the drive going: For example, in Bingham, Utah, a mountain top is to be blown off in symbol of "going over the top" of the local bond quota.

Sales of savings bonds already are running well ahead of redemptions, although sales for the first four months of 1950, totaling $1,431,146,000, lagged 8 percent below the comparable period of 1949.

Redemptions for the 1950 period were $302,808,000 below sales, although the $1,128,338,000 total of cash-ins reflected a 3 percent rise from the first four months of 1949.

For 1949, as a whole, sales totaled $4,207,598,000 and cash-ins $3,447,896,000, giving the Government a $759,702,000 edge.

Operation Today To Try to Separate Siamese Twins

Edmonton, Alberta, May 13 (AP). Final arrangements were completed at Royal Alexandra Hospital today for a complex operation Sunday morning in which surgeons will try to separate Siamese twins Brenda and Beverley Townsend.

The twins, joined at the abdomen in front, were born last November 17 to Mrs. E. A. (Bud) Townsend at Tofield, 42 miles southeast of Edmonton. Tests have indicated the liver is the only vital organ shared.

Dr. Eardley S. Allin, who heads the surgical team, says, "We think we've got a reasonable chance of success—otherwise we wouldn't do it."

The United States has baby A-bomb small enough to be carried by jet fighter-bombers yet possibly as powerful as their king-sided brothers.

Detailed information on the bombs is a carefully guarded secret. In fact, there has been no official announcement as yet that they exist.

The first definite indication that such weapons are in production was gleaned by a reporter seeking information on discussions among military leaders over the possibility of arming this country's North Atlantic allies with atomic weapons.

The discussions were said to be based on the possibility of using "lightweight" bombs as tactical weapons to replace expensive ground forces in Europe.

"Whil e the size of the "baby" A-bombs is secret, the fact that they can be carried by jet fighter-bombers gives some hint of their weight. The Republic F-84 Thunderjet, a typical jet fighter-bomber now in use by the Air Force, can carry two 1000-pound bombs, one under each wing.

In what may have been the first veiled reference to the new bombs, Secretary of Defense Johnson said in a report to Congress a few weeks ago:

"Atomic weapons are no longer a small number of bombs of a single size and type to be used only strategically on a carefully selected target. A variety of weapons is under development which may in the near future have military significance both tactically and strategically."

Tactical use of the A-bomb to support ground and sea surface action is an often-mentioned goal of military planners. Experts agree such use hinges on making available large quantities of small bombs to swift, highly maneuverable planes.

West Zone Red Arrested as 'Foreign Agent'

Frankfurt, May 13 (AP).—The Communist East German government today cleared the mystery of the disappearance of Kurt Mueller, long the No. 2 Communist in West Germany, by announcing his arrest.

High American officials expressed belief the arrest signaled a new purge of "Titoists" in the West German party. They said they had information that 31,000 members of the party have deserted or been expelled since June, 1949, cutting the roll to 185,000.

Soon after the Berlin press printed the announcement of the arrest, Hannover police disclosed that a girl friend of Mueller has been missing two days. They said they were investigating the disappearance of the girl, Hedwig Fischer, an employe of Communist Party headquarters in that city.

Social Democratic Party officials in Frankfurt said they believed Mueller, 47, was kidnaped and spirited into the eastern zone. A spokesman for the Socialist Unity (Communist) Party in Berlin declared, however, Mueller went to that city to plead his case with East Zone leaders and was arrested Friday night after a conference with a Communist deputy chancellor, Walter Ulbricht.

The announcement said he was charged with being an "agent for a foreign power" and committing "other crimes."

Mueller, deputy chairman of the West German Communist Party and director of organization, was expelled from that party Wednesday and resigned from the West German Parliament by letter Thursday.

Max Reimann, whose own position as chief of the party is reported shaky, accused Mueller of links with "hostile agents" and attempts to sabotage communidsm.

C. of C. Backs House Version Of Point Four

By The Associated Press

The United States Chamber of Commerce plugged yesterday for the House version of President Truman's Point Four program for aid to underdeveloped countries.

In a letter to House and Senate conferees attempting to write a compromise three-billion-dollar foreign aid bill, the chamber said provisions in the House measure should be adopted because they would:

1. Permit American capital and techniology to make maximum contributions to development of backward areas.

2. Make governments seeking aid responsible for providing favorable investment conditions, and call on them for adequate contributions of their own.

3. Provide an advisory board to give guidance in aid programs.

These provisions, the chamber said, did not appear in the Senate version of the foreign aid bill which includes the Point Four plan.

Conferees are still tied up on the bill, which includes a $2,850,000,000 authorization for a third year of the Marshall Plan. Failing to reach a settlement at an all-day discussion Friday the committee set another meeting for Monday.

The Point Four program is one of the main points of controversy. The Senate has voted 45 million dollars to start the program, the exact amount asked by Mr. Truman. The House cut this to 25 million dollars.

Symington Warns Of U. S. Power Need

NYHT News Service

The Nation would be caught badly short on electric power in the event of war, because it lacks adequate reserves, W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, warned yesterday.

Reserve power ratio now is only a little more than half that which existed during peak power demands of World War II, when there was a 20 percent margin, considered necessary for safety. Further water shortages, such as have plagued both the West Coast and the New York area, add to critical emergency power problems, the NSRB said.

Transmitting to the White House the third national electric power survey of his board, Symington urged that reserve generating and transmission facilities be installed now, since surplus manufacturing capacity is available for the first time since the war. Such increases, he pointed out, could not be carried out if we were at war, as materials and capacity would be diverted to more urgent war production.

Down to 11.9 Percent

In 1940 the margin of reserve capacity was 9,127,000 kilowatts, or 30 percent of the peak load. At no time during the war did it fall below 20 percent of peak. The margin for 1949 under average water conditions was only 6,600,000 kilowatts or 11.9 percent of capacity.

The survey shows that expansion programs now under way will provide a total capability of more than 76 million kilowatts in 1952, an increase of 48 percent over 1948.

"This capacity does not assure security from the standpoint of power policy," Symington said. "If war were to break out, power would still be one of our crucial problems. It is of great importance from the standpoint of national security to strengthen and speed up the power construction programs of public and private power systems."

TVA Situation 'Tight'

The suvey shows that margins of reserve for peacetime loads should be adequate by 1952 except in the Southeast and Northwest—both vital atomic production centers. The Tennessee Valley Authority system faces "a very tight situation" in 1951. It was the availability of big power reserves here at the beginning of World War II that made it possible to establish the Oak Ridge atomic energy plant, which is a huge consumer of power. But by 1952 "some margins" will be available for the region even under adverse hydro conditions.

The other great atomic energy plant at Hanford, Wash., now producing plutonium, is also in an area of critical power shortage at this time, following unprecedented expansion during the war. This is a peculiarly sensitive region, because great aluminum plants in this area also depend on abundant electric power, and aircraft expansion depends on aluminum expansion.

Against Mate

Sister Hears Farouk Has Taken Action

San Francisco, May 13 (AP).—Fathyia, 19-year-old Moslem princess, heard reports today that her angered brother, King Farouk, has acted to have her 31-year-old commoner bridegroom brought back to Egypt.

"I would follow him anywhere in the world," said the princess, who wed Riad Ghali in a civil ceremony here last month.

The Chronicle said it was told by the Egyptian Embassy in Washington that the King already has stripped Ghali of his diplomatic status and informed the United States Department of Immigration he is now an alien resident.

The King, opposing the marriage of Ghali, a Coptic Christian, to the youngest member of the royal family of Moslems, was reported considering steps to have Princess Fathyia and the Queen Mother Nazli returned to Egypt.

Ghali, the Queen Mother's secretary, said he had received no official notification that either the United States or the Egyptian Government is taking steps to have the royal party leave his country.

He was told Cairo newspapers carried stories by their Washington corespondents that the United States plans to cancel the diplomatic visas of the queen, the Princess and himself. Ghali said he would regard such action as the result of a request by King Farouk to the United States Government.

"We would have no choice but to go," Ghali said.

In Washington, there was no official comment on the report.

Pope Renames Cleric Balking At Elevation

Vienna, May 13 (AP).—Msgr. Franz Jachym, who last month refused to be consecrated Archbishop Coadjutor of the Roman Catholic Church in Austria, has been reappointed to that post by Pope Pius XII, church sources here announced today.

The informants said another ceremony of consecration will be held in "the very near future" in St. Stephens Church. It was before the altar of that church, just as Theodor Cardinal Innitzer was preparing to consecrate him a bishop, that Msgr. Jachym abruptly refused.

He told the Cardinal, whose assistant he is to be, he felt himself "unworthy" to be a bishop. Then he turned and left the church, leaving church dignitaries stunned.

Msgr. Jachym was not available for comment today. Church informants who announced his reappointment commented, however: "There is no doubt he will go through with the ceremony this time."

Shortly after the occurrence of April 23, they said, Msgr. Jachym wrote a report to the Pope.

"Since the Pope has reappointed him, Msgr. Jachym must now feel that his excuse for not accepting the post is no longer valid," they added.

Chinese Report Guerilla Raid On Mainland

Taipel, Formosa (Sunday), May 14 (AP).—A new commando-type raid on the Communist mainland 140 miles south of Shanghai was reported today in official Chinese Nationalist dispatches.

The accounts said Nationalist guerillas landed Friday at Shihpu and struck inland. No details were given, but the action apparently was intended to divert some of the Communists who are massing for an invasion of Chushan, Nationalist island 50 miles northeast of Shihpu.

Nationalist dispatches also said new naval and air attacks were made Friday on Chintang and Taohua, Communist-held islands in the Chushan group only three to seven miles from Chushan itself.

The air force reported it sank more than 40 Red small craft and killed more than 300 troops.

(The Communists confined their war news to a radio attack on the dropping of rice on the mainland by Nationalist airman.

(A Peiping broadcast heard in San Francisco by the Associated Press charged that on May 8 two Nationalist planes dropped 30 to 40 sacks of rice in Foochow. Then, it said, having lulled the populace, three planes next day dropped bombs and killed 70 persons.)

Vietnamese Aide Hinted As First Envoy to U. S.

Saigon, French Indo-China, May 13 (U.P.).—Nguyen Huu Tri, Governor of North Vietnam, soon will be named Vietnam's first Ambassador to the United States, informed sources predicted today.

These sources said his name figured prominently in a cabinet meeting yesterday. Nomination would be subject to approval of the President of the French Union, of which Vietnam is one of the associated states.

Czechs Told To Cut Staff

statement reviewed recent Czech political and propoganda attacks on the United States and said these were part of a pattern for all of Sovietized eastern Europe. It said they were aimed at isolating eastern Europe from the rest of the world.

Among incidents cited in the statement were Czech charges of American mistreatment of 58 person who escaped from Czechoslovakia to Germany in March, the enforced closing of the United States Information Offices at Prague and Bratislava in April, the ejection of the American press at Prague and the slash in diplomatic personnel ordered this month. The statement continued:

"In view of these many evidences that Czechoslovakia under the present government will not or cannot conduct itself in its relations with the United States and other democracies in a manner compatible either with the traditions and culture of Czechoslovakia, or with a decent regard for the conventions of the community of nations, this Government is examining the situation not only with respect to the present but also for the future."

In Prague, meanwhile, the Czech government let go another haymaker in the current fish-market practice of diplomacy. According to the Associated Press the Czechs gave immediate closedown orders to the British Cultural and Information Services. The Czechs accused the British of continuously violating a 1947 cultural agreement by spreading hostile propaganda.

French Steel Plan Hailed By Adenauer

Paris, May 13 (AP).—France's proposal to put her own coal and steel under a joint management with West Germany's has changed the political and economic picture in Europe radically—and evidently for the better.

West Germany's Chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, pledged in a political speech at Dortmund tonight that the Germans will cooperate "with all our strength and as fast as possible." He said French and German techncians will meet soon to discuss details of the proposal.

It has eased the disputes between France and West Germany over the Saar coal basin. Now they can join in asking that neither Britain nor the United States get in the way of an arrangement the sponsors regard as rich with promise.

For both West Germany and France, it offers mutual aid in solving unemployment and reconstruction problems.

Market Widening Seen

If the plan works as France hopes, both West Germany and France will be seeking a larger share of world markets, aided by lower prices. France hopes Britain and other nations will come into the program.

The French government feels it has made a businessman's approach to unification of Europe where the political approach had bogged down.

When Robert Schuman, French Foreign Minister, first made known the proposal at a news conference Tuesday there was a widespread assumption that it was at least 50 percent intended for political effect on the eve of the meeting of the Big Three Foreign Ministers in London. It has developed since that this probably was not so.

The proposal was not hatched in Schuman's foreign office, but 5 blocks away in the organization created after the war for "modernization and equipment of France." This organization is headed by Jean Monnet.

Seek to Avoid 'Cartel'

The men who framed it support Schuman strongly in his insistence that it is not just a new type of cartel, under which prices would be kept high and market territory apportioned secretly by a little cluster of industrialists. They are trying hard to prevent the name of cartel being even associated with it. Cartel is a bad word in America.

Under the proposed agreement, France and West Germany would cut out the special charges to foreign buyers. France would get cheaper coal, West Germany cheaper ore. It would allow both to lower the prices of steel.

Limit Asked On German Steel Output

By The Associated Press

Five Senators have appealed to Secretary of State Acheson to oppose increased German production and "any further independence" for the West German government at this time.

They said any moves to strengthen Germany might weaken Western unity and aid the Russians in "their attempts to absorb all of Germany within the Eastern bloc of nations."

The appeal was contained in a letter to Acheson in London, where the Secretary is attending the Western powers' Foreign Ministers' conference.

Senator Gillette (D., Iowa) released the letter yesterday. Other signers included Senators Hendrickson (R., N. J.), Ives, (R., N. Y.), Kilgore (D., W. Va.), and Lehman (D., Lib.-N. Y.)

The letter was dated May 9, before the recent developments involving Germany in the talks between Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Bevin and French Foreign Minister Schuman

The letter said chances of unifying the nations of Europe will fail "if once again their people begin to fear the resurgence of German and industrial and military might."

"Given the already existing surplus of steel above the market requirements this year in western Europe," the Senators said, "no increase in the present level of German steel production can be justified."

They referred to reports that Germany's present steel production of 11,200,000 tons annually may be increased to 12,500,000 tons or more this year to 14,500,000 tons by 1952.

Reds in Denmark Fail To Halt Arms Unloading

Copenhagen, May 13 (AP).—The 7808-ton American freighter Normacwave arrived today at Aarhus, Jutland Peninsula port, with the first shipment of American arms aid for Denmark.

About 50 Communists demonstrating with posters on the docks tried in vain to persuade dockworkers to strike. Unloading was completed without disturbance.

Democrats, GOP Satirized

Club chorus joined heartily in this sentiment, indicating agreement. They were all off to do the same thing next November.

Despite all the fun and laughter, the dinner closed on a serious international note when a club actor, impersonating Secretary of State Dean Acheson, sang:

"When you walk through a world torn by storm and strife,
You won't be afraid of the gale,
If you're strong to defend your own way of life,
You'll find friends whose support will not fail.
Walk on through the cold,
Walk on through the storm
Tho' the world is tossed and blown;
Walk on, walk on, with strength in your soul
And you'll never walk alone—
You'll never walk alone!"

Speakers for the evening were chosen by the Gridiron Club in an ironic vein. Nearly 550 diners, including club members and their distinguished guests, massed in the banquet hall of the Statler, heard Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia talk "for the Democrats," and Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon "for the Republicans." Both Senators wear the party labels, but their views are far from the organization line. In keeping with the Gridiron rule that "reporters are never present," remarks of the speakers remain off the record.

Entertainment skits found Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder equipped with a huge razor and a toy lawnmower, running a "taxorial parlor."

Another entertainment skit found James A. Farley in person as a guest receiving a bottle of French champagne and in turn presenting "a huge coke bottle" to the Ambassador of France, also a guest.

Thomas L. Stokes, columnist for the United Features Syndicate, was inaugurated as the 1950 President of the Gridiron Club. He delivered the classic "speech in the dark."

Music for the dinner was furnished throughout by the United States Marine Band Orchestra, directed by Maj. William F. Santelmann, leader of the Marine Band and musical director of the Gridiron Club.

Radford E. Mobley, assistant chief of the Washington Bureau of the Knight Newspapers, was initiated as a member of the club.

The entire membership of the Supreme Court was among the guests who enjoyed the evening of skits, striking at both domestic and foreign affairs.

The Ambassador of Norway, dean of the diplomatic corps in Washington, was present as well as the Ambassadors of France, Belgium, the Philippines, Mexico, and Colombia.

From Capitol Hill came two figures especially prominent in the news of the day. One was Senator Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin. The other was Representative George Smathers, winner of the heated race for the Democratic senatorial nomination in Florida.

The Republican skit on the rain-making machine found prominent party leaders dressed in gaudy summer-resorts sportswear, standing beside a Rube Goldberg apparatus out in the arid New Mexico desert.

On a secret mission, they had discovered that a machine could make rain by shooting dry ice into the clouds. They wanted to know why a similar man-made machine could not make Republican votes by shooting dry speeches into the air.

Senator Taft cautioned Senator Lodge "not to monkey with the machine" when the Massachusetts Senator got too close. Beating himself on the chest, Lodge said what the party needed was engineers—"young, vigorous, ready and willing—willing for any place on the ticket."

Senator Wherry hurried on the stage, insisting that he too was "vigorous, ready and willing," but adding that he was also very thirsty.

He broke into this song:

"Our party's faced a barren waste without a taste of water, Cool water;
We'll never rest, we'll try our best to win the quest for water; Cool, cool water—
So we may learn just how to earn the cool discerning voter, Cool, voter;
With might and main we'll try for rain, so we can gain the voter, Cool, cool, voter.
Hurry, Ives and Lodge; Kem and Jenner, do not dodge;
What you see is no mirage if we do not sabotage the voter;
This campaign year, we all must be
Where the voter's cool and free—
And we'll warm him up for G. O. P.!"

The Club member impersonating R. Douglas Stuart, new treasurer of the Republican National Committee, stepped forward to demand "a couple of inexpensive words with Chairman Gabrielson."

Stuart then sang this solo:

"They won't give us anything but love, Gaby;
Dough is what they say they've nothing of, Gaby—
Democrats are fat cats,
We are behind;
Yet I'll bet we could get
Victories that we have pined for—
Big shots once our party chest would fill, Gaby,
There was always money in the till, Gaby;
Now they'll only risk a dollar bill, Gaby,
They won't give us anything but love!"

General Eisenhower shied away when Senator Knowland mentioned the word "temptation" to Everett Dirksen.

"Don't use that word," the General protested. Then he sang:

"You won't let me alone, I've always known
You are Temptation!
You keep calling to me, for G. O. P.
You are Temptation!
There in my college, handing down knowledge,
That is the place to be,
Believe me;
I don't know
All of the tricks of politics,
You are Temptation and I'm NOT yours,—
At least not yet—
Please go away—but don't forget,
One thing I like, I'm always Ike To you, Temptation!"

Using the melody of "O Sole Mio," Governor Dewey put in his oar with:

"In 'forty-four and 'forty-eight
I held the tiller and kept you straight;
Don't rock the boat, Oh G.O.P.,
While of my future, this thought comes to me:
THERE'S NO TOMORROW, once you are through;
Now is forever—not 'fifty-two—
So thank you, but let me say:
If no tomorrow, THERE'S STILL TODAY!"

Senator Morse tried to "put the Party on the right course" with a new slogan which he sang to this popular tune:

"Sa-la-ga-doo-la means men-chic-ka boo-le-roo.
From the Socialist creed we will be freed by BIB-BI-DI-BOB-BI-DI-BOO!
Sa-la-ga-doo-la- men-chic-ka boo-la, BIB-BI-DI-BOB-BI-DI-BOO,
This is the issue to save G. O. P., BIB-BI-DI-BOB-BI-DI-BIB-BI-DI-BIB-BI-DI - BOB - BI - DI - BIB-DI-BOB-BI-DI-BOO!"

Representative Joe Martin reminded Representative Charlie Halleck that if the vote-making machine didn't work in 1950 "by 1952 it may be raining lilies." Both men called in William H. Mylander, new publicity director of the Republican Committee, to get his advice. Mylander, a member of the Gridiron Club, appeared in person. He requested Senator Brewster to give the Party a keyword. To the tune of "The Song of Love," Senator Brewster sang:

"This is your time of times,
May be now or never;
Bring out the magic rhymes,
This may be forever.
You need Congress in nineteen-fifty,
And the White House in 'fifty-two,
If from the Democrats you'd be free—
This is your time of times,
WATCH YOUR STEP, G. O. P.!"

The group finally turned on the vote-making machine. The stage was immediately enveloped in a snowstorm. Everybody ran helter skelter.

Happy Harry's Carnival, the Democratic skit, really turned into a night. After the hullabaloo died down a bit the chorus sang to the tune of "Powder Your Face With Sunshine:"

"Happy are we with Harry
Look at his great big smile
Keeping the voters happy
He wants to keep on living in his White House style
Whistle stop for campaigning
Traveling many a mile
The Nation's paying while Harry's playing

Vice President Barkley, impersonated by a club member, showed tremendous enthusiasm, and asked the shouting Democrats to step up and join him in a Happy Harry Carnival spirit.

First to rush forward was Oscar Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, who gave out strongly to the tune of "Best Things in Life Are Free:"

"Health is good for everyone
The best things in life are free.
And if I get my health job done
Perhaps I can be V P
From Vice President
You know Harry went
To brackets on high
If he—Can't I?
The Fair Deal means the world to me
The best things in life are free."

"There you are, folks," said Barkley, "what could be fairer than that? Happy Harry's Medicine Man has everything for man or beast—cures everything except bullet holes."

This prompted the "Kansas City Kid" to sing to the tune of "Everything's O. K. in Kansas City:"

"We got it figgered out in Kansas City,
From Pendergast we learned a thing or two,
Of diff'runt ways there is fer votin' double
As pistol-packin' Democrats can do.
We settle all the arguments with our forty-fives,
Never have to worry nor to chafe;
'Taint no trick at all to control the City Hall
If you know the combination to the safe.
Everything's up to date in Kansas City
We've gone about as far as we can go;
They never seem to dope it out, even the F. B. I.
How Democrats are takin' in all the dough.
Everything's going swell in Kansas City,
Republicans will never have a show;
We got a nifty system there whenever the people vote
A special way of countin', but it ain't the way you wrote;
We're careful to apologize before we cut your throat,
We've gone about as fur as we can go."

Vice President Barkley was proceeding to introduce other members of his cast when an insistent Western Union messenger made him accept a singing telegram. It developed the telegram came from President Truman. The Vice President sang it to the tune of "They Wouldn't Believe Me."

In the crowd Vice President Barkley identified a man in Confederate uniform, his arm in a sling and a bandage around his head. He immediately ordered J. Edgar Hoover to have the man arrested. The man was identified as Senator Harry Byrd.

Barkley ordered him searched. Byrd wrenched himself free, shouting: "You don't have to search me. I'll talk. If at first you don't secede, try try again."

Senator Byrd then sang this solo to the tune of "Save Your Confederate Money, Boys:"

"You can pass the word that Massa Harry Byrd
Sho-nuff ain't givin' in;
Save your Confederate money, boys,
The South shall rise again.
Dixiecrats unite, and carry on the fight
From Sumter to Cheyenne,
Save your Confederate money, boys,
The South shall rise again.
F. E. P. C.—no indeed!
No Fair Deal twists or turns
And if at first them Yanks succeed
I say let's try Jimmy Byrnes.
We'll forget the fate we had in Forty-Eight
And march on 'till we win;
Save your Confederate money, boys,
Save your Confederate money, boys,
The South shall rise again."

During the course of the skit on foreign affairs the Martians descended to earth in flying saucers but found things too tough for them down here. The act opened as Senator Tydings, about to board a stratoliner along with a group from the State Department, told a mechanic at the Washington Airport that he wanted to investigate the entire plane.

"O. K. Senator Tydings," said the mechanic, "but don't touch my files."

"Everywhere I go," said Tydings, "people tell me to stay away from the files."

Before the plane got under way, weird and whizzing objects descended from the air identified by Senator Tydings as flying saucers. Senator Jenner of Indiana said the saucers reminded him of the State Department's international policy. He inspired Representative Judd of Minnesota to sing this song to the tune of "Music, Music, Music":

"Understanding Acheson
Is a stunt that can't be done
Double talk is all I hear
It's just like flying saucers.
I'd give anything to see
Truman's foreign policy
Not revolve and disappear
Like saucers, flying saucers.
Saucers, I'm seeing saucers.
It's only Secretary Acheson
He's looking where he thinks he's gone.
The plan must be to vex and fret
And confuse the Sov-1-et
And to win the cold war yet
With Truman's flying saucers."

Amid the confusion Senator McCarthy arrived. He carried a slingshot, a machine gun, a revolver, a flit gun and a rifle. He wore a bullet-proof vest.

When the noise subsided he dropped all of his equipment except a little baby's cloak on a small coat-hanger. He stoutly insisted on holding to that, explaining: "I'll never let that go. That's my cloak of immunity."

During this skit Senator McCarthy used a famous Bert Williams song, as follows:

"Somebody lied,
Somebody lied, dear, dear;
Some say there is no evidence,
While others say it's clear.
Somebody lied, as plain as plain can be;
Somebody lied as sure's your born—
Somebody falsified to me!"

One of the non-musical acts was a play on the once-proposed investigation of Hollywood.

Truman Assails Trade Pact Foes

continue to defeat isolationism . . . This is the way to build a prosperous world. This is the way to achieve freedom and peace."

At Minot, N. Dak., Mr. Truman put in his first plug on this tour for his controversial national health insurance program. But he did not specifically demand congressional action this session. He simply said it was "necessary, just like broader social security, better housing and better schools."

"It is simply the common sense way to meet a serious problem, and I am going to continue to work for a broad national health program," he said.

'Don't Know Facts,' He Says

Mr. Truman said those who have attacked his health program probably do not understand it and "I think they just don't know the facts."

Mr. Truman said he was glad to see private health insurance moving forward, "but it is perfectly obvious that some way must be found to provide more complete protection and to pool insurance risks on a Nation-wide basis, if health insurance is to serve all our people, at a cost they can afford."

Victor Johnson, who has been "shadowing" this train as campaign director of the Senate GOP campaign committee, met the train at Minot with a statement.

Johnston called the trip "a medicine show attempting to sell fake nostrums by guile and deception."

Picking up from Indian tribesmen en route two war bonnets, a peace pipe and a tomahawk, and some advice about using them, Mr. Truman continued to stump every station stop.

His advice about war and peace came from grizzled old Chief Bill Buffalo Hide of the Blackfeet Indian tribe before his train pulled out of Havre, Mont., last night.

Pipe of Generations

Chief Buffalo Hide presented the President with the peace pipe, passed down through generations of his warlike family. He said he told Mr. Truman:

"You and Uncle Joe (Stalin) smoke that."

"Okay," he said the President replied.

Seven members of the same tribe, in full paint and feathers, presented Mr. Truman with a Blackfoot war bonnet.

Signs on even the cigar stores in Havre, however, read: "No Indians Allowed."

The President declined pleas from the crowd to "try it on." The late Calvin Coolidge, he may have recalled, was swallowed up in just such a headdress during a Black Hills outing.

At Glasgow, a delegation of Sioux Indians from the Fort Belknap reservation named Mr. Truman "Chief Bear Soldier." They presented him with a tomahawk and another war bonnet.

Mr. Truman said he and other members of his family in the early part of this century filed claims to homestead land in the old Rosebud Crow reservation 200 miles south of here.

He never got the land and was foredoomed to rise from Missouri farm boy to President.

Largest Earth-Filled Dam

Mr. Truman and his party rose early today and motored from Glasgow, Mont., to the Army Corps of Engineers Fort Peck Dam, largest earth-filled dam in the world, but dwarfed by the recently visited Grand Coulee, a concrete structure.

At Fort Peck, Mr. Truman gave out some more facts, including: in 13 years of operation, benefits from the dam's flood control features alone have totaled 50 million dollars. During the war it supplied enough water to float landing craft built at inland shipyards down the Mississippi River. Its ultimate total power output: 185,000 kilowatts, supplying North Dakota, Montana and South Dakota.

For Md. Governor

Gen. Markey Seeks GOP Nomination

Frederick, Md., May 13 (AP).—Brig. Gen. D. John Markey who came close to being elected United States Senator in 1946, announced today his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Gen. Markey

He said in a statement that his decision to enter the primary race followed a three-months survey I have discussed my candidacy with party leaders in every county and in Baltimore City."

Markey proved a strong GOP candidate in 1946 when he lost a closely contested election to Senator Herbert O'Conor.

The majority for the Democrat after a subsequent senatorial election investigation requested by was 2200, reduced to some 1600 Markey.

He is the first Republican to announce his candidacy formally. A lot of other prominent Republicans, however, have been mentioned in the same connection.

They include State Senator Roy Rascoe Davis of Montgomery County; Royden Blunt, Howard County industrialist; former Baltimore Mayor Theodore R. McKelKeldin; State Senator Harry Phoebus of Somerset County and others.

Markey, a Frederick County native, sought public office for the first time in 1946.

He saw active combat service in the first World War, and in the second organized and commanded Camp Pickett, Va.

Lane Opponent Backs Mahoney

Baltimore, May 13 (AP).—W. Lee Elgin, former commissioner of Motor Vehicles, has indorsed the candidacy of George P. Mahoney for the Democratic nomination for Governor, Mahoney's headquarters announced today.

Elgin, long a political opponent of Governor Lane, had been mentioned as a possible gubernatorial candidate, himself.

He combated successfully a attempt by Lane—a fellow Democrat—to drop him as motor vehicles commissioner in 1947, and served out his full term.

Women Voters In Virginia Fix Platform

Old Point Comfort, Va., May 13 (AP).—The Virginia League of Women Voters closed their annual State convention here today with the adoption of a program for concerted action during the 1950-51 year and approval of a two-plank platform.

Chosen for concerted action was the study and analysis of the State budget to promote understanding of Virginia's fiscal policy in relation to its education, health and welfare programs.

In addition, the league voted to seek repeal of voter poll taxes, installation of a modern system of permanent registration and improvement and simplification of other Virginia voting laws.

The two-point platform indorsed by the league consists of the improvement of public education by securing an adequate teaching force and mandatory jury service for women.

At its final session, the group formally recognized the Fredericksburg group as a provisional league to bring the organization's total strength to 10 units in the State, including three provisional leagues.

smoking hot, and with their colors nailed to the mast."

And Mrs. Edwards of Washington, D. C., elected today to succeed Mrs. Charles W. Tillett of North Carolina as vice chairman, said she hoped Democrats would remember why they lost in 1946 and won in 1948 and act accordingly.

Mr. Truman, she said, was reelected two years ago "because he campaigned fearlessly on the 1948 Democratic platform.

"He did no pussyfooting such as some people did in '46. And you remember we lost in '46 because of that pussyfooting."

GOP Hurls 6 More Questions At Truman as He Heads East

By The Associated Press

Republicans hurled six more critical questions at President Truman yesterday as he headed eastward from his western tour. For one thing, they asked whether he still regarded the charge of Communists in Government a red herring.

National Chairman Guy Gabrielson and Chairmen Brewster and Hall of the Senate and House GOP campaign committees put the queries after saying the 10 questions asked of the President as he began the trip have brought only "more promises—and name calling."

Most of the questions asked yesterday rephrased part of the original 10, but two of them were new, as follows:

"Does Mr. Truman still regard the issue of driving Communists from Government as a 'red herring?' "

"Does Mr. Truman agree that the record of the 80th Congress shows the country can only hope for a balanced budget if a Republican Congress is elected this fall?"

The three Republican leaders in a statement issued through the party's national committee said the President "has paved the Oregon Trail with promises. With them he tries to hide the record of performance."

They added:

"When he reaches Chicago, we hope he will stop trying to fool the voters. The once amusing fiction of a 'nonpolitical' junket has grown stale."

The other four questions put yesterday:

"Does Mr. Truman agree with the Democrat estimate that his socialism program would add 'at least 25 billion dollars' to the 43 billion dollars it now costs each year to run the Government?

"Why does Mr. Truman oppose the sensible amendment of the Taft-Hartley Act — which Republicans favor?

"Does Mr. Truman understand that the Brannan Plan would subject farmers to fines and jail sentences, and drive down the price of their crops in the market place?

"When will Mr. Truman even promise to lower the Federal taxes that now take at least one day's wages a week from the average working man?"

Crommelin Asks Retirement

Capt. John G. Crommelin, outspoken critic of Defense Department unification moves, announced yesterday that he has requested retirement from the Navy.

The request, he said, was a "required followup" to his decision to run for the United States Senate from Alabama. Crommelin entered the Senate race as an independent May 1 after the Navy placed him on enforced furlough.

A top naval air ace, he was furloughed after charging in a series of public addresses that the Defense Department was scuttling naval air power and showing undue favor to the Air Force.

"As a required followup to my official candidacy for the United States Senate from Alabama, I have submitted my official request for retirement from the United States Navy after almost 31 years of naval service including four years as a midshipman," Crommelin said in a statement.

"I have requested to be placed on the Navy's retired list as of June 1, 1950. This will give me five months in which to campaign actively before the November election.

"I am now on enforced furlough and denied the privilege of service in the armed forces. Retirement provides the means to serve my country best in these critical times," he said.

Penna. Primary Eyed For GOP Policy Clew

Philadelphia, May 13 (U.P.).—The biggest Republican Party squabble in Pennsylvania in 16 years, a mud-slinging feud involving the "Old Guard" and "Liberal" forces, will be decided Tuesday at the State primary elections. The outcome may help chart GOP national policy in 1952, a presidential election year.

Biggest plums at stake are the party's nominations for U. S. Senator, Governor and 33 Congressional seats against the Democrats next fall. Whether the Republicans in Pennsylvania will follow a more liberal line or return to reaction appeared the issue involved as the candidates wound up their campaigns over the weekend.

Heading one of the rival forces is Gov. James H. Duff, a self-styled progressive seeking the Senate nomination, who by State law cannot succeed himself. Squared against him is the faction of aging former U. S. Senator Joseph R. Grundy, founder of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, backing Representative John C. Kunkel, a millionaire industrialist, for the Senate nomination.

The 87-year-old Grundy, with an entire slate thrown against the Duff forces, favors Philadelphia banker Jay Cooke for the governorship. Cooke claims he is an independent candidate.

John S. Fine, a former State Superior Court judge, is Duff's running mate for the gubernatorial nomination.

Duff, time and again attacking "Grundyism" in his primary campaigning, was boomed by the Grundy machine from the State attorney generalship into the governor's chair in 1946. But in 1948, the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia split Grundy and Duff wide apart.

Duff at first backed United States Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan for the presidential nomination. But he was outmaneuvered when the Grundy faction threw in the strong Pennsylvania delegation for New York Governor Thomas E. Dewey, whom Duff strongly opposed. After Vandenberg declined to seek the nomination, Duff supported Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, but Dewey won out.

The Democrats, watching the intra-party sparring with joy, offered a solid front in the primaries, with only minor opposition to Philadelphia City Treasurer Richardson Dilworth for the gubernatorial nomination. United States Senator Francis Myers is unopposed for the party's Senate nomination.

[The Pennsylvania primary, seventh this year, is the first of two coming up this week. The other will be held Friday in Oregon, where Republican Senator Wayne L. Morse is running for nomination against two opponents.

[The major parties in Oregon also will name candidates for Governor, four house seats and other State offices.

[Morse's opponents are David I. Hoover, dairy farmer, and John McBride, former congressional committee clerk.

REWARD

If any salesman can convince me that he measures up to the following standard, he will reap a reward of $5000.00 each year in increased earnings.

If you are a positive thinking salesman with real ability who wants an opportunity to earn well up in the five-figure bracket; if you are afire with ambition and enthusiasm; if you really love to sell; if you believe in yourself; if you want to climb so high you can reach out and touch the stars; if you yearn for advancement and an opportunity to prove your worth by shouldering greater responsibility—if you want these things more than anything else and are willing to go after them with enthusiasm and determination, I have just such an opportunity for you.

I will give you an opportunity to make $5,000.00 more per year than the average salesman earns. I will provide you with a product of which you will be proud. Your product will have public acceptance. I will furnish you an abundance of actual bona fide appointments with people who have expressed an earnest desire to buy. Your entire time will be spent in actual selling. There will be no wasted effort or lost motion.

I will give you maximum aid and assistance, better selling equipment, and closer cooperation than you have ever believed possible. I will teach and demonstrate to you exactly how some of our salesmen close 85% or more of the leads furnished them.

You will become an associate in a sales organization whose sales have increased one hundred times as fast as the national average during the past five years and which is just beginning to grow. We are already the largest company of our kind in the world, but within the next year our plans call for the opening of new branches in eight more of the country's largest cities. If you want the managership of one of these branches with earnings as high as most corporation presidents, you can have the job. Just show us that you are the right kind of man and that you mean business and the job will be yours—much quicker than you might think. Every one of our present branch managers and sales managers was promoted to a managership in less than one year from the day he began with us as a salesman.

If these statements are true and I assure that such is the case, you can collect many times the $5,000.00 reward by grasping the opportunity that is now beckoning you.

If you own a car and are between the ages of 25 and 50, come in to see me Monday, May 15th, at 11:00 A. M. or 3:00 P. M. only, at the New Congressional Hotel, 300 New Jersey Avenue, S. E., and let's talk about your ambitions and ours. Please come in only at these hours. No phone calls, please.

Editors Get State Department Rebuttal

in Jessup's earlier testimony.

3. McCarthy told the editors the Afghanistan Government asked the United States to send it an economic development mission and Owen Lattimore was selected to head it. The implication was that the United States, and the State Department, selected Lattimore.

The facts were, Barrett noted, that the Afghanistan request went to the United Nations, not the United States, and that the U. N. selected Lattimore.

Two weeks before McCarthy's speech, the Library of Congress (from which McCarthy claimed he got the information for his charge) wrote that it never had any information to the effect that the United States was involved in the matter, but only the United Nations. The Library's letter was in reply to an inquiry by Senator Green (D., R. I.), challenging McCarthy after he made the charge at an earlier date.

George Wheeler Case

4. Talking of the State Department's Loyalty Board, McCarthy then denounced the "misnamed Loyalty Board" for clearing George Wheeler, a man who recently sought asylum in Czechoslovakia.

A State Department press release the week before McCarthy spoke, Barrett told the editors, made it clear that Wheeler's case had never been considered by any State Department loyalty or security board. A former employe of another agency, and then in Germany, Wheeler was put on State's payrolls for two months before he was transferred to the War Department, Barrett said.

Other "inaccuracies" that Barrett challenged included:

5. McCarthy denied he ever said he had in his hand the names of 205 known Communists in the State Department.

Barrett noted that the newspaper in the city where he made the statement, the Associated Press, and affidavits of two radio station officials who monitored the text as McCarthy delivered the now-famous remark, are evidence to the contrary.

"Bad Security Risks?"

6. McCarthy told the editors the 205 people were "named as bad security risks" and were "listed by the President's own security board and the forerunner of the present Loyalty Board as dangerous to the Government."

The facts, said Barrett, were that a screening committee filed a report listing 285 "tentative disapprovals in categories ranging all the way from automatic disapproval of aliens to disapprovals on the basis of derogatory information."

The report of the screening committee specifically stated, Barrett explained, that any disapproval was subject to being reversed "if further investigation resolves the investigation in favor of the employe."

Of those cases, all of people transferred into the State Department after the war, some 46 are still employed, and all have been cleared by the President's Loyalty Review Board on the basis of an FBI field investigation, Barrett said.

Secretaries' Letters Cited

7. To McCarthy's assertion that Lattimore was "the architect of our Far Eastern policy," Barrett presented the statements from the present Secretary of State and his three living predecessors that McCarthy's description was false.

8. The Wisconsin Republican told the editors that Lattimore was asked to submit a statement that was to be "a guide for Ambassador-at-Large Jessup insofar as Asiatic policy was concerned." McCarthy referred to this document as "Lattimore's instructions to Jessup."

Barrett said that a month before McCarthy's speech, the department fully explained in a press conference that Lattimore's memorandum was only one of 31 that Jessup received after he requested them from a distinguished group of private citizens. They were then used as background by a consultants' committee.

9. The report to the editors also took up McCarthy's charge that Lattimore wrote a fellow official in the Office of War Information in 1943 giving "an order . . . to get rid of all Chinese employes with OWI who were loyal to Chiang Kai-shek, and supplant them with Chinese loyal to the Communists."

OWI Letter Recalled

Barrett appended a copy of the letter, which says in part:

"In the circumstances (he was referring to the danger of leaks of information) we have to be extremely careful about our Chinese personnel. While we need to avoid recruiting any Chinese Communists, we must be careful not to be frightened out of hiring people who have loosely been accused of being Communists . .

"For our purposes, it is wise to recruit as many unaffiliated Chinese as we can, to pick people whose loyalty will be reasonably assured on the one hand by the salaries which we pay them and on the other hand by the fact that they do not receive salaries or subsidies from somewhere else."

Chavez-McCarthy Exchange

Meantime, at the Capitol, Senator Chavez (D., N. M.) declared yesterday that his bitter attack on former Communist Louis Budenz was strictly his own idea, with no prompting from the Truman Administration.

Replying to a contention by McCarthy that the New Mexico Democrat was duped by Administration spokesmen into "this outrageous attempt to smear Budenz," Chavez told reporters:

"Joe McCarthy need not feel sorry for me. I'll be here in the Senate a lot longer than he will be. Nobody dupes me. I do things on my own volition and I take the responsibility."

Chavez lit into Budenz in a Senate speech Friday. He said Budenz, onetime managing editor of the Communist Daily Worker, has been using the cross of the Roman Catholic Chuch "as a club" in the Senate inquiry.

Chavez, a Catholic himself, also discused in detail what he called Budenz' "sordid past."

Budenz, who renounced communism in 1945 and, as Chavez sneerinly put it, "went through the forms of conversion to Catholicism," made no immediate reply to Chavez.

Fordham President Defends Budenz

New York, May 13 (NYHT).—The Rev. Laurence J. McGinley, president of Fordham University, speaking as a Catholic priest, said today that Senator Chavez (D., N. M.), also a Catholic, had been guilty of a "vicious offense against Christian charity" in his attack on the Senate floor Friday against Louis Budenz.

Father McGinley said Budenz, former managing editor of the Communist Daily Worker, and now an assistant professor of economics at Fordham, "has deserved and continues to enjoy the full confidence of the University."

Vincent Leaves Reply To State Department

U. S. Diplomat John Carter Vincent, who is reported to be "Case No. 2" in Senator McCarthy's charges of widespread influence in Government, said yesterday the State Department would make a statement on the matter when warranted.

Vincent, who is Minister to Switzerland, made that reply in a cable to the Associated Press, which had sent a message to Bern asking him for comment.

McCarthy has said that "Case No. 2" was that of a "foreign agent" who slipped secret Government documents to Russia. He did not put Vincent's name on the public record but it has been widely known in the State Department and other Government circles that it was to Vincent he referred.

And it was of Vincent that Deputy Undersecretary of State John E. Peurifoy was speaking last week when he told newsmen the State Department has no evidence which would "even remotely substantiate" McCarthy's charge against the veteran diplomat.

Last Thursday reporter Alfred Friendly of The Wasington Post wrote of McCarthy's Case No. 2:

"The description—although not the accusations — McCarthy has given of the man could apply to John Carter Vincent, American Minister to Switzerland."

The Associated Press then cabled Vincent in Bern, Switzerland, telling him of The Washington Post story and asking for comment.

Vincent replied that the State Department "will make statement when warranted."

Department officials declined to comment yesterday, but let it be known the department has complete confidence in Vincent.

Southeast Asia Gets Aid Pledge

western powers is needed, the communique added, "to underpin their economics in such a manner as to permit the full maintenance of their social and material standards, as well as the adequate development of the necessary defense measures.

"The Ministers are confident that the peoples of the free world, who command by far the greater part of the industrial and technical resources of mankind, can achieve both of these aims."

To contend with the threat of communism to Southeast Asia, the Ministers decided on three policies:

1. Coordination of efforts to halt arms smuggling to such guerilla leaders as Ho Chi-Minh in Indochina, Chinese terrorist leaders in Malaya and rebel groups in Burma.

2. Take every opportunity to expose the aims of "Communist imperialism" that seeks to advance its aims by appealing to nationalism of the people.

3. Encourage governments in the area to collaborate on new measures of economic development to raise the general standard of living.

The British expressed confidence they can save Malaya and its rich rubber and tin resources from communism, it was reported.

When the Southeast Asia discussons turned to Indonesia, the ministers called in Dutch Foreign Minister Striker.

The Ministers, who yesterday announced their determinaton to hold tightly to Berlin and try to weld West Germany firmly into the Western family of nations, promised a new declaration on the general subject of Germany. It will be published Sunday and is believed to involve several decisions.

The declaration was being communicated to the West German government at Bonn tonight.

A Western propaganda drive, with more force and direction, may have been foreshadowed by the communique.

It declared a "campaign of misrepresentation" is being waged by the "only militaristic and aggressive power in the world." And added:

"Faith in freedom should not be taken for granted, but should be built into a dynamic force, and steps should be taken to increase public understanding of the exact nature, methods and dangers of the threat to its existence."

It was understood the Ministers had before them an estimate that Western technical and industrial strength is five to seven times as great as that of Russia and her satellites.

Communist strength along these lines, as well as militarily, is expanding, however. United States State and Defense Department estimates recently said Russia might be in a position in four yeas to overwhelm the United States militarily.

The Ministers barely mentioned China in their discussions, but intend to have a talk about it before the U.N. meeting in September. The Middle East was touched upon in the talks, but the Ministers decided no urgent action was needed there.

HOW OLD IS YOUR CHILD?

Of all the material gifts within the province of a parent to give, none can afford a child such deep satisfactions and life-long enjoyment as education in reading and education in music. The law requires the first; the second is an obligation parents must themselves assume.

It is an established fact that unless a child begins music lessons before the age of 15, the chances are that he will forever be denied the rich and rewarding experience of musical creation. Thus every parent of a child of 7 or over is faced with a decision that should be neither ignored nor postponed.

Will your child lead a full life . . . a life in which music will play its rewarding role? You, and you alone, hold the answer.

Music is more than just our business. Music is, in truth, our life at Campbell's. We will be happy to advise you, from our vast collective store of musical experience, about your child's musical education; to recommend teachers of ability and integrity and, should you so desire, to show you how you can start, now, to acquire the fine musical instrument your child will cherish as long as he lives!

It will be a privilege to serve you, and the obligation will be on our part entirely.

Lewis Is 'Invited' To Labor Hearing

By The Associated Press

Stripped of his subpena powers, Representative Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.) yesterday "invited" John L. Lewis to testify about union activities before a House Labor subcommittee Tuesday.

But there was a strong possibility that by Tuesday Jacobs will have no subcommittee, leaving Lewis with no place to testify even if he wants to.

Jacobs announced the "invitation" procedure in letters to colleagues on the Labor Committee—including Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.)—and to Lewis himself.

The Indiana Congressman heads a subcommittee studying "union democracy." He previously had announced his intention to subpena Lewis, along with Lloyd Sidener, former head of a United Mine Workers local at Canton, Ill., and Bernard Beasley, an international UMW officer.

Sidener has accused Lewis of sending "secret signals" to UMW members during the recent coal strike, telling them to ignore the public back-to-work directive he issued at the order of a Federal court.

Lesinski upset Jacob's plan to subpena the three witnesses by revoking the subpena powers of subcommittee chairmen.

"Plain political cowardice," was Jacob's description of the chairman's action.

While Lesinski was not available for comment—his office said he had gone to Detroit for the weekend — committee members speculated that he might counter Jacobs' latest move by abolishing the subcommittee. He did it once before, but the committee overruled him.

In a letter to Lesinski, the Indianan said he has "concluded that I should endeavor to discharge my responsibility despite revocation of the subpena order from the subcommittee of which I am chairman."

He informed Lesinski he would go ahead with the Tuesday night hearing "unless otherwise ordered by the full committee."

Jacobs advised Lewis that the subcommittee will question Sidener Tuesday night and would have subpenaed Lewis and other witnesses and records if it had authority.

Unions Ruled Due Specific Wage Details

In another of its recent series of decisions aimed at enhancing collective bargaining, the National Labor Relations Board yesterday ruled that employers must give their unions specific information on the wages of employes.

During the past several weeks, the board has held that employers must furnish unions with information on merit raises, and with wage data for the year preceding negotiations.

The philosophy behind all three decisions is the same: to help the union in drawing up more reasonable and intelligent demands, and to speed up the collective bargaining processes as established under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Decision Bites Deepest

Yesterday's decision bit the deepest yet into management's traditional stand that wage information is a private matter between the company and the individual employe, and that the union is not entitled to have such information.

The ruling, by unanimous decision of a three-member panel—Chairman Paul M. Herzog, John M. Houston and Abe Murdock—involved the B. F. Goodrich Co. of Akron and Local No. 5, United Rubber Workers (CIO), representing 20,000 of the Goodrich employes.

The company had supplied the union, during contract negotiations, with an alphabetical list of employes and a separate list of pay scales in the various departments, but declined to match the two lists in such a way that the union could tell what individual employes were actually being paid.

Holds Company Fails in Duty

The board held that the Goodrich Co. had failed to fulfill the duty imposed by the law to furnish this information "in a manner not so burdensome or time-consuming as to impede the process of bargaining."

The panel held that the union needed the specific information to bargain effectively for the employes it represented, and to determine whether or not the wage provisions of the current contract were being administered properly by the company.

The company's contention that the union could readily identify its own members on the wage-rate listing by the "peculiar circumstances and earmarks of each member" was rejected by the NLRB panel. The company also suggested the union interrogate nonunion members to get the information it needed. This approach, the NLRB ruled, would merely serve to kill time and slow down contract negotiations.

Rail Firemen Extend Strike

firemen were reported to be tightening their walkout on the Pennsy, which has been struck west of Harrisburg. There were some reports that union members were setting up picket lines so as to affect Pennsy's eastern and southern operations, because the railroad is running some freight trains over its struck rails.

Another report had the union clamping down on the Southern System, which in turn claims its operations are well over 30 persent of normal. Richmond division of Southern announced yesterday that passenger and freight traffic was back to normal on its lines. There appeared to be doubt as to the number of firemen actually called out on Southern by the brotherhood.

At Knoxville, Tenn., the Southern Railway obtained a temporary injunction restraining pickets of two major rail brotherhoods and prohibiting acts of violence by members. The court action came a few hours after arrest of three switchmen—members of a rail union not on strike—on charges of shooting into two locomotives and beating up an engineer in the Southern yards. Police said the three men admitted the violence.

Boston & Albany Railroad yesterday laid off 850 employes as a result of the firemen's strike on the parent New York Central west of Buffalo. Some 1400 employes of General Motors at Framingham, Mass., were also furloughed for lack of supply delivery.

Altogether, around 200 thousand workers, including 130 thousand rail employes, are estimated to be idled by the firemen's strike. The unemployment figures will mount considerably if the strike continues into this week. General Electric wired the White House yesterday that its plants "very shortly" will be paralyzed for lack of materials and will be forced to make heavy layoffs in personnel.

President Truman, on a "nonpolitical" tour, and Dr. John Steelman, his labor adviser at the White House, were both in touch with the strike situation. No White House action is expected for the present. The union deliberately has only struck five railroads, although its demand for the second diesel firemen is aimed at the entire industry, in order to avert drastic Government action.

Telegraph Operators Push Strike

AFL commercial telegraphers, on strike against the United Press for higher pay, yesterday extended their picket lines here.

The 21 wire service employes have been picketing both entrances of the National Press Building, 14th and F sts. nw., since the strike began May 1. The local UP bureau is located in that building.

Yesterday, the strikers threw a temporary picket line in front of the Trans-Lux Building, 14th st. and New York ave. nw. The pickets' signs reads: "On Strike Against United Press and Washington City News Service (a local UP affiliate). UP-WCNS equipment on premises of WRC."

A local union spokesmen said the strikers planned to place temporary picket lines around other users of United Press news ticker machines.

Around 200 telegraphers and maintenance men walked out two weeks ago in a demand for a $6.50-a-week pay increase. UP offered $2.21. The union says its men make $90 a week; UP says the telegraphers average $107.80 a week.

Indonesia Orders Troops to Quell Amboina Revolt

Jakarta, Indonesia, May 13 (U.P.) The government of Indonesia will take military action against the self-proclaimed South Moluccan Republic of Amboina, a defense ministry spokesman said today.

The spokesman said peaceful efforts to settle the revolt have failed. Colonel Kawilarang, military commander in East Indonesia, will lead operations against Amboina.

Natives of Amboina Island proclaimed a "South Moluccan Republic" on April 26 with no ties with the United States of Indonesia. Government sources said the revolt was "of local character only."

an extravagant collection of star performers whose names are being held for another day. But the production shapes up as the equal of the smash-hit Arthur Godfrey "Homecoming" show last year.

One special feature of the show will be a "Parade of Champions," presenting sports greats from every field, all of whom will also be playing in the two-day golf tournament.

These include Frank Leahy and Earl Blaik, famed football coaches for Notre Dame and Army, and players Charlie Justice of North Carolina, Tommy Thompson of the Philadelphia Eagles and Harry Gilmer of the Washington Redskins.

Tennis Star Pauline Betz Addie, former Wimbledon women's queen; Babe Didrikson Zaharias, finest woman athlete in history; Marlene Bauer, voted the outstanding girl athlete of 1949; Jack Dampsey and Gene Tunney, former world's heavyweight boxing champions.

From the basketball courts will be George Mikan, 6-foot 10-inch star of the Minneapolis Lakers, known as "Mr. Basketball," and Don Otten, 7-foot Washington Caps center. A little closer to the ground, such baseball greats as Commissioner "Happy" Chandler, Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Nats, and two of the best left-handed pitchers of all time, Carl Hubbell and Bob Groves. (And shouldn't we mention Leslie Townes Hope, himself, whose Cleveland Indians are in there trying?)

Golfers include Ben Hogan, who probably is No. 1 golfer in the world today; Gene Sarazen, Henry Picard, Jimmy Thompson and Chick Evans.

The Hope show will be put together by Carter Barron, Eastern division manager for Loew's Theaters, who doesn't know how to say "no" to a benefit, and Allan Zee, producer for Loew's Capitol in New York. (Zee writes scores in his head on the plane and plots dance routines between cloud banks, it's said.)

Both Barron and Zee are experienced at pulling giant shows together, having officiated at the shaping up of the President's Inaugural Gala, the Arthur Godfrey Homecoming Show, and the Cherry Blossom Festival. They are currently working out the theatrical ramifications of the Sesquicentennial of which Barron is executive vice chairman.

Tickets for the Hope show, which benefits charities engaged in fighting juvenile delinquency, will go on sale Wednesday in the lobby of The Washington Post, at the Fairway Sports Shop, 1328 G st. nw., and the Champion Sports Shop at 816 13th st. nw., where tickets for the National Celebrities Golf Tournament are also on sale. Tickets for the Hope (and more) show, will sell for $1 to $5.

Airline Strike Is Called Off

dle East flights originate in New York, those to Latin America in Miami and Brownsville, and flights to the Far East in San Francisco. Alaskan flights operate out of Seattle.

The strike stemmed from futile efforts to sign a new contract to replace one that expired last October 1.

[Only one of Pan American's 60 Washington employes was directly involved in the strike, and he was out of town on a weekend leave.

[The lone TWU member, according to a company spokesman, is Robert McCormack of 5112 7th rd. South, Arlington, maintenance man at Pan-Am's emergency station at the Washington airport. Most of the company's personnel here are attached to the executive and sales offices.

[Pan American has no operation station here, but lands its clippers at the local airport when the weather won't permit the airliners to land in New York.]

White House Reported Preparing Alternatives To House Job Cut Bill

Administration forces are preparing a counterattack to the Taber-Thomas and Jensen riders, which threaten to wipe out more than 200,000 Federal jobs.

As matters now shape up, the Administration will:

1. Propose a compromise to the Senate on the Taber-Thomas rider that would force personnel cuts of 2 percent in the Defense agencies, and 10 percent in all other agencies except hospital employes of VA and Public Health.

2. Make an all-out fight in the Senate against the Jensen rider to limit most agencies to the filling of only 1 of every 10 jobs vacated.

Administration strategists are known to be rallying around a plan to have the Congress substitute Taber-Thomas for a proposal to give the Budget Bureau the authority to make cuts in agency budgets on a flexible basis.

Under it, the Budget Bureau could withhold, for example, 10 percent of the funds of one agency, and it could permit another agency to spend its full budget, depending on the circumstances. Such a plan, it is pointed out, could provide for any unforeseen emergency. Furthermore, the Budget Bureau would make quarterly reports to the Congress on the money saved under the proposal.

Would Save as Much

In fact, some people argue that this plan would save as much money as the estimated 600 million dollars under Taber-Thomas, and they are certain it would be a more equitable way of making a saving. The efficient agencies are hurt along with the inefficient under Taber-Thomas.

The plan being discussed is similar to the amendment offered in the House by Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee, and supported by Administration forces there without success.

The Cannon amendment would have directed the Budget Bureau to withhold a minimum of 5 percent of the administrative funds for all agencies, but the budget director would be given power to release frozen funds by certifying they were essential to Government services.

Taber-Thomas also applies specific cuts to rents, travel, equipment, supplies, contracts, printing, communications, and so forth. If any cuts are to be made in these and any other items, the Administration would rather have the Budget Bureau made responsible for them.

There has been no suggestion of a compromise to the turnover amendment by Representative Jensen (R)., Iowa.) Top Federal officials simply say that essential Federal services such as the Post-office Department, Internal Revenue, VA's nonmedical functions and the Defense agencies, to name a few, couldn't operate under the rider. They say it is impractical to even attempt to forbid agencies from filling 9 of 10 jobs vacated.

The largest turnover among Federal workers, responsible officials say, is in the custodial, maintenance and helper crews—turnover that frequently runs up to 100 percent a year.

If the amendment is made law, they say, it wouldn't be long before essential Government services are slowed down because of the lack of a few low-paid elevator operators, telephone girls, charwomen, and the like. In Government shops and factories, the skilled help would have to be assigned to helper jobs, and everywhere work wouldn't be done because vacated jobs couldn't be filled.

Agencies Against Firing

On the other hand, all Federal agencies would rather absorb any cut by employe turnover rather than the outright firing of employes that would be necessary under Taber-Thomas.

Administration forces also object to the rider in the House bill to force employes to take annual leave as they earn it this year or else lose it. They indorse the principle of the rider to have employes take vacations instead of carrying over large chunks of leave from one year to another, but they believe the leave issue, too, should be handled in a flexible manner.

For example, the Census Bureau has a tremendous job on its hands of analyzing the results of its recent general census. Many of its regular employes here aren't allowed to take annual leave; in fact, leave for them will be sharply curtailed for the remainder of this year.

This and many other special cases is why the White House will soon issue a directive to "police" annual and sick leave—to prevent annual leave from being accumulated generally in large doses, but to make provision for special cases like Census employes.

Meantime, the Budget Bureau staff is working this weekend on an analysis of the House-approved 29-billion-dollar general budget and just what effect its provisions would have on Government operations.

A copy of its findings will be sent immediately to the President, others to congressional leaders. Budget officials will be summoned before the Senate Appropriations Committee, perhaps late this week, for an expression of their views on the House budget.

What changes the Senate will make in the budget is anyone's guess at this point. In the first place, the bill won't be before the Senate for debate for another month.

Bodies of Four Lost Bolling Airmen Found

The Potomac yesterday yielded the bodies of three Bolling Air Base corporals who drowned late last Sunday when their frail, home-made skiff capsized.

The body of the fourth corporal in the boating party, Corpl. Edward J. Barry, 20, of Waltham, Mass., was found Friday.

The three airmen were identified by Bolling as Corpls. James D. McKee, 18, of Columbus, Ga.; James O. Ramsey, 21, of Gaffney, S. C., and James L. Triplett, 22, of Elkins, W. Va. They and Barry had been assigned to the 1100th Casual and Service Squadron.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, said he would issue certificates of accidental death. Autopsies have not been completed, he said.

Dragging operations had been conducted all week by Bolling crews, harbor police and divers from the Navy Diving School.

The three bodies came to the surface of the river within a few hours yesterday morning, two of them near the Bolling crash dock. The fourth was found near the Bellevue Dock, where Corporal Barry's body was found Friday.

The men built the skiff in a squadron hobby shop and launched it last Sunday. They were last seen about 9 p. m. Sunday.

patrol" while the general accident death rate increased 75 percent.

Scores of brilliantly bedecked bands, ingenious floats and high stepping drill units made up a lively parade and a long one—3 hours and 18 minutes.

Georgia alone, to give an idea of the size of the fourteenth annual spectacle, sponsored by the American Automobile Association, sent 2420 children and reportedly would have had 1000 more but for the rail strike.

The Mall area looked like a gargantuan bus yard.

As someone remarked, it was Kid Weekend in Washington.

From tots to teen-agers, the youngsters from 21 States bore signs like "On Whose List Will Your Name Appear: Saint Peter's Up There or the Census Taker's Down Here?", "The Extinct Don't Think, Do You?", "Careless Eyes See Paradise," and "We Gopher Safety, You Otter Too."

Worthy Homage

Children dressed as Indians whooped and hollered obliquely across Constitution ave. before a sign: "We Are on the Warpath Against Accidents."

Others on roller skates swung by before a sign: "Life's Great, We're Careful on Skates."

It was worthy homage to the lads and lasses who give up part of their playtime to keep others alive. As one sign said, "Whether There Is Rain Snow or Sleet, the Patrol Boy Is Always on His Beat."

The representatives of the Nation's 483,884 school patrol members were paced down the broad avenue by the United States Army Band and a Marine color guard bearing aloft the flags of the 48 States.

Besides Barkley, the reviewing stand included Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, Army Secretary Frank Pace, jr., Lou T. Holland, Kansas City, president of the American Automobile Association; Gen. Jacob L. Devers, managing director of the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety; Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning and Board of Education President Melvin C. Sharpe.

Outstanding area first-prize winners included:

St. Gabriel's School, Washington, best float—of a boat with the slogan "Let's Pull for Safety."

Barcroft School, Arlington, first in "most unusual feature"—"Flying Saucer float pulled by "space travelers" with Slogan "Flying Saucers? Could be, Use Caution, Live and See!"

Landover Hill, Prince Georges County, Md., best slogan—"Be Careful—Not Dareful."

Stuart Junior High of Washington won three prizes, a second in "most unusual feature," a tie for second in floats and a third in the slogan contest. St. Gabriel's drill team got a second-place tie to give that school two prizes.

The Montgomery County junior high school band was not included in the band competition because of a technicality, AAA officials announced.

Parade competition winners included:

Drill Teams: Class I senior high boys, First, Pottstown, Pa., Junior High School; second, colored public schools, Jacksonville, Fla.; third, Pottstown, Pa., Senior High School.

Class II, elementary boys: First, Pottstown, Pa., elementary school; second (tie), St. Gabriel's School of Washington and Lansdale Elementary School, Lansdale, Pa.; third, Brooklyn Park (Md.) School.

Class III, Girls—First, Audubon, N. J., public school; second, Pottstown, Pa., senior high school; third, Schwenksville, Pa., consolidated school.

Novice Class—First, Audubon, N. J., public school; seecond, Arbutus school, Baltimore County, Md.; third, Bruce elementary School, Washington.

However, Dr. William R. Moses, attending physician, said he had noticed a "very slight improvement" in her condition by last night, more than 24 hours after an operation performed to try to repair five perforations of Brenda's abdomen.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Wood, were still unable to explain how their boy, Richard, got the .22 caliber rifle from a closet shelf in one room and the shells from a closet in another room, and loaded the rifle.

Mother's Day Ceremonies Listed Today

Dworshak to Speak At Arlington Service; 10,000 to Attend Catholic U. Rites

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

America's mothers, who have the place of honor every day in the families of the Nation, will be specially honored today.

Mother's Day will be observed in the hearts of sons and daughters, young and old, with small tokens of gratitude and affection in the home, with religious observances in the churches and in formal programs dedicated to the theme of motherhood.

Among the formal programs here, the annual ceremony of the American War Mothers will be held at 1:45 p. m. at the amphitheater of Arlington Cemetery.

Services at Catholic University Stadium will pay homage to the Holy Mother of Jesus, in observance of both Mother's Day and World Sodality Day.

Principal Speaker

Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Ida.) will be the principal speaker at the American War Mothers program. Greetings will be given by Murray Poling, chief of the international technical corporation section, Department of Commerce.

Honorary medals for the armed services will be presented to Admiral Foster P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, and General Clifton B. Cates, commandant of the Marine Corps.

Miss Betty Jo Booker, student at Washington-Lee High School in Arlington, will represent the youth of the country and will sing several selections. Arthur Butler of Sun Valley, Idaho, war entertainer who was taken prisoner by the Japanese, also will sing.

A carillon recital by Professor Arthur L. Bigelow, bell master of Princeton University, will open the program. George Dalby, national aide de camp of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will advance the colors. Charles K. Dunn, commander of the D. C. Department, American Legion, will be master of ceremonies. The Army Band will play.

At the Catholic University services, prayers for world peace and for the American people will be said by 10,000 members of the Catholic archdiocese.

Thousands in Procession

The ceremonies will open with a procession of several thousand priests, sisters and lay persons, with every religious order in the archdiocese represented, delegations from most of the parishes, and students from the Catholic high schools.

Miss Mary C. McCarthy, prefect of the Sodality of Our Lady at Immaculata High School, will act as May Queen. A living rosary will be formed by students of the Georgetown University Medical Center in an Act of Consecration.

The sermon will be preached by the Right Rev. Msgr. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthews Cathedral. The observance will be directed by the Rev. Charles W. Nelson, archdiocesan spiritual director of the Sodality Union.

"Mother of the Year"

In a third Mother's Day program, Mrs. Rebecca Burgess Bullock, wife of the Rev. George O. Bullock, pastor of the Third Baptist Church, will receive the 1950 citation as "Mother of the Year" for the Washington area, given by the American Mothers Committee.

The presentation will be made by Mrs. Anna Arnold Hedgeman, assistant to the administrator of the Federal Security Agency, during the 11 a. m. service at the Third Baptist Church, 5th and Q sts. nw.

Reserve Recruiting 650 Enlisted Men

On Father's Advice

Boy Gives Up To Police in Theft of Car

A father's telephoned advice to his son put the youth into a cell here yesterday when the boy carried out instructions to call police and tell them he was driving a stolen car.

The boy was booked as Randall Douglas Whitaker, 18, of Sayville, N. Y., a freshman at the University of Maryland.

Hyattsville police said he phoned them he had been involved in a minor accident with another car. The boy told police he had telephoned his father and told him of the circumstances and the father advised he call the authorities.

Hyattsville police advised detectives from the District, who later charged the boy with grand larceny. They said the car was stolen January 19 on 8th st., between G and H sts. nw., and is the property of Mrs. Isabel Johnson, 208 8th st. sw. District police said Whitaker told them he obtained license plates from an old car he owns in New York and put them on the stolen car.

Washington police said they talked by telephone with his father yesterday, but did not disclose the conversation. Pending possible arrival of his father, the boy was held for appearance Monday in Municipal Court. He told police he is attending the college of business and public administration at the University of Maryland and living in a university dormitory.

"Army Enlisted Reserve Corps Day" will be celebrated by the Military District of Washington Friday to emphasize the role of the Organized Reserve Corps in national defense.

An ERC recruiting point will be open at 2131 C st. nw. from 8:30 a. m. until 4:30 p. m. between May 15 and 20. The office will be closed at noon Saturday.

650 Vacancies Exist

There are about 650 vacancies for enlisted men in various Army reserve units in the MDW, according to Col. John F. Davis, Cav., senior Army instructor, Organized Reserve Corps, for the MDW.

The Enlisted Reserve Corps wants physically qualified men between the ages of 17 and 34 who are high school graduates or the equivalent for assignment to local reserve units in the Transportation Corps, Armored Cavalry, Engineers, Adjutant General's Department, Medical Department, and Military Government. Enlistments also will be accepted, Colonel Davis added, of physically and mentally qualified men up to age 45 who possess special skills required.

Most units of the Organized Reserve Corps, to which ERC members are assigned, meet for a two-hour drill twice a month. All qualified units are on a pay status. On a basis of two years' service, pay for various grades is $6.62 for a master sergeant for each drill; $5.64 for a sergeant first class; $4.90 for a sergeant; $4.16 for a corporal; $3.43 for a private first class, and $3 for a private. A recruit receives $2.92 for each drill.

"Everybody's Business"

Colonel Davis emphasized that "national defense is everybody's business," and the purpose of the Army reserve is to furnish personnel trained and equipped in peacetime and effectively organized for rapid mobilization, expansion, and deployment in the event of a national emergency.

Membership in ERC, he pointed out, has several major advantages. They include fulfillment of a patriotic obligation, substantial retirement benefits, payable at age 60 after 20 years' service; educational opportunities, and promotion in rapid succession for those taking an active interest and who are qualified.

Underpass Dedication Set Tuesday

Connecticut ave., near Duport Circle is getting all dolled up to dedicate its new underpass Tuesday.

Horace J. Meyers, president of the Connecticut Avenue Association, Inc., said shop windows, like the streets, will be decorated with flags and gold lights—gold, to denote 50 years of progress on the avenue.

The District has already painted in gold the globes of 79 street lights near the circle. Flags will be put up on lamp posts Monday, according to Walter E. Kern, District electrical engineer.

The $4,750,000 underpass will be dedicated at noon Tuesday with Vice President Alben W. Barkley officiating.

Instead of cutting a ribbon (vehicles have been using the underpass since May 5), Barkley will climax the ceremony at the south side of the circle by releasing 100 homing pigeons. Both Meyers and District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young are scheduled to speak. Col. E. Goring Bliss, president of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association, will be master of ceremonies.

Tuesday evening at 8:15 p. m. the speakers stand will be used for a folk dancing exhibition sponsored by the Connecticut Avenue Association.

About 800 volunteers, some of whom came from Omaha, Nebr., and Chicago, showed up for the Alexandria conclave.

Yesterday's big parade was followed by a first aid competition at the George Washington High School, where top honors were won by the all-girl Bucks County, Pa., women's rescue unit, led by acting captain, Mrs. Reba Goenig.

Other prizes, presented at a dance in the National Airport's Hangar Room last night, were:

District Ties For Traffic Progress Prize

Washington tied for first place with Cleveland for outstanding traffic engineering during 1949, the Institute of Traffic Engineers at New Haven, Conn, has announced.

The institute, located at Yale University, put Washington and Cleveland at the head of the 750,000 to 1,000,000 population cities and selected Arlington County, Va., in the 100,000 to 200,000 population bracket. Virginia won first place in the Southern region competition.

The awards, in the form of plaques, were based on progress in control devices, surveys and studies, lighting, intersection design, administration and planning.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp said the award is the third to the city in the seven phases of the National Traffic Safety Contest. The previous awards were in enforcement and traffic safety education.

In 1948, the city took the grand award in the national safety competition for top places in all seven phases. The 1949 top winner has not yet been announced.

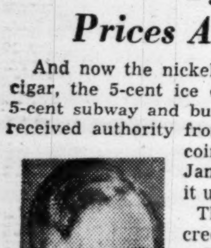
Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

Prices Are Creeping Up Again

And now the nickel telephone call is going the way of the 5-cent cigar, the 5-cent ice cream soda, the 5-cent glass of beer, and the 5-cent subway and bus fare. The New York Telephone Co. has just received authority from the Public Service Commission to raise the coin-box price of a local call to 10 cents, effective January 1. Obviously the nickel isn't quite what it used to be, nor the dollar either.



Livingston

That's just another way of saying that prices are creeping up again. The rise in telephone rates is a reflection of higher costs of raw materials and labor. The telephone company uses vast quantities of copper, steel, rubber, plastics, cotton, lumber, stationery—nearly anything you can think of, including, of course, man-hours.

Unless you're a regular and careful reader of the financial pages, the turnaround in prices may have escaped you. It hasn't filtered through to any great extent to retail markets. The cost-of-living index, at 167, is just about at the lowest level in two years. The advances have been primarily at wholesale and they've been slow and steady rather than spectacular—nothing like the hi-jinks in coffee several months ago.

Wheat, Steel Scrap, Rubber

The most significant, recent development has been in wheat. Poor weather has cut down the expected yield from winter wheat to 690 million bushels, which would compare with last year's 900 million bushels. Spring planting has been delayed, and the total wheat crop for the year may fall below estimated U. S. requirements of about a billion bushels—500 million for human consumption, 90 million for seed, 110 million for livestock, and 300 million for export. Fortunately, the carryover of 425 million bushels is about a third more than normal.

The wheat price is now around $2.30 a bushel in Kansas City, up 23 percent from the low of June 28, 1949. The advance is in keeping with most commodities except textiles, which haven't got anywhere. The market is still soft because of poor apparel sales. The nonferrous metals—copper, lead, zinc—are in great demand. Steel scrap just bounced up $2 in Pittsburgh, and some scrap dealers have been a bit panicky about getting supplies.

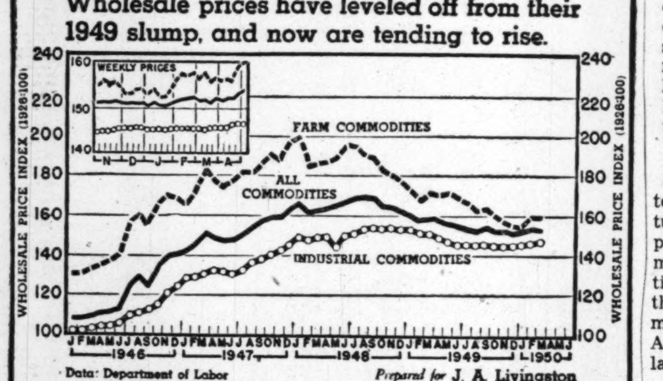
Natural rubber has climbed to a postwar high above 28 cents a pound, and that's good news for foreign traders, even though it does mean higher tire prices. The advance implies more dollars for the rest of the world to purchase U. S. goods.

Up Fastest, Down Fastest

All things considered, commodity prices may be said to have stabilized—"bottomed out," they'd call it in Wall Street. According to the slow-moving, massive Bureau of Labor Statistics index of wholesale prices, which comprises 900 commodities and hence provides a representative cross-section of ups and downs, the recovery of prices since the low in January is only 2.5 percent. But it has been persistent.

SLOW TURNAROUND

Wholesale prices have leveled off from their 1949 slump, and now are tending to rise.



Data: Department of Labor

Prepared for J. A. Livingston

Farm prices, which went up fastest and then down fastest, have done best on the second bounce—up 5.8 percent since the low (see chart). Industrial prices have been less volatile. They're up 1.3 percent since November.

The index, however, conceals some rapid movements in individual commodities. The following table traces the postwar basic movements in eight key items. It shows the decline from the postwar peak to the subsequent low, as well as the present; also the recovery from the low to the present:

Item—	Recent Price	% Drop From High to Low	% Drop From High to Present	% Rise From Low to Now
Wheat (bu.)	$ 2.30	40%	26%	23%
Corn (bu.)	1.48	60	47	23
Cotton (lb.)	.325	25	18	10
Hogs (cwt.)	19.625	50	37	27
Steers (cwt.)	29.00	41	20	35
Copper (lb.)	.195	32	17	22
Lead (lb.)	.12	51	44	14
Steel Scrap (ton)	32.00	55	26	66

The turnaround in commodity prices is directly traceable to the turnaround in business which began last summer and gathered momentum during the fall and winter, notwithstanding intermittent strikes. As sales picked up, businessmen found they had oversold inventories. They had to restock. In March, for example, inventories rose about 500 million dollars more than normally takes place at this time of the year. Even so, inventories at 55 billion dollars are four billion dollars less than a year ago.

As to the Future

This prosperity of ours is still out of grace. It's still distrusted, which is its finest asset. Only a few businessmen have believed in it; for the majority, the recession or depression was just around the corner. The feeling persists that the boom in automobile sales and in home-building will some day poop out—possibly this fall—and then what? Consequently, speculation is still pretty much curbed, and doesn't threaten to get out of hand.

So long as such restraint underlies the economy, prices are not likely to go boom, nor will the economy. For the businessman, a sane working assumption is that until some major change in business occurs, a bottom—a fairly firm bottom—has been made. Thereafter, inventories and commitments ought to be gaited to regular requirements. To paraphrase Polonius' instructions to his son, Leartes: Neither a speculator nor a cautious Nellie be.

Capital Store Sales Off 14% On Date Quirk

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended May 6 dropped 14 percent under the same period last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday.

Explanation for the sharp decline lay in a calendar quirk, local merchants said. Mother's Day came on May 8 last year, boosting sales in the May 7 week. The maternal gift day comes on May 14 this year, and is expected to give a fillip to the sales report next Saturday.

For the four weeks ended May 6, local store sales showed a 4 percent decline under the corresponding 1949 period. Regionally, sales for that period were down 6 percent.

FURNITURE: March furniture sales of seven Washington stores increased 2 percent over the same month last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond noted yesterday. This was somewhat under the average 5 percent sales gain for the entire Fifth Reserve District. For the first three months this year, local furniture sales were up 6 percent against an 8 percent climb for the area.

COMMITTEES: W. Hiles Pardoe of National Savings & Trust Co. has been appointed chairman of the transportation committee for the D. C. Bankers Association's thirty-second annual convention. He will be assisted by W. Ledru Koontz of Anacostia National Bank as vice chairman. Daniel J. Callahan, jr., of Riggs National Bank heads the sports committee, assisted by Barnum L. Colton of National Bank of Washington as vice chairman. The convention is slated June 7-11 at the Greenbrier in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

OFFERING PLAN: Southern Co. expects to raise new money this summer through sale of an additional million shares of its common stock. The offering is expected in July. The utility system's stock recently was admitted to unlisted trading privileges on the Washington Stock Exchange and is widely held in this area.

NEARING GOAL: With a record-breaking four months registered so far this year, Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. now expects to exceed the billion-dollar mark in insurance in force sometime in June. New business for the first four months aggregated more than 48 million dollars, with April accounting for 13 million dollars worth.

REALTY BOND GAIN: The realty bond index of Amott, Baker & Co. on April 30 stood at $820 compared with $819 a month previously and $787 at the end of 1949. The increase marks the tenth consecutive month in which the index has scored a gain. Present prices are the highest since the inception of the index in 1933.

REDEMPTION: The Treasury exercised an option to call two outstanding bond issues for redemption next September 15, two years ahead of the due date. Called were $1,185,841,200 in 2½ percent Treasury bonds of 1950-52, dated September 15, 1938, and $4,939,258,500 in 2 percent bonds, dated April 15, 1943. Except for the call, both issues would have fallen due September 15, 1952.

Meanwhile, the Treasury made known it will borrow approximately 100 million dollars in extra cash this week for the sixth consecutive week. It asked bids for $1,100,000,000 in 91-day bills to be dated May 18. Sale of the issue will take care of $1,003,584,000 in outstanding bills maturing that date and leave nearly 100 million dollars over.

C. & P. ISSUE: The State Corporation Commission of Virginia has authorized the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. to sell 25 million dollars of its common stock to the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., its sole stockholder.

EARNINGS: Mid-Continent Petroleum Corp. announced net profit of $2,529,023, equal to $1.36 a share in the first quarter, compared with $3,357,831, or $1.81 a share in the like period of 1949. Other earnings reports follow:

New York Cotton

New York, May 13 (AP).—Cotton futures were firm today closing 5 to 50 cents a bale higher. Price changes during the session were relatively narrow and trading was quiet.

The improved trend was the result of short covering and some new buying which was attracted to the market by the sharp break on Friday. Brokers reported that there was some covering in old-crop months, believed to be against export sales to Japan and the United Kingdom.

Optimistic predictions concerning consumption trends also aided nearby deliveries.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 13 (AP).—Old crop soybean contracts took another beating today but the rest of the grain market could not get excited about it.

Wheat, corn and oats ended higher, and even the new crop soybean deliveries staged a brisk rally in the final minutes to close with substantial gains.

Old crop soybeans, after crashing more than 9 cents on two different occasions, ended 5½ to 6¾ cents lower; May, 2.90¾ @2.91, but the new crop deliveries gained 3 to 3¼.

Wheat finished ⅛ to 1 cent higher. Corn was ⅛ to ⅞ higher. Oats were ⅛ to 1¼ higher. Rye was unchanged to ½ lower, and lard was 15 to 20 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Activity Slump Laid in Part To Rail Strike

New York, May 13 (AP).—The 1949-50 bull stock market took a breather this week.

A combination of the railroad strike and a touch of nerves over the general condition of the market effectively curbed trading enthusiasm.

The lush string of days when two million or more shares changed hands was broken—though not for long, Wall Street hoped. On Saturday, sales dwindled away to only 570,000 shares, the third smallest two-hour session of the year. A week ago, sales totaled 910,000.

WHAT STOCKS DID	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	349	294
Declines	204	550
Unchanged	267	298
Total issues	820	1143

Aside from the strike, the market functioned against a highly favorable news background.

Barring international or domestic labor complications, it seemed likely that 1950 would turn out to be a far better year than most of the prophets would have dared to predict five or six months ago.

Comments to stockholders by Lewis H. Brown, chairman of Johns-Manville Corp., were typical of a deep vein of optimism running through industrial thinking.

His company, Brown said, had estimated a drop in business in the second half of the year, but indications are to the contrary.

Radio-television issues, hard beaten recently after a spectacular advance earlier in the year, came back today into favor in a half-hearted sort of way. Gains running to around a point were posted for Motorola, Zenith, Radio Corp., Emerson Radio and Admiral.

Removal of Child Care Cost From D. C. Budget Asked

Washington's child day care program should no longer be a District government responsibility, Representative Thomas G. Abernathy (D., Miss.) said yesterday.

The chairman of the House District Subcommittee which will handle the Senate-passed day care extension measure said:

"When we gave the program a one year's extension last year, I thought it was made clear that would be the end. If the centers are continued, they should be financed by some other means than the District budget."

Unless legislation is approved the city's six centers for children of working mothers will close this June 30.

Maryland Tobacco

Baltimore, May 13 (AP).—Stronger demand pushed average prices by grades up on the southern Maryland tobacco auction markets this week, second of the season.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Maryland State Department of Markets reported net sales totaled 2,587,366 pounds at an average price of $48.76 per hundredweight.

Although this average surpassed the opening week's, poorer quality offerings minimized the gain.

Volume of delivery to markets slackened as the dry and windy weather late in the week was unfavorable for the handling of leaf tobacco.

The upward trend in grade averages over opening week was general. Must grades gained $1 to $3 per 100 pounds. However, a fairly large number moved up $4 to $5 and several grades showed even greater advances.

The biggest gains occurred chiefly in the green colored and lower quality grades. One of the larger export companies entered the market Monday.

The $48.76 general average was 41 cents above last week's. Season net sales were brought to 5,588,624 pounds for a $48.54 average. This compares with net auction sales of 8,097,246 pounds averaging $52 during the corresponding period last year.

Fair and low qualities were offered in larger percentage this week. The ratio of thin crop decreased while there were slightly larger proportions of heavy crop, tips, seconds and primings. Bulk of sales consisted of fair grades of heavy crop and tips and fair and good thin crop and seconds.

Deliveries to the Maryland Tobacco Cooperative under the Government loan program decreased as a result of the higher prices. Receipts were estimated at 8 percent as against 13 percent during the first week. Takings for the season stand at approximately 11 percent.

Net receipts of the Baltimore hogshead market for the season were reported around 1,544,960 pounds. This, combined with net sales on the auction markets, brought the aggregate to 7,133,584 pounds. The U. S. Crop Reporting Board estimates the crop at 41 million pounds.

Auction bid averages per 100 pounds on some representative grades, with change from last week:

Heavy crop—Good cherry red, $64, up $1; fair cherry red, $56, up $1; fair red, $38, up $1; fair green, $19.50, up $3.

Tips—Fair cherry red, $44 (unchanged); fair green, $14.50, up $1; low green, $13.75, up $2.

Thin crop—Fine cherry red, $68 (unchanged); good cherry red, $68, up $1; good red, $66, up $1; fair cherry red, $66 (unchanged); Fair red, $62, up $1.

Seconds—Fine cherry red, $66 (unchanged); good cherry red, $64, up $1; fair cherry red, $57, up $2; fair red, $47 (unchanged).

Man Who Gave His Money Away Leaves $300,000

Le Mars, Iowa, May 13 (AP).—A bachelor millionaire who launched a give-away program in 1948 to avoid taxes left an estate including more than 30 farms and almost $300,000 in cash and securities.

The safe deposit box of Herman Schultz containing the money was opened and the 194' will of the eccentric land owner read yesterday. Mr. Schultz, 77, died Monday.

Mr. Schultz, who said he would give away a million dollars worth of property to his nephews and nieces to avoid inheritance taxes, was believed to have disposed of about 10 of his farms.

Shortly after Mr. Schultz declared in 1948 he would give away his money, he was the victim of a robbery in which he said he lost $124,000 in cash.

Crime Inquiry Counsel to Begin Picking Staff

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Senate crime investigation will get down to business Monday when Chief Counsel Rudolph Halley goes to work.

Halley's appointment was announced yesterday by Committee Chairman Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.). The Senator said Halley might be paid something less than the allowable $17,500 in order to stretch the committee's $150,000 budget.

The new counsel said he considered the job a "very great opportunity to perform a public service" and he promised to go about it "diligently and properly." He served as counsel with the Truman War Investigating Committee.

Halley's first job will be to line up a staff, with the concurrence of Kefauver and Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), named as a subcommittee for that purpose.

Kefauver said yesterday the staff would include 10 or 12 investigators as well as an assistant counsel. He has been flooded with applications, he said.

One scheme the committee hopes to employ is to hire on a per diem basis various persons around the Nation—crime commission officials for example—who have a special knowledge in a particular area. The committee also is counting on cooperation from Federal, State and local law enforcement agencies.

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), a committee member, yesterday said the public should expect "silent sleuthing" rather than "spectacular cops and robbers circuses" from the committee. He emphasized the need for adequate staff preparation before either closed or public hearings.

Mayors' Conference Backs Crime Inquiry

New York, May 13 (AP).—The U. S. Conference of Mayors today called for an overall Federal investigation into Nation-wide crime.

The mayors also urged Federal bans against interstate shipment of slot machines and use of interstate communication wires for transmitting gambling information.

Other resolutions adopted called for:

1. Continuance of Federal rent control "in cities where such action is formally requested by local authorities," but no restoration of Federal control in cities where it has been discontinued.
2. Issuance of a Federal statement of policy containing specific recommendations for community defense programs.
3. Legislation authorizing Federal payments to cities in lieu of taxes on Federal properties.
4. Reapportionment of cities' representation in various State legislatures on the basis of population.

David L. Lawrence, Mayor of Pittsburgh, was elected president of the conference for the coming year, succeeding Mayor W. Cooper Green, of Birmingham. Mayor Martin H. Kennelly, of Chicago, was elected vice president, succeeding Lawrence.

Teen-Age Gang Wars Leave 1 Dead, 2 Wounded in N. Y. City

New York, May 13 (U.P.).—Teenagers killed one youth, shot another and stabbed a third in gang-war outbursts in a 24-hour period ending today.

James Fortunato, 18, was killed last night in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, in a juvenile feud between the "Garfields" and "Tigers."

"I shot him," said Anthony Scarpati, 16, of the "Garfields." "I don't want anyone else to take the blame."

Alfred Venti, 17, was stabbed in the abdomen in the same battle.

Later, three youths rang the doorbell at the Manhattan home of 17-year-old Milton (Vic) Vidal and asked his 13-year-old sister to call him.

Vidal stepped into the hall and closed the door. A shot brought his mother, who found her son lying on the floor. He was taken to a hospital with a gunshot wound in the right shoulder.

Police said they believe the shooting resulted from a "falling out" among boy gangsters.

Approximately 40 youths were rounded up after the Brooklyn fight.

Desire to Lose Called Hidden Gambler Trait by Psychologist

The gambler really has an unconscious wish to lose.

Without the "thrill" of the "pleasurable-painful" tension experienced between placing a bet and the outcome of the game, no game is worth the candle to the gambler.

Gamblers all seem to be "strongly aggressive persons with huge reservoirs of unconscious hostility and resentment upon which their neurosis feeds." That aggression frequently grows out of a relationship with domineering, cold, usually tight-fisted fathers.

These are among the factors making up the psychology of the habitual gambler, according to an article by Robert M. Lindner, a Baltimore psychologist, published in the May issue of the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Lindner discusses various studies of gamblers and includes material on what he and other psychoanalysts see as a direct relationship between sexual factors and gambling.

The Annals is the usually staid journal of an organization of some 13,000 members, the bulk of them professionals in the fields of political and social science. The current issue covers, in a popular manner, all phases of gambling—its legal status, its various forms, studies of the gambler (including Lindner's) and gambling in foreign countries.

Included are articles by Virgil W. Peterson, operating director of the Chicago Crime Commission; Ernest E. Blanche of Chevy Chase, Md., on the Army General Staff and author of "You Can't Win," and numerous others.

Progress Reported On Undulant Fever

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Roanoke, Va., May 13.—Maryland University scientists are literally splitting the germs of undulant fever in a hopeful search for a safe vaccine against the stubborn disease, they reported here.

Already, their work has uncovered one fragment of the germ which immunizes laboratory animals against mild infections of the ailment, whose technical name is brucellosis.

The preliminary success, however, is still far short of the goal, a vaccine which would insure immunity to brucellosis infection in man or farm animals, said John W. Foster, postgraduate research worker at the university's department of bacteriology.

He reported on the laboratory work at the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Virginia Academy of Science, which ended its scientific sessions here today.

Present Vaccine Dangerous

The search for a vaccine against brucellosis shows a long history of failure, Foster pointed out in his report. One vaccine of living organisms is widely used, but is infectious to man and sometimes infects the cattle it is designed to protect.

It is the organism of this vaccine, he said, that he and his associates are using to find a dead fraction which might set up fighting forces in man, and cattle, against later exposure to the live organism.

Brucellosis, an occupational hazard to dairymen and meat handlers, produces recurring, debilitating fevers in man. In cattle, it resulwts in abortion, milk loss and unfit meat, and is a costly loss factor to the industry.

Foster reported that he and his associates have succeeded in isolating seven fractions of the brucellosis organism, of which the sixth proved most promising. With it, he said, they produced immunity in 13 of 19 test animals (guinea pigs) to laboratory injection of brucellosis.

Though the infecting dose injections were relatively weak, doses of the same strength produced the disease in all the control animals not protected by the test immunity serum, he said.

"The results so far," he concluded, "show that the fraction offers protection against relatively weak challenge doses of brucellosis. The problem now is to continue the work till a dependable vaccine might be found."

The research team, besides Foster, includes P. Arne Hansen and John E. Faber, jr., all of the university's bacteriology department and the Livestock Sanitary Service Laboratories, at College Park, Md.

Another speaker, Dr. Warren Moore, entomologist, of Raphine, Va., urged that insects be used more widely in research on the nutritional requirements of man. Such studies, he pointed out, "are within the financial reach of any ingenious biologist, and open endless pathways to far-reaching discoveries."

He said bugs have many of the nutritional requirements that man has. Then, he argued, nutritional studies to man's eventual benefit could be carried on with insects "at very little expense in space, equipment and materials."

New Findings Reported on Uterine Ills

Scientists at Johns Hopkins University have succeeded in producing endometriosis, the so-called modern woman's disease, in monkeys, it was reported yesterday.

Their work, they reported, demonstrates a generally suspected cause of the condition, the misplaced growth within the abdomen of uterine lining tissue normally sloughed off during menstruation.

Endometriosis is an invasive, nonmalignant disease which resembles cancer. It has increased rapidly among American women, particularly those in higher income brackets, during the last two decades.

Reporting on their findings were Drs. Richard W. TeLinde, professor of gynecology, and Roger B. Scott, instructor in gynecology, of the Baltimore school. Their disclosures were read yesterday at the annual meeting of the American Gynecological Society at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

After years of fruitless experimental efforts to induce the disease in laboratory animals, where its cause and treatment could be studied, they said they finally succeeded by these methods: Planting fragments of endometrium (membrane lining the uterine cavity) on organs and altering the animal's uterus so that the menstrual fluid drained into the abdominal cavity, or into the tissues of the abdominal wall.

The rapid rise in endometriosis in the last two decades has been attributed by many gynecologists to the increased use of contraceptives — with fewer pregnancies and periods of nursing babies, both of which stop menstrual flow.

The Johns Hopkins research was supported by the American Cancer Society.

Dr. Sander Plowing for Living

Manchester, N. H., May 13 (U.P.) Dr. Hermann N. Sander, who lost his right to practice medicine after being tried for first-degree murder, is plowing farms at $4 an hour.

Sander owns a small, electrically-powered plow and, having finished his own garden, is hiring it and himself out to meet current expenses.

"I'm taking every job I can find and I hope to find many," said the doctor who was acquitted of killing Mrs. Abbie C. Borroto, a cancer patient, as an "act of mercy."

One of Sander's first employers was George Woodbury, chairman of the Dr. Hermann N. Sander Fund. Woodbury said the fund had raised $21,000 but most of it had gone to pay trial expenses.

He said the doctor operated on the theory, "If you can't earn it, don't spend it.'"

On June 19 Sander can petition the State Board of Registration in Medicine for reinstatement as a physician.

Canada Evacuating 110,000 at Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Man., May 13 (U.P.).—A giant fleet of 3700 automobiles and trucks and six special Red Cross trains carried citizens out of Winnipeg today in a mass flight from a new flood crest.

A Red Cross official said that by Monday a total of 110,000 persons—more than one-third of this city's population of 320,000—will have left in the greatest flood exodus in Canadian history.

The Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways reported 70,000 persons had left the area by rail, and airline officials reported that 1200 had been flown out in the past five days.

Premier D. L. Campbell of Manitoba said shelter for 85,000 flood victims had been arranged in private homes throughout the prairie provinces and eastern Canada.

The exodus was spurred by warnings that the Red River, surging through the city at seven miles an hour, would rise three to six inches in the next 24 hours and would bring a new flood crest here in about six days. In addition, fresh rains were forecast for Sunday.

United States Army Engineer H. W. Harich, flown here to help plot the flood's course, said the second flood crest would be "even worse" than the first. Army control check points at city boundaries keep track of the number of refugees.

Thirty-one Air Force planes were flying in supplies and the Canadian Pacific Railway added 200 extra cars to handle the evacuation. Defense Minister Brooke Claxton and Lieut. Gen. Charles Foulkes, Chief of the Genera Staff, flew here today to direct the flood-fighting.

Schoolgirl Is Strangled With Her Belt

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
LORRAINE HESS
. . . Found dead

Millville, N. J., May 13 (AP).—A 17-year-old high school girl returning home from a school play was strangled early today with the green belt from her topcoat.

Director of Public Safety David Ried said he believed the girl, Lorraine Hess, a junior at Millville High, knew the person who killed her. Other than that belief, the only clew police had were footprints around the spot where the slight girl's fully clothed body was found.

Ried declined to elaborate on his theory that the girl knew her slayer. He did say that the body of the quiet, studious girl bore no marks or scratches, even though there was evidence of a struggle at the scene. One of her shoes was found 100 feet away.

Police questioned other high school students who had watched the play, "June Mad," a three-act comedy, with the brunette daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorraine Hess. Two of her classmates, Jane McLaughlin and Mildred Crowley, told police they walked part of the way home with Lorraine and left her about 11:30 p. m. (EST).

Dr. Irvin Atkinson, Cumberland County physician, said no criminal attack was made on the girl. Her body was left lying between two bungalows.

Police Are Baffled in Efforts To Identify Murdered Redhead

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 13 (Spl.).—Authorities here reported today they are "more baffled than ever" in attempts to solve the mystery of an attractive redheaded woman whose nude and garotted body was found near here Wednesday.

One possible new clew turned up today—a woman's brassier and panties found some distance from where the body was—but S. D. Helsley, Morgan County prosecuting attorney, said there was nothing to connect it definitely with the murder.

Other developments today were:

1. The FBI at Washington completed laboratory examinations of hair strands, a piece of rope, bobby pins and a dungaree shirt, found in an abandoned stolen car near here. While findings were not made public, they were reported unofficially to be "negative." Authorities here previously had placed major hope for solution of the murder on these articles.

2. An intensive search was underway through this mountain country for a life-term convict who escaped last Saturday from the West Virginia penitentiary. He previously lived near here and police thought he may have been responsible for the murder, though they admitted there is as yet nothing tangible to connect him with it. He is John Shriver, an habitual auto thief who escaped two months previously and was armed when he was recaptured under police gunfire.

3. A file of persons continued to view the body, but no one could identify it. The body was moved today from the Hunter Funeral Chapel to the morgue of Newton Baker Veterans Administration Hospital where it can be kept cold and preserved.

Yesterday, relatives or acquaintances of three women missing from the Washington area visited the body and determined it was none of them. Today, efforts to identify it as the body of one of two women missing from Akron, Ohio, also proved fruitless.

Truman Has Crowds Eating Out of His Hand Again

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

ABOARD TRUMAN SPECIAL.—The crow-eaters on this cross-country sales tour have a new respect for crowds. They still don't know exactly what the turnouts mean, but they have a strong suspicion.

In fact, they've thrown over the battered 1948 explanation—curiosity—in favor of a new one. As one wrong-guesser to another, these people like Truman. Either that, or they like a fight. Nonpolitical? This is 1950 and 1952 rolled into one.

He has a way with crowds, even hidebound Republican crowds. You'd never know it when he's stumbling through a gobbledygook text. But always at the end he ad libs a few lines, and they're with him.

Better still, when he pops out on the rear platform and lets fly in an unprepared talk. It's so contagious that he soon has the folks talking back, like neighbors over the fence.

Pleasant Surprise

BUT for all his 1948 right-guessing, Mr. Truman sometimes wonders about crowds, too.

The other day, when a surprisingly large number turned out at a small Idaho town, the President pulled a reporter up to the platform as the train was about to move on.

Waving toward the smiling sea of faces, he said: "Look at that."

At another stop, a conscience-troubled member of the throng called out that they all were Republicans.

"Yes, but I'm going to convert you to the right way of living if I can," Mr. Truman shouted back.

There's a give-and-take intimacy between "Harry" and his wondering hosts, but at this writing there hasn't been a "boo" or an unfriendly wisecrack.

Closest to it came at Umatilla, Oreg., when the President told an audience: "We are going to get some more low-rent housing."

"You hope," yelled a voice from the crowd.

"Yes, we hope," Mr. Truman came back. "And if you work hard enough, you can help me get it."

A surprising fact is that there hasn't been a query from the crowds on the Communists-in-Government charges of Senator McCarthy.

Margaret a Favorite

ON THIS "Meet the President" tour, Truman and Margaret, as in 1948, are proving at least equal attractions. The tank town crowds shout for them, plainly show their disappointment if the two don't make every 10-a-day show.

The blue velvet curtains still hang at the rear of the "Ferdinand Magellan," but the routine is slightly altered. Mr. Truman no longer says, "Meet the boss," or, "How'd you like to meet my family?" The story is that Mrs. Truman had a hand in rewriting the script. Now he simply presents "Mrs. Truman" and then says: "Here's Margaret."

At every stop, he goes to great pains to convince the crowds he's "working for them." For one full day he used the line: "I'm your hired man. You hired me in 1948." Next day this was polished up a bit. "I'm your public servant," he said.

Another variation is: "I've come back to show you I haven't gone high hat."

His repeated assertion that "this trip isn't political" fools no one, and apparently isn't intended to. The folks wait for the line, like a familiar joke. He frequently follows it up with the remark that he isn't running for anything now, but will be back "soon" on a political trip.

Newsmen assume it means he will be back this way, come September, on an out-and-out slugging tour. The primaries will be over by then and Mr. Truman will campaign openly for a Democratic Congress.

The President desperately needs a Democratic increase in House and Senate to enact the more controversial phases of his program. Whatever his intentions, such an increase would certainly help clear the field for him in 1952.

A fact worth noting is that congressional gains in this Western and Northwestern territory would make the President less dependent than ever on Southern Democratic votes for Fair Deal measures or a Fair Deal candidate.

Speaking like a pitchman in this traveling sales tour, he markets Fair Deal programs like pie-in-the-sky to all who will listen, and they all do. If the crowds "buy," it could build a fire under Congress even before the November vote-casting.

Plain 'Implications'

HIS "nonpolitical" technique has put Republicans at a disadvantage from the start of the tour. So long as he fails to designate Republicans by name, it's pretty hard for the opposition to strike back without confessing the sins he attributes to them by implication.

Actually, it's a good deal more than implication. When he refers to "mossbacks," "calamity howlers," "die-hard reactionaries," "selfish or short-sighted people," the GOP at least knows he isn't shadow-boxing. When he quotes prominent Republicans without naming them, all doubt disappears.

But none knows better than Victor Johnston, secretary of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, how difficult it is to answer on the spot. Johnston, who has been chasing the train in a private plane to check performance and crowd reactions, flew right into one of Mr. Truman's happiest "nonpolitical" jests.

Mr. Truman simply invited Johnston to buy a ticket, ride with him, and save money. The only ready answer Johnston could think

Splintered Jap Reds Pull 'Shy' Act

By Hessell Tiltman

Mr. Tiltman, chief Far Eastern correspondent for the London Daily Herald, was a correspondent with both the Chinese and Japanese forces in the Sino-Japanese war, and after World War II he returned to Tokyo to cover General MacArthur's headquarters. He is the author of several books on Japan and Pacific affairs.

TOKYO.—Japan's Communist Party is in the throes of its first severe internal crisis since General MacArthur, in 1945, opened the doors of the Kempeitai prisons in which most of its leaders were confined, and legalized communism in Japan.

The crisis is twofold. It began when, last January, the Cominform directed a blast at Sanzo Nosaka, "brain" of the party, for the "sin" of claiming it was possible to achieve the aims of the party under the occupation—and by peaceful means. It was deepened when Yoshio Shiga, editor of Akahata, the party organ and one of the "Big Three" of Japanese communism, attacked Kyuichi Tokuda, secretary-general of the party, and Nosaka for lukewarm adherence to party principle—and for deviationism in that the Tokuda-Nosaka faction had sidestepped the issue of whether, in the event of a war involving Soviet Russia and Japan, they would assist the Russians or behave like patriotic Japanese and resist any violation of Japan's sovereignty from any quarter.

Other issues figured in the serious internal split thus precipitated within the highest councils of the party, but this question of aligning the party four-square with the Kremlin, its satellites and Red China—and against the "capitalist imperialism of the United States"—was paramount.

FACED WITH this confusion within the party, Japan's top ranking Reds have gone incommunicado. A recent special meeting of the central committee of the party, called in an attempt to heal differences, was held behind tightly closed doors, with a Communist guard thrown around the party's headquarters in Tokyo.

Correspondents formerly welcomed at the Communist "GHQ" are finding it difficult to contact anyone higher in the party councils than a clerk.

This new shyness on the part of Moscow's representatives in Japan coincides with the stepping-up of antioccupation propaganda which some observers interpret as a result of the Cominform demand that the Japanese Reds toe the party line or else, while others see it as an intensification of a line which Japan's Communist hierarchy was already developing when the Cominform rebuke occurred — the demand for "national independence" which the Communists use as a cloak to hide their subservience to the dictates of Moscow, and which served them well in the last general election.

No Mention of U. S.

WHICHEVER VIEW is correct—and however the internal crisis within the party is resolved—recent Communist statements clearly herald the opening of a new and possibly dramatic phase in the postwar history of Japan's Communists.

The party nailed its colors to the mast at a "standing room only" rally at Tokyo's Hibaya Hall on March 15, anniversary of the date in 1928 when the Japanese Kempeitai rounded up more than 1000 Japanese Communists in nation-wide raids (including virtually all the men who are today the top-ranking leaders of the party).

Behind Nosaka as he spoke that day were large banners bearing the slogan, "Oppose bases in Japan." Nosaka, a quiet-spoken, Moscow-trained operator, did not mention the United States by name. But everyone in the audience knew who he was talking about when he referred to the "aggressor" which threatened Japan's future, and spoke of the "top military men of a foreign power" who had visited Japan to prepare for war. (The United States Joint Chiefs of Staff had been visiting Japan a few days previously).

'The Third Is Japan'

ENLARGING UPON this theme, Nosaka asserted, "While Premier Yoshida denies the possibility of war, forces exist in the world which prepare for the third World War. This will not be a war between capitalist nations, but will be an attack upon socialism and people's democracies by imperialism and capitalism. Therefore, the theater of conflict will not be restricted to Asia alone. The whole world is likely to be involved. Military experts tell us there exist three powder-magazines in the world. The first is western Germany, the second is Iran, Turkey and Somaliland, and the third is Japan."

Asking his audience why Japanese should be killed in a war between foreign powers, Nosaka listed the slogans under which Japanese Communists would in future fight—among them, "Immediate withdrawal of foreign troops from Japan after peace is

The Jackson Opinion: A Landmark

THE WASHINGTON POST presents, herewith, the full text (except for footnotes) of the opinion by Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson handed down last Monday in the Taft-Hartley Act non-Communist oath case. This opinion is likely to become a legal and moral landmark in this Nation's search for a philosophy reconciling the freedoms of the Bill of Rights with the need for restraining the conspiratorial activities of the Communist Party.

IF THE statute before us required labor union officers to forswear membership in the Republican Party, the Democratic Party or the Socialist Party, I suppose all agree that it would be unconstitutional. But why, if it is valid as to the Communist Party?

The answer, for me, is in the decisive differences between the Communist Party and every other party of any importance in the long experience of the United States with party government. In order that today's decision may not be useful as a precedent for suppression of any political opposition compatible with our free institutions, I limit concurrence to grounds and distinctions explicitly set forth herein, without which I should regard this Act as unconstitutional.

To state controlling criteria definitely is both important and difficult, because those Communist Party activities visible to the public closely resemble those of any other party. Parties, whether in office or out, are often irresponsible in their use and abuse of freedoms of speech and press. They all make scapegoats of unpopular persons or classes and make promises of dubious sincerity or feasibility in order to win votes. All parties, when in opposition, strive to discredit and embarrass the Government of the day by spreading exaggerations and untruths and by inciting prejudiced or unreasoning discontent, not even hesitating to injure the Nation's prestige among the family of nations.

The Communist Party, at least outwardly, only exaggerates these well-worn political techniques, and many persons are thus led to think of it as just another more radical political party. If it were nothing but that, I think this legislation would be unconstitutional. There are, however, contradictions between what meets the eye and what is covertly done, which, in my view of the issues, provide a rational basis upon which Congress reasonably could have concluded that the Communist Party is something different in fact from any other substantial party we have known, and hence may constitutionally be treated as something different in law.

I.

FROM information before its several committees and from facts of general knowledge, Congress could rationally conclude that, behind its political party facade, the Communist Party is a conspiratorial and revolutionary junta, organized to reach ends and to use methods which are incompatible with our constitutional system. A rough and compressed grouping of this data would permit Congress to draw these important conclusions as to its distinguishing characteristics.

1. The goal of the Communist Party is to seize powers of government by and for a minority rather than to acquire power through the vote of a free electorate. It seeks not merely a change of administration, or of Congress, or reform legislation within the constitutional framework. Its program is not merely to socialize property more rapidly and extensively than the other parties are doing. While the difference between other parties in these matters is largely as to pace, the Communist Party's difference is one of direction.

The Communist program only begins with seizure of government, which then becomes a means to impose upon society an organization on principles fundamentally opposed to those presupposed by our Constitution. It purposes forcibly to recast our whole social and political structure after the Muscovite model of police-state dictatorship. It rejects the entire religious and cultural heritage of Western civilization, as well as the American economic and political systems. This Communist movement is a belated counter-revolution to the American Revolution, designed to undo the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and our Bill of Rights, and overturn our system of free, representative self-government.

Goals so extreme and offensive to American tradition and aspiration obviously could not be attained or approached through order or with tranquility. If, by their better organization and discipline, they were successful, more candid Communists admit that it would be to an accompaniment of violence, but at the same time they disclaim responsibility by blaming the violence upon those who engage in resistance or reprisal. It matters little by whom the first blow would be struck; no one can doubt that an era of violence and oppression, confiscations and liquidations would be concurrent with a regime of communism.

Such goals set up a cleavage among us too fundamental to be composed by democratic processes. Our constitutional scheme of elections will not settle issues between large groups when the price of losing is to suffer extinction. When dissensions cut too deeply, men will fight, even hopelessly, before they will submit. And this is the kind of struggle projected by the Communist Party and inherent in its program.

2. The Communist Party alone among American parties past or present is dominated and controlled by a foreign govern-

LAST Monday the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the non-Communist oath provision of the Taft-Hartley labor law, an oath required of officials of those unions desiring to make use of the offices of the National Labor Relations Board. But the Court was far from unanimous in the matter.

Chief Justice Vinson's majority opinion, insofar as it concerned the requirement that union officials swear that they are not members of the Communist Party, had the support of Justices Reed, Frankfurter, Jackson and Burton, with Justice Black dissenting. (Justices Douglas, Clark and Minton did not take part in the case.)

But the Court split, 3-to-3, on the further requirement in the oath that union officials swear they do not "believe" in or support groups which believe in or advocate the Government's overthrow by illegal or unconstitutional means. Because the lower court had upheld this section, the tie vote sustained it.

On this issue, Justices Frankfurter and Jackson joined Justice Black in dissent. For himself, Jackson wrote the opinion here presented, concurring in the first part of the ruling and dissenting in the second.

ment. It is a satrap party which, to the threat of civil disorder, adds the threat of betrayal into alien hands.

The chain of command from the Kremlin to the American party is stoutly denied and usually invisible, but it was unmistakably disclosed by the American Communist Party somersaulting in synchronism with shifts in the Kremlin's foreign policy. Before Munich, Soviet policy was anti-German—"anti-fascist"—and the Communists in this country were likewise. However, when Stalin concluded a nonaggression pact with Hitler and Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union became partners in the war, the Communists here did everything within their power to retard and embarrass the United States' policy of rendering aid short of war to victims of aggression by that evil partnership. When those partners again fell out and Russian policy once more became anti-German, the Communists in this country made an abrupt and fierce reversal and were unconscionable in their demands that American soldiers, whose equipment they had delayed and sabotaged, be sacrificed in a premature second front to spare Russia. American Communists, like Communists elsewhere in the world, placed Moscow's demand above every patriotic interest.

By lineage and composition, the Communist Party will remain peculiarly susceptible to this alien control. The entire apparatus of communism—its grievances, program, propaganda and vocabulary—were evolved for Eastern and Central Europe, whose social and political conditions bear no semblance to our own. However gifted may have been the Communist Party's founders and leaders—Marx, Engels, Lenin and Stalin—not one of them ever lived in America, experienced our conditions or imbibed the spirit of our institutions. The Communist Party is not native to this country and its beginnings here were not an effort of Americans to answer American problems. Nor is it the response to a quest by American political leaders for lessons from European experiences. As a consequence, the leaders of the American Communist Party have been otherwise insignificant personalities, without personal political followings or aptitudes for our political methods, adapted by training only to boring their way into the labor movement, minority groups and coteries of naive and confused liberals, whose organizations they have captured and discredited and among whom they lie in wait for further orders.

The Old World may be rich in lessons which our statesmen could consult with advantage. But it is one thing to learn from or support a foreign power because that policy serves American interests, and another thing to support American policies because they will serve foreign interests. In each country where the Communists have seized control, they have so denationalized its foreign policy as to make it a satellite and vassal of the Soviet Union and enforced a domestic policy in complete conformity with the Soviet pattern, tolerating no deviation in deference to any people's separate history, tradition or national interests.

3. Violent and undemocratic means are the calculated and indispensable methods to attain the Communist Party's goal. It would be incredible naivete to expect the American branch of this movement to forgo the only methods by which a Communist Party has anywhere come into power. In not one of the countries it now dominates was the Communist Party chosen by a free or contestable election; in not one can it be evicted by any election. The international police state has crept over Eastern Europe by deception, coercion, coup d'etat, terrorism and assassination. Not only has it overpowered its critics and opponents; it has usually liquidated them. The American Communist Party has copied the organizational structure and its leaders have been schooled in the same technique and from the same tutors.

The American Communists have imported the totalitarian organization's disciplines and techniques, notwithstanding the fact that this country offers them and other discontented elements a way to peaceful revolution by ballot. If they can persuade enough citizens, they may not only name new officials and inaugurate new policies, but, by amendment of the Constitution, they can abolish the Bill of Rights and set up an absolute government by legal methods. They are given liberties of speech, press and assembly to enable them to present to the people their proposals and propaganda for peaceful and lawful changes, however extreme. But instead of resting their case upon persuasion and any appeal inherent in their ideas and principles, the Communist Party adopts the techniques of a secret cabal—false names, forged passports, code messages, clandestine meetings. To these it adds occasional terroristic and threatening methods, such as picketing courts and juries, political strikes and sabotage.

This cabalism and terrorism is understandable in the light of what they want to accomplish and what they have to overcome. The Communist program does not presently, nor in foreseeable future elections, commend itself to enough American voters to be a substantial political force. Unless the Communist Party can obtain some powerful leverage on the population, it is doomed to remain a negligible factor in the United States. Hence, conspiracy, violence, intimidation and the coup d'etat are all that keep hope alive in the Communist breast.

4. The Communist Party has sought to gain this leverage and hold on the American population by acquiring control of the labor movement. All political parties have wooed labor and its leaders. But what other parties seek is principally the vote of labor. The Communist Party, on the other hand, is not primarily interested in labor's vote, for it does not expect to win by votes. It strives for control of labor's coercive power—the strike, the sit-down, the slow-down, sabotage or other means of producing industrial paralysis. Congress has legalized the strike as labor's weapon for improving its own lot. But where Communists have labor control, the strike can be and sometimes is perverted to a party weapon. In 1940 and 1941, undisclosed Communists used their labor offices to sabotage this Nation's effort to rebuild its own defenses. Disguised as leaders of free American labor, they were in truth secret partisans of Stalin, who, in partnership with Hitler, was overrunning Europe, sending honest labor leaders to concentration camps and reducing labor to slavery in every land either of them was able to occupy. No other important political party in our history has attempted to use the strike to nullify a foreign or a domestic policy adopted by those chosen under our representative system.

This labor leverage, however, usually can be obtained only by concealing the Communist tie from the union membership. Whatever grievances American workmen may have with American employers, they are too intelligent and informed to seek a remedy through a Communist Party which defends Soviet conscription of labor, forced labor camps and the police state. Hence the resort to concealment, and hence the resentment of laws to compel disclosure of Communist Party ties. The membership is not likely to entrust its bargaining power, its records and its treasury to such hands.

When it does, the union finds itself a more or less helpless captive of the Communist Party. Its officers cease to be interested in correcting grievances but seek to worsen and exploit them; they care less for winning strikes than that they be long, bitter and disruptive. They always follow the Communist Party line, without even knowing its source or its objectives. The most promising course of the Communist Party has been the undercover capture of the coercive power of strategic labor unions as a leverage to magnify its power over the American people.

5. Every member of the Communist Party is an agent to execute the Communist program. What constitutes a party? Major political parties in the United States have never been closely knit or secret organizations. Anyone who usually votes the party ticket is reckoned a member, although he has not applied for or been admitted to membership, pays no dues, has taken no pledge and is free to vote, speak and act as he wills. Followers are held together by rather casual acceptance of general principles, the influence of leaders and sometimes by the cohesive power of patronage. Membership in the party carries with it little assurance that the member understands or believes in its principles and none at all that he will take orders from its leaders. One may quarrel with the party and bolt its candidates and return again as much a member as those who were regular. And it is often a source of grief to those who have labored long in the vineyard that late arrivals are taken into the party councils from other parties without scrutiny. Of course, when party organization is of this character, there is little ground for inference that all members are committed to party plans or that they are agents for their execution.

Membership in the Communist Party is totally different. The party is a secret conclave. Members are admitted only upon acceptance as reliable and after indoctrination in its policies, to which the member is fully committed. They are provided with cards or credentials, usually issued under false names so that the identification can only be made by officers of the party who hold the code. Moreover, each pledges unconditional obedience to party authority. Adherents are known by secret or code names. They constitute "cells" in the factory, the office, the political society or the labor union. For any deviation from the party line, they are purged and excluded.

Inferences from membership in such an organization are justifiably different from those to be drawn from membership in the usual type of political party. Individuals who assume such obligations are chargeable, on ordinary conspiracy principles, with responsiblity for and participation in all that makes up the party's program. The conspiracy principle has traditionally been employed to protect society against all "ganging up" or concerted action in violation of its laws. No term passes that this court does not sustain convictions based on that doctrine for violations of the antitrust laws or other statutes. However, there has recently entered the dialectic of politics a cliche used to condemn application of the conspiracy principle to Communists. "Guilt by association" is an epithet frequently used and little explained, except that it is generally accompanied by another slogan, "guilt is personal." Of course it is; but personal guilt may be incurred by joining a conspiracy. That act of association makes one responsible for the acts of others committed in pursuance of the association. It is wholly a question of the sufficiency of evidence of association to imply conspiracy. There is certainly sufficient evidence that all members owe allegiance to every detail of the Communist Party program and have assumed a duty actively to help execute it, so that Congress could, on familiar conspiracy principles, charge each member with responsibility for the goals and means of the party.

Such then is the background which Congress could reasonably find as a basis for exerting its constitutional powers, and which the judiciary cannot disregard in testing them. On this hypothesis we may revert to consideration of the contention of unconstitutionality of thir oath insofar as it requires disclosure of Communist Party membership or affiliation.

II.

I CANNOT believe that Congress has less power to protect a labor union from Communist Party domination than it has from employer domination. This Court has uncompromisingly upheld power of Congress to disestablish labor unions where they are company-dominated and to eradicate employer influence, even when exerted only through spoken or written words which any person not the employer would be free to utter.

Congress has conferred upon labor unions important rights and powers in matters that affect industry, transport, communications and commerce. And Congress has not now denied any union full self-government nor prohibited any union from choosing Communist officers. It seeks to protect the union from doing so unknowingly. And if members deliberately choose to put the union in the hands of Communist officers, Congress withdraws the privileges it has conferred on the assumption that they will be devoted to the welfare of their members. It would be strange indeed if it were constitutionally powerless to protect these delegated functions from abuse and misappropriation to the service of the Communist Party and the Soviet Union. Our Constitution is not a covenant of nonresistance toward organized efforts at disruption and betrayal, either of labor or of the country.

Counsel stress that this is a civil-rights or a free-speech or a free-press case. But it is important to note what this act does not do. The act does not suppress or outlaw the Communist Party, nor prohibit it or its members from engaging in any aboveboard activity normal in party struggles under our political system. It may continue to nominate candidates, hold meetings, conduct campaigns and issue propaganda, just as other parties may. No individual is forbidden to be or to become a philosophical Communist or a full-fledged member of the party. No one is penalized for writing or speaking in favor of the party or its philosophy. Also, the act does not require or forbid anything whatever to any person merely because he is a member of, or is affiliated with, the Communist Party. It applies only to one who becomes an officer of a labor union.

I am aware that the oath is resented by many labor leaders of unquestioned loyalty and above suspicion of Communist connections, indeed by some who have themselves taken bold and difficult steps to rid the labor movement of Communists. I suppose no one likes to be compelled to exonerate himself from connections he has never acquired. I have sometimes wondered why I must file papers showing I did not steal my car before I can get a license for it. But experience shows there are thieves among automobile drivers, and that there are Communists among labor leaders. The public welfare, in identifying both, outweighs any affront to individual dignity.

In weighing claims that any particular activity is above the reach of law, we have a high responsibility to do so in the light of present-day actualities, not nostalgic idealizations valid for a simpler age. Our own world, organized for liberty, has been forced into deadly competition with another world, organized for power. We are faced with a lawless and ruthless effort to infiltrate and disintegrate our society. In cases involving efforts of Congress to deal with this struggle, we are clearly called upon to apply the long-standing rule that an appointive judiciary should strike down no act produced by the democratic processes of our representative system unless unconstitutionality is clear and certain.

I conclude that we cannot deny Congress power to take these measures under the Commerce Clause to require labor union officers to disclose their membership in or affiliation with the Communist Party.

III.

CONGRESS has, however, required an additional disclaimer, which in my view does encounter serious constitutional objections. A union officer must also swear that "he does not believe in . . . the overthrow of the United States Government by force or by any illegal or unconstitutional methods."

If Congress has power to condition any right or privilege of an American citizen upon disclosure and disavowal of belief on any subject, it is obviously this one. But the serious issue is whether Congress has power to proscribe any opinion or belief which has not manifested itself in any overt act. While the forepart of the oath requires disclosure and disavowal of relationships which depend on overt acts of membership or affiliation, the afterpart demands revelation and denial of mere beliefs or opinions, even though they may never have matured into any act whatever or even been given utterance. In fact, the oath requires one to form and express a conviction on an abstract proposition which many good citizens, if they have thought of it at all, have considered too academic and remote to bother about.

That this difference is decisive on the question of power becomes unmistakable when we consider measures of enforcement. The only sanction prescribed, and probably the only one possible in dealing with a false affidavit, is punishment for perjury. If one is accused of falsely stating that he was not a member of, or affiliated with, the Communist Party, his conviction would depend upon proof of visible and knowable overt acts or courses of conduct sufficient to establish that relationship. But if one is accused of falsely swearing that he did not believe something that he really did believe, the trial must revolve around the conjecture as to whether he candidly exposed his state of mind.

The law sometimes does inquire as to mental state, but only so far as I recall when it is incidental to, and determines the quality of, some overt act in question. From its circumstances, courts sometimes must decide whether an act was committed intentionally or whether its results were intended, or whether the action taken was in malice, or after deliberation, or with knowledge of certain facts. But in such cases the law pries into the mind only to determine the nature and culpability of an act, as a mitigating or aggravating circumstance, and I know of no situation in which a citizen may incur civil or criminal liability or disability because a court infers an evil mental state where no act at all has occurred. Our trial processes are clumsy and unsatisfying for inferring cogitations which are incidental to actions, but they do not even pretend to ascertain the thought that has had no outward manifestation. Attempts of the courts to fathom modern political meditations of an accused would be as futile and mischievous as the efforts in the infamous heresy trials of old to fathom religious beliefs.

Our Constitution explicitly precludes punishment of the malignant mental state alone as treason, most serious of all political crimes, of which the mental state of adherence to the enemy is an essential part. It requires a duly witnessed overt act of aid and comfort to the enemy. Cramer v. United States, 325 U. S. 1. It is true that in England of olden times men were tried for treason for mental indiscretions such as imagining the death of the living. But our Constitution was intended to end such prosecutions. Only in the darkest periods of human history has any Western government concerned itself with mere belief, however eccentric or mischievous, when it has not matured into overt action; and if that practice survives anywhere, it is in the Communist countries whose philosophies we loathe.

How far we must revert toward these discredited systems if we are to sustain this oath is made vivid by the Court's reasoning that the Act applies only to those "whose beliefs strongly indicate a will to engage in political strikes . . . " Since Congress has never outlawed the political strike itself, the Court must be holding that Congress may root out mere ideas which, even if acted upon, would not result in crime. It is a strange paradox if one may be forbidden to have an idea in mind that he is free to put into execution. But, apart from this, efforts to weed erroneous beliefs from the minds of men have always been supported by the argument which the Court invokes today, that beliefs are springs to action, that evil thoughts tend to become forbidden deeds. Probably so. But if power to forbid acts includes power to forbid contemplating them, then the power of government over beliefs is as unlimited as its power over conduct, and the way is open to force disclosure of attitudes on all manner of social, economic, moral and political issues.

These suggestions may be discounted as fanciful and far-fetched. But we must not forget that in our country are evangelists and zealots of many different political, economic and religious persuasions whose fanatical conviction is that all thought is divinely classified into two kinds—that which is their own and that which is false and dangerous. Communists are not the only faction which would put us all in mental strait jackets. Indeed all ideological struggles, religious or political, are primarily battles for dominance over the minds of people. It is not to be supposed that the age-old readiness to try to convert minds by pressure or suppression, instead of reason and persuasion, is extinct. Our protection against all kinds of fanatics and extremists, none of whom can be trusted with unlimited power over others, lies not in their forbearance but in the limitations of our Constitution.

It happens that the belief in overthrow of representative government by force and violence which Congress conditionally proscribes is one that I agree is erroneous. But "if there is any principle of the Constitution that more imperatively calls for attachment than any other, it is the principle of free thought—not free thought for those who agree with us but freedom for the thought that we hate." Holmes, J., dissenting in United States vs. Schwimmer, 279 U. S. 644, 654-55. Moreover, in judging the power to deny a privilege to think otherwise, we cannot ignore the fact that our own Government originated in revolution and is legitimate only if overthrow by force may sometimes be justified. That circumstances sometimes justify it is not Communist doctrine but an old American belief.

The men who led the struggle forcibly to overthrow lawfully constituted British authority found moral support by asserting a natural law under which their revolution was justified, and they broadly proclaimed these beliefs in the document basic to our freedom. Such sentiments have also been given ardent and rather extravagant expression by Americans of undoubted patriotism. Most of these utterances were directed against a tyranny which left no way to change by suffrage. It seems to me a perversion of their meaning to quote them, as the Communists often do, to sanction violent attacks upon a representative government which does afford such means. But while I think Congress may make it a crime to take one overt step to use or to incite violence or force against our Government, I do not see how in the light of our history a mere belief that one has a natural right under some circumstances to do so can subject an American citizen to prejudice any more than possession of any other erroneous belief. Can we say that men of our time must not even think about the propositions on which our own Revolution was justified? Or may they think, provided they reach only one conclusion—and that the opposite of Mr. Jefferson's?

While the Governments, State and Federal, have expansive powers to curtail action, and some small powers to curtail speech or writing, I think neither has any power, on any pretext, directly or indirectly to attempt foreclosure of any line of thought. Our forefathers found the evils of free thinking more to be endured than the evils of inquest or suppression. They gave the status of almost absolute individual rights to the outward means of expressing belief. I cannot believe that they left open a way for legislation to embarrass or impede the mere intellectual processes by which those expressions of belief are examined and formulated. This is not only because individual thinking presents no danger to society, but because thoughtful, bold and independent minds are essential to wise and considered self-government.

Progress generally begins in skepticism about accepted truths. Intellectual freedom means the right to reexamine much that has been long taken for granted. A free man must be a reasoning man, and he must dare to doubt what a legislative or electoral majority may most passionately assert. The danger that citizens will think wrongly is serious, but less dangerous than atrophy from not thinking at all. Our Constitution relies on our electorate's complete ideological freedom to nourish independent and responsible intelligence and preserve our democracy from that submissiveness, timidity and herd-mindedness of the masses which would foster a tyranny of mediocrity. The priceless heritage of our society is the unrestricted constitutional right of each member to think as he will. Thought control is a copyright of totalitarianism, and we have no claim to it. It is not the function of our Government to keep the citizen from falling into error; it is the function of the citizen to keep the Government from falling into error. We could justify any censorship only when the censors are better shielded against error than the censored.

The idea that a Constitution should protect individual nonconformity is essentially American and is the last thing in the world that Communists will tolerate. Nothing exceeds the bitterness of their demands for freedom for themselves in this country except the bitterness of their intolerance of freedom for others where they are in power. An exaction of some profession of belief or nonbelief is precisely what the Communist would enact — each individual must adopt the ideas that are common to the ruling group. Their whole philosophy is to minimize man as an individual and to increase the power of man acting in the mass. If any single characteristic distinguishes our democracy from communism, it is our recognition of the individual as a personality rather than as a soulless part in the jigsaw puzzle that is the collectivist state.

I adhere to views I have heretofore expressed, whether the court agreed, West Virginia Board of Education v. Barnette, 319 U. S. 624, or disagreed, see dissenting opinion in Ballard v. United States, 322 U. S. 78, 92, that our Constitution excludes both general and local governments from the realm of opinions and ideas, beliefs and doubts, heresy and orthodoxy, political, religious or scientific. The right to speak out, or to publish, also is protected when it does not clearly and presently threaten some injury to society which the Government has a right to protect. Separate opinion, Thomas v. Collins, 323 U. S. 516. But I have protested the degradation of these constitutional liberties to immunize and approve mob movements, whether those mobs be religious or political, radical or conservative, liberal or illiberal, Dougas v. City of Jeanette, 319 U. S. 157; Terminiello v. Chicago, 337 U. S. 1, 13, or to authorize pressure groups to use amplifying devices to drown out the natural voice and destroy the peace of other individuals. Saia v. People of New York, 334 U. S. 558; Kovacs v. Cooper, 336 U. S. 77. And I have pointed out that men cannot enjoy their right to personal freedom if fanatical masses, whatever their mission, can strangle individual thoughts and invade personal privacy. Martin v. Struthers, 319 U. S. 141, dissent at 166. A catalogue of rights was placed in our Constitution, in my view, to protect the individual in his individuality, and neither statutes which put those rights at the mercy of officials nor judicial decisions which put them at the mercy of the mob are consistent with its text or its spirit.

I think that under our system, it is time enough for the law to lay hold of the citizen when he acts illegally, or in some rare circumstances when his thoughts are given illegal utterance. I think we must let his mind alone.

IV.

THE task of this Court to maintain a balance between liberty and authority is never done, because new conditions today upset the equilibriums of yesterday. The see-saw between freedom and power makes up most of the history of governments, which, as Bryce points out, on a long view consists of repeating a painful cycle from anarchy to tyranny and back again. The Court's day-to-day task is to reject as false, claims in the name of civil liberty which, if granted, would paralyze or impair authority to defend existence of our society, and to reject as false, claims in the name of security which would undermine our freedoms and open the way to oppression. These are the competing considerations involved in judging any measures which government may take to suppress or disadvantage its opponents and critics.

I conclude that today's task can only be discharged by holding that all parts of this oath which require disclosure of overt acts of affiliation or membership in the Communist Party is within the competence of Congress to enact and that any parts of it that call for a disclosure of belief unconnected with any overt act is beyond its power.

French Firm's Liberty Bells All Ring True

By Carter L. Davidson

PARIS.—Fifty-two Liberty Bells, reproductions of the one that rang out America's independence, have been made in a 150-year-old French foundry to herald this year's United States Savings Bond drive.

They are exact—except for the crack which made a historic relic of the original, now hanging in Philadelphia's Independence Hall. The Treasury Department, which ordered the reproductions as bond drive symbols for each of the 48 States, the District of Columbia and the Territories, left out the crack because "these bells must ring."

The original Liberty Bell, made in England, first was rung a few days after July 4, 1776. The British threw it into the Delaware River the next year, but it was recovered and rung on July 4 every year until 1835. It rang again July 8 that year to toll the funeral of Chief Justice John Marshall. That day it cracked.

The Treasury had experts take exact measurements of the original and picked a foundry in the little French town of Annecy to make the reproductions. There Henri Paccard runs the factory his great-grandfather started in 1794.

Same Oak Grain

FROM the first rough mould around which more than a ton of copper alloy is poured, down to the final delicate tuning, the 39-year-old Paccard keeps a close watch on his 65 artisans. He can take over any of their jobs.

Actual cost of the bells is unknown, for they are being paid for, as a gift to the Government, by America's copper industry. The Ford Motor Co. is hauling the bells from the Brooklyn Navy Yard to each State capital and Washington.

So exact are the replicas that oak timbers for the bell stocks were cut so the grain would be like that of the original. Bolts fastening the stocks to the bells had to be especially cast. The Liberty Bell had four-sided nuts and those commonly used in bellmaking now have six sides.

Wax molds of the letters on the original bell were carved by hand and appear on each replica:

"Proclaim liberty throughout the land.
"Unto all the inhabitants thereof.
"By order of the Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania."

A Mud Specialist

ONE of the most skilled artisans in the foundry is 65-year-old Edouard De Reydet, whose job is making mud.

Working with the care of a chemist, De Reydet prepares the mud from which a mould is built. The ingredients: special clean earth, powdered fine, plus egg whites and horse manure.

"Bell makers for years have been trying to find a substitute for horse manure, but they haven't found it yet," says Paccard. "Why whites of egg? I don't know, but you can't mould a bell without it."

After the molten metal is poured and the bell is cooled and polished, the artistry of bellmaking begins. Tuners with delicate cutters, tuning forks and little rubber hammers work on the one-ton hulk as though it were a Stradivarius.

With the bell on a slowly revolving turntable, the tuner adjusts a tiny knife that shaves away the metal until the proper tone reaches his practiced ear. The tuners are allowed to be wrong—up to one-sixty fourth of an octave. That is one-eighth of the note made by a single piano key. Each bell is tuned to six different tones, ranging from the top to the flaring edge.

Capacity of the Paccard plant is about 600 bells a year. Most of the orders now are for the recasting of ancient bells partially destroyed in the war.

D. C.'s Liberty Bell Will Tour and Toll

THE District's Liberty Bell will tour the city during the Independence Drive opening Monday, pealing an old note with a new refrain: "Save for Your Independence—Buy United States Savings Bonds."

The District's quota in the 650-million-dollar drive ending July 4 is $6,500,000 in Series E Bonds.

Besides making the rounds of the city, the Liberty Bell will be displayed at many locations where the public can inspect and hear it. Edward C. Baltz, chairman of the D. C. Savings Bond Division, is arranging the itinerary. He also plans to have the city's church bells join in signaling the start of the campaign at noon Monday.

3 Centuries Of Suspicion

THE issue about declassifying scientific secrets, so much a problem now, apparently has been an issue ever since there were discoveries to keep secret.

The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists has run across an item reflecting on the problem in 1651. It is a letter received by the famous German chemist, Johann Rudolph Glauber, warning him to keep his discoveries close to his vest.

Glauber had already had trouble with one Christopher Farner, a rascally acquaintance who misappropriated many of Glauber's chemical "secrets" and offered them for sale. Glauber's adviser warned him:

"Thou has written too clearly, and again too manifestly; beware lest God stir not up against thee another new Farnerian Devil, to punish thy easiness (or forwardness) of publishing such mysteries . . . For all wicked Men are not blind, I know many Farners that are defiled with all kinds of Evil, and yet not all of them so blinded as thy Farner is. Nay, Their wit is so penetrative and so clear-sighted, that should they but read the divine Books that thou has published there would not be a secret in all nature, but they would know it; nay more, they would in a short time perfect that Philosophick work. Which, should it come to pass, (the more's the grief) what a many Slaughtors, what Whoredoms, how many ruinings! And what evil of all sorts would break in upon mankind; of the which, thou thyself (though innocent) wouldst be the cause."

It's High Time the Farmer Threw Away Crutches

By Paul C. Johnson

The following is a digest of an address delivered by Mr. Johnson, editor of the Prairie Farmer, at the University of Minnesota Editors Short Course, on May 5.

LESS than 100 years ago we were an agricultural Nation, with five families on the land needed to supply the food for one family carrying on industrial or city work. We have completely reversed that, so now it takes less than a fifth of our population to grow the food we need, with something to spare.

As a matter of fact, in our most efficient and most modernized farming sections, the ratio is more nearly 10 to 1. This means that 9 families out of 10, or 4 out of 5 for the country as a whole, have been freed to do other things besides grubbing a living out of the soil. They can build homes, manufacture automobiles and refrigerators, operate schools and hospitals. And these are the things by which we measure our standard of living.

Good farming has made it possible for the average American to take food for granted and go on to improve his living standard by the many other things he can earn.

Mr. Average American needs to spend about 25 percent of his income for food. In England, the cost is around 45 percent, including government subsidy. In Italy, it is around 70 percent. In countries like India and China, about 90 percent of the average man's income must go for the food to hold body and soul together.

While only about one seventh of our national income is in agriculture, around 55 percent of all people in this country are farming or in work that is directly dependent on farming. It's interesting to know that of nine million individual businesses in the United States, six million are farm businesses.

Bad State of Mind

BUT THERE is danger in pounding our chests and expounding the indispensability of agriculture. I feel uncomfortable when a farmer declares that agriculture is the key to all prosperity and that the Government must take care of the farmer first. There is a good deal of truth in what the man says, but the state of mind is bad for everybody and especially bad for the farmer himself.

I have heard top-flight industrialists and economists say that the prosperity of agriculture is so important to this country that we can well afford to give agriculture preferred treatment. I cannot agree. I'm quite sure that "hothouse treatment" may actually destroy the productiveness which has made our agriculture great, and may result in progressive poverty rather than guaranteed prosperity.

There is a warning for us in the public reaction against farmers which has grown at an alarming rate during the past year or two. While much of this feeling it based on misinformation to which both the press and the radio have contributed, it is an ill omen of what may come if agriculture permits itself to be pushed out on a limb by politicians looking for votes and industrial people looking for an indirect guarantee of good business.

We are already too far out on that limb. We must revise our national farm program into something we can live with, something the public will support and, above all, something that will insure an increasingly productive and efficient agriculture.

Farming for Uncle

WHY ARE we having so much trouble with our present commodity support programs? It's because they tell the producer a lie.

Whenever the support price is higher than what the market will support, then the producer is being misinformed. The minute the farmer starts raising products for Uncle Sam, we're in real trouble. Uncle can't pay Senators and Supreme Court judges in bushels of corn or sacks of potatoes.

Our leading farm organizations have not asked for the present farm support levels. It is to the everlasting credit of farm leaders that most of them have tried to get rid of the subsidies. But the political ins want to stay in, and the political outs want to get in. Both seem to think that votes are to be had in exchange for Government checks and special privilege.

Our commodity support approach to the farm problem has been warped away from its original purposes. Too many people want to think of it in terms of an income guarantee from the Government to the farmer. Because the marketing problem has somehow become confused with a political philosophy, the various crops and commodities have been out of step with each other, and there has been too much disregard for a basic fact of a free economy: Increased efficiency must be shared.

The Brannan Plan

IN THIS respect, our support programs have been pretty much in the same class with the much publicized Brannan Plan.

Mr. Brannan proposed that we keep all our present supports on basic crops at levels even higher than those which have already gotten us into trouble. But he went beyond this and suggested that since perishables such as milk, eggs and potatoes could not be successfully handled in storage, we should substitute the direct income payment to the farmer.

His plan had one very attractive feature. These products were to be turned over to the consumer at whatever they would bring. But remember that the farmer would be paid according to his production and Uncle Sam would foot the bill for the difference between what the farmer got in the market and what he should have had according to the standard set up by Mr. Brannan.

What's wrong with this plan? Well, many people, including myself, do not like the idea of the farmer being dependent on Uncle Sam for his income check. Any way you look at it, the income guarantee idea heads down the socialistic path toward stunted production and dependence on Government.

Righ now we are wrestling with acreage allotments. Hanging over this controversy is a fear that acreage allotments will not reduce production, and that the marketing quotas which are to follow can be enforced only by police state methods.

The Brannan plan would be no different, probably worse. The only way Uncle Sam could get off the hot seat and wean consumers away from their free food ride would be to slap severe quotas on farm production and reduce that production to the point where food prices would rise again.

Point of Dependency

AT WHAT POINT would it be politically expedient to stabilize these Government prices? If I read my political history right, they would try to stabilize them at the point where the farmer could not live without his Government check, but where he would be restrained from embarrassing his bureaucratic supervisors with too much efficiency or too great production. As production controls progressed from big crops to little crops and from feed crops to food products, there would be a thriving production of red tape, and much political pap to be distributed.

Do you know that down in the tobacco country your allotment, that is, the permissin of the Government to grow tobacco, may be worth as much as $2000 an acre on $200-an-acre land? I am told that the farmer committees which are administering the tobacco program are doing a nice job, but I cannot shake the fear that here is an opportunity for political graft which will catch up with us some day.

We are hearing more and more these days about the two-price plan, which you will recognize as the old McNary-Haugen bill over again. This plan, too, has its attractive features, but its flaws are clearer today than in the McNary-Haugen days.

The two-price plan calls for dumping of some kind. We know now it isn't so easy to dump abroad. But it isn't easy to dump in our own country, either.

We could make a certain amount of corn and wheat into alcohol and pass a law that all gasoline would have to include a certain percentage of this fuel. But that would be robbing the fertility of our soil for an inferior and expensive purpose.

Disaster Unlikely

ALL RIGHT, what should be done?

I believe that now is the time to move in the direction of a free competitive market and greater self-reliance on the part of agriculture. Of course, the patient trembles at the thought of throwing away the crutches. But if we don't do it now, we never will.

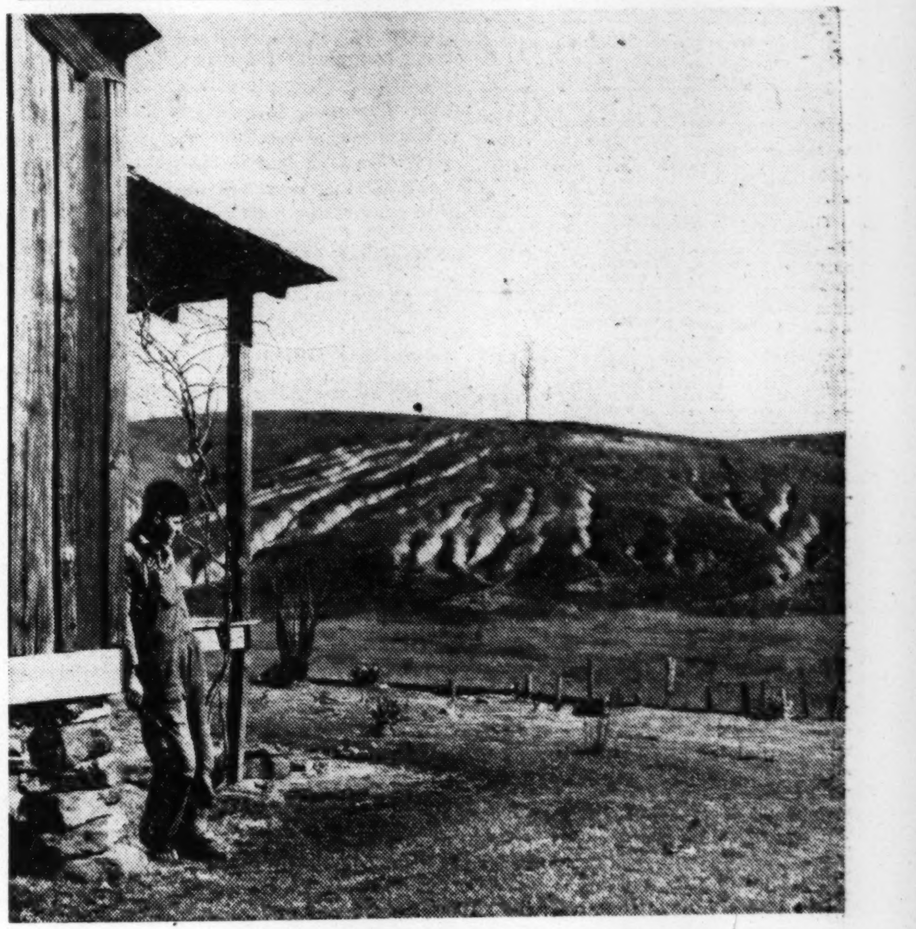
Our debt is in good shape. Our efficiency is high. Our customers have money in their pockets, and the city people are outnumbering the food producers by more and more every day.

We'll have some falls when we start taking away this makeshift scaffolding, but I doubt if there will be any widespread disaster. We can still take out certain insurance policies in the name of security and social conscience.

I would like to propose three ingredients of a sound, long-time farm program that could go nicely with a farm economy based on efficiency and the competitive market.

In the first place, I believe that the soil conservation principle is the only justification for Government payments to farm people. City people have a stake in the conservation of the land. The farmer is always under pressure to market the fertility of his soil as quickly as possible The mortgage needs to be paid, and the children need college education. A carefully worked out system of conservation payments intended to rest and rebuild land would also relieve the farmer's pressure to cash in. The public would get its money's worth in the assurance of a future food supply.

In the second place, I believe the present support machinery should become a standby program for use only in emergency. I believe a price floor should be a floor and not an income guarantee. We had better set up the program in such a way that the politicians cannot change its original purpose.



The bleak outlook of an Alabama tenant farmer. "The problem of the marginal farmer," says Editor Johnson, "is not one of price or of Government subsidy. It doesn't make so much difference whether you get $3 or $5 a hundred for milk if you are trying to support a family on three scrub cows"

Marginal Farmers

IN THE third place, I believe that we should make a real study of the reasons for poverty among farm people. The problem of the marginal farmer is not one of price or of Government subsidy. It doesn't make so much difference whether you get $3 or $5 a hundred for milk if you are trying to support a family on three scrub cows.

No, the problem of the underprivileged farmer is one of education, or credit, of building his farm into a going concern. I believe the Government can do a great deal along this line without tying up the processes of agriculture in a rigid bureaucratic system. I believe we can extend our present activities through the extension service and the Farmers Home Administration so that we can meet this problem more adequately. We may want to go a step further and think in terms of building industries in rural areas to take care of people who cannot possibly earn a decent living from the land.

We have been drifting in our national thinking toward the notion that the means are justified by the ends. When you get down to cases, that's the philosophy of the Communist. We want prosperity on our farms, but the means by which we achieve it are important, too—very, very important.

An Inelastic Honor

No 'Give' in Hirohito's Garter

By Edwin Newman

Mr. Newman is on the NBC staff in London.

LONDON—High on the agenda of the Big Three Foreign Ministers Conference here is the subject of a peace treaty with Japan. It is a complex matter with unpredictable consequences. Of all possible questions involved, however, surely the least momentous is this: Could Emperor Hirohito again become a Knight Companion of the Garter?

Everybody knows that Hirohito paid a high price for Pearl Harbor. He lost many of his imperial prerogatives and most of his royal prestige. He now occasionally shakes hands with some of his lesser subjects, and a few Japanese even have been persuaded that he is not directly descended from the Sun God.

Here in England, Hirohito paid yet another price. Like the late King Victor Emmanuel of Italy before him, he was expelled from the Order of the Garter.

Many Americans will find it hard to believe that an Order of the Garter really exists. But it does; in fact, a meeting in full regalia was held at Windsor Castle April 27. And while expulsion may seem a small thing alongside some of the other blows Japan and Hirohito suffered, admission to the Garter Order is the highest honor a British monarch can bestow on a foreigner.

Expulsion means that Hirohito is not deemed fit company for the successors to King Arthur's Knights of the Round Table. Moreover, rare though it may be to be accorded the honor of membership, it is rarer still to be a former member. Hirohito is the only living person who can claim that dubious honor.

Only 25 Members

IT SEEMS safe to say that Hirohito probably did nothing he would not otherwise have done as a consequence of being a Knight Companion (honorary) of the Garter. He may well have had only the vaguest notion of what it is. Actually, it is the most illustrious order of knighthood in existence. It should properly be prefaced with the words, "most noble."

Its members—excluding royal princes and those who are honorary—are limited to 25, and the number at the moment is even less than that. Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip were made members on their wedding eve, and were formally inducted later with Field Marshals Montgomery, Alexander and Alanbrooke and Admiral Mountbatten. The Garter is first among the British orders; all others—Thistle, St. Patrick, Bath, Star of India, St. Michael and St. George, Indian Empire, Royal Victorian and British Empire—rank behind.

Exactly when the Order of the Garter came into being, nobody knows. It was founded by Edward III about the time he was putting a good deal of money into making Windsor Castle more livable, around 1344, but apparently it did not get going until three or four years later. Treasury accounts of the Prince of Wales in November, 1348, show him giving 24 garters to the Knights of the Society of the Garter.

The Knights' costume was considerably more elaborate than merely a gold-edged garter, however. Even today it calls for a mantel of dark blue velvet, lined with taffeta, with a star embroidered on the left shoulder, a hood and overcoat of crimson velvet, a gold collar, a hat with ostrich and heron plumes (which are fastened with a band of diamonds) and two badges known as the Great and Lesser George. The garter itself is of dark blue velvet edged with gold, and with a buckle and pendant also of gold. Men wear it below the left knee, women on the arm.

Costumes on Loan

NOBODY, of course, can buy such costumes in these days of austerity, so officials of the order keep a pool of 12 or 15 on hand which have been turned back after members' deaths. They are lent out when the King calls a meeting, which he does about once a year at Windsor Castle.

Even a remote connection with such an organization would seem to be enough for Hirohito to lose, but he also was entitled to a stall in the royal chapel at Windsor. He could have had his helmet, sword and crest posted over the stall, but never did. His banner hung there, however—and was taken down. When I visited the chapel a short time ago, the stall was unmarked and unassigned. King George had chosen no one for Hirohito's place.

If there were a peace treaty, then, could he again become Knight Companion (honorary) Hirohito of the Garter?

This is the sort of information that some devoted Britons spend lifetimes collecting. Getting it from them led through Buckingham Palace, the Royal College of Heraldry, a man with the remarkable title of Garter Principal King at Arms (with side glances at the Rouge Croix and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod) and the central chancery of the Orders of Knighthood at St. James's Palace.

At the last named, the opinion was offered that Hirohito never would make it. A few people got back in who were thrown out during the first World War, but nobody has been reinstated this time. If there is a Japanese Emperor a hundred years from now, he might have a better chance. But not Hirohito.

Which may lead him to ponder on the motto printed in gold letters on the garter itself: Honi soit qui mal y pense—Evil to him who evil thinks.

President Laughs Off GOP Slogan of was that he didn't have the cash.

One task Mr. Truman has devoted every waking hour to is removing the last percussion cap from the GOP's "Liberty vs. Socialism" slogan. At nearly every stop he lists some tried and tested undertaking that has also been labeled "socialistic" in its day.

When he names such accepted institutions as women's suffrage, farm experiment stations and farm subsidies as former targets for the "socialism" charge, he has the crowds smiling.

His obvious strategy is to laugh the slogan off the hustings by November.

Hectic as life is aboard this dawn-to-dusk Chautauqua special, all agree this trip is a much smoother performance than its 1948 model.

At this writing there have been no serious "boners"—certainly none comparable to the time Mr. Truman, in the heat of the last campaign, dedicated an Idaho airfield to the wrong person.

There is more than a little evidence that every hamlet this train stops at has been thoroughly "cased" by researchers and Mr. Truman briefed in advance on the "our town" color. Thus the President knows more about some of them than the natives.

Invariably they are pleased as Punch when a President of the United States rolls into their own back yard, tells them what a fine place they have there, what they grow, what their politics are and how many of the local founding fathers cut a notch in American history.

To the uninitiate aboard, it looks like a mind-reading act. And the natives are so flattered they want him to come back. They may even buy some of his wares.

Red Journalism Can Be Precarious

By Edwin D. Gritz

Post Reporter

THERE hardly can be a greater classic in Soviet journalism than the story of Comrade I. Novikov—he who wrote "How Surakan Kainazarova Grows Sugar Beet."

For all that is known, there may no longer be a Comrade I. Novikov, journalist—all because of "How Surakan Kainazarova Grows Sugar Beet." And if the good comrade still exists, he certainly must be far more circumspect.

The story is not widely known. And, in Russia, those who know it would obviously tell it without a single snicker. But it happened, as Mrs. K. and the editorial board of the Sotsialisticheskoye Zemledeliye can well testify.

Comrade Novikov, it seems, followed party dictates too well—so well that he neglected such prosaic things as facts in order to write something "national in form and socialist in content . . ."

Letter to Editor

AS THE STORY goes, he was assigned to write a piece about Mrs. K.'s great prowess in growing sugar beets—a piece which could be distributed as another testament to Socialist preeminence.

Afire with enthusiasm, this he did. But hardly had his fine story been published when there came a letter to the editors. It was from Sugar Beet Champion Surakan Kainazarova herself. A woman of the soil, unversed in socialist niceties, she was angry.

To say the least, said Mrs. K, "I was rather surprised by this publication. The things I. Novikov tells of in the pamphlet have nothing in common with my experience."

Mrs. K. then recounted how "one day a stranger appeared in our kolkhoz" and introduced himself as Ivan Mikhailovich Novikov. He "announced that he had come to write a book about my experience."

That was all right with Mrs. K., since, being a champion beet grower, many "comrades, including journalists, have come to me to get to know my experience of obtaining high yields of sugar beet.

"One thing surprised me, however—Novikov was not interested in the agricultural technique used by my link (team). After asking a few questions and getting the answers, my visitor left quickly."

The letter, as translated by the Soviet Studies project at the University of Glasgow, reveals that when the pamphlet appeared, Mrs. K. was indignant "that there was not a word in it about my experience, what Comrade Novikov related in it being merely a rehash of the textbooks on cultivation technique for sugar beet."

But to make it more convincing, said Mrs. K., "Novikov freely talks about 'chats' with me. On page 19 I read: 'Have I written your words down correctly, Surakan? Perhaps I've missed something out?'"

Wrong Fertilizer

THAT was just too much for Sugar Beet Champion Surakan Kainazarova, idol of the Kalinin Kolkhoz. She protested to the appropriate authorities and Comrade Novikov apparently was told to revise his piece.

But, said Mrs. K., this did little good: "It is true that he slightly 'revised' his pamphlet, added some more recent facts to it. But essentially it remained the same."

For instance, pointed out Mrs. K., the statement remained that "fertilizers are the basis of beet cultivation," and this is untrue, because fertilizers are only part of more complex ministrations.

This was insignificant, however, in comparison with Comrade Novikov's declaration "that I, Kainazarova, put on to the autumn-ploughed land fertilizers which have a quick action: dung, ash and sulphate of ammonia.

"I have never done this, because everyone knows," emphasized Mrs. K., "that they cannot be put on autumn-ploughed land. I put horse manure and superphosphates on autumn-ploughed land—and dung, ash and other fertilizers during the presowing cultivation."

To set the record straight, the champ also revealed that she never watered her beets before cleaning, as Novikov somehow deduced she did.

After pointing out that there were other "pearls" of misstatement, Mrs. K. declared in conclusion that Comrade Novikov even "managed to decline my name wrong 98 times in the 28 pages of the pamphlet."

The letter was formally signed, "Surakan Kainazarova, Hero of Socialist Labor, Vice President of the Supreme Soviet of the Kirghizian S.S.R."

Well, the upshot of it all was that a third version of "How Surakan Kainazarova Grows Sugar Beet" was ordered. This time the work was done by one S. Khalturin and was edited by Comrade Bagramov.

As for the editors of Sotsialisticheskoye Zemledeliye, which means Socialist Agriculture, they conceded that "pamphlets about the achievements of masters are sometimes written by people who know little about agriculture."

U. S. Bases are Jap Reds' Trump Card

concluded"; "absolute opposition to military bases in Japan"; "opposition to anti-Soviet war propaganda"; "opposition to Japan's participation in any military alliance," such as a Pacific alliance, and, of course, the inevitable, "Down with the traitorous Yoshida cabinet."

For good measure, Nosaka lauded Soviet Russia by name as Japan's stanch friend. The local Reds packing the hall loved it.

One week later, Akahata (Red Flag), published an 18-point anti-American proclamation demanding the withdrawal of all American troops from Japan.

The proclamation itself was largely a rehash of the "national independence" demand, directed to "workers, farmers, intellectuals, small and medium industrialists, racial capitalists and patriots."

What made it significant was not the novelty of what was said, but the fact that it was published shortly after a Communist Diet member was specifically warned by General MacArthur's headquarters that if the party attacked United States policy, its leaders would be held responsible.

General MacArthur's headquarters, while keeping close watch on this propaganda "offensive," has to date displayed a laudable sense of proportion and refused to be stampeded into repressive action.

In the face of Communist statements which could be held to constitute a violation of the Potsdam Declaration, the press laws and the occupation statutes, the attitude of high-ranking SCAP officials has been that words are one thing and action another.

However, General MacArthur's statement, on the third anniversary of the new constitution, May 3, that Japan's Communists had "assumed the role of an avowed satellite of an international predatory force" and that this fact "at once brings into question its right to the further benefits and protection of the country and laws it would subvert and raises doubt as to whether it should longer be regarded as a constitutionally recognized political movement," has been widely interpreted as serving notice that the policy of toleration could change overnight.

Meanwhile, SCAP officials view the growing extremism preached by Japan's Communists as evidence of the party's weakness as a parliamentary force—and of Moscow's realization of the fact that it is unlikely ever to gain control of Japan by parliamentary means.

The emperor "boner," and the Soviet refusal even to discuss the fate of some 300,000 Japanese war prisoners who are unaccouted for, have undoubtedly alienated many moderate workers who voted Communist at the general election of January, 1949. On the other hand, it was the Communists who astutely forced the antibases issue into the open and thus obliged all opposition parties to fall into line in opposing the grant of permanent bases in Japan to the United States. (Significantly, at Tokyo's May Day turnout, a favorite theme of the hundreds of placards carried by the marching tens of thousands was, "Hate foreign military bases.")

In spearheading—for their own purposes—the opposition to American bases on Japanese soil, the Japanese Communists are playing their trump card, a card that might pay off handsomely—in votes in Japan, and in getting the party back into the good graces of the Kremlin—were it the only issue. But another issue is attracting increasing public attention—the fact that the party is under heavy pressure from some of its own leaders to declare unequivocally it would not oppose the entry of a Russian army into Japan. And to every Japanese patriot (which means to 99½ out of every 100 Japanese) that is something else again. Only the few thousands who form the hard core of Japanese communism are as determinedly anti-Japanese and pro-Communist as that!

Mr. Chavez' Reply

When Senator McCarthy launched his vilification campaign, he ought to have realized that mud would be returned for mud and poison for poison. No public figure can go on a rampage of character assassination without himself becoming a target for similar attacks. Not only that, he also brings inevitably into the line of counterfire all those who support his charges. On Friday Senator Chavez sailed into Louis Budenz with what seems to us more devastating effect than any of the maulings the Wisconsin Senator has inflicted on his victims.

In the more objective portions of his address Senator Chavez offered a number of constructive observations and suggestions. ". . . we are providing a platform," he said, "from which every unreliable and discredited individual can proclaim to the world that the United States is rotting with subversives." Certainly that must now be recognized as a grave mistake from the viewpoint of any American who is concerned with the success of our foreign policy abroad. No less serious is the fact, also emphasized by Senator Chavez, that we are tending to bring about a situation within the United States where "there can be only two opinions—the Communist and the anti-Communist." Hysteria, persecution and hate are substituted for temperate discussion of differences between political groups. At the very moment when the people need to be cool-headed and united in facing the Communist threat to our freedom, emotional appeals and wild charges inflame the public mind.

Senator Chavez agrees with Senator Flanders that the Tydings Subcommittee should hereafter proceed in nonpublic sessions. At least irresponsible accusations and dubious testimony can be weighed and tested before it is broadcast to the world. That should not mean any whitewashing or minimization of any ugly facts that can be established. But we think it is imperative for the Senate to shift from rumor broadcasting to fact-finding. As Mr. Chavez concluded:

> The American people are entitled to know the facts. But the American people do not want, I am certain, the United States Senate to be turned into a platform for every half-baked gossip, every suspicious or vengeful character, every mountebank and scandalmonger who revels in the glory of prattling publicity.

To which every sane American will fervently agree.

Marital Affairs Counsel

The lawyers who voted against creation of a marital affairs counsel in the District Court here, after that plan was debated before the Bar Association, could scarcely have been acting out of concern for the public interest. The movement to improve the existing judicial machinery in dealing with divorce cases was initiated by Chief Judge Laws when he named a committee of judges to study the matter. Judge Tamm went to Detroit to observe the operation of the marital affairs counsel system which has so remarkably enhanced the efficiency of that city's courts in the domestic relations sphere. The president of the Bar Association also set up a committee which brought in a favorable report signed by ten of its twelve members. Among the lawyers who have given the problem special attention, therefore, the plan has been generally accepted. To our way of thinking these indorsements are far more impressive than the casual action of the Bar Association.

At present, according to Judge Laws, the courts find themselves in a position of impotence and futility in dealing with divorce cases. They must decide controversies inflamed by emotions without adequate facts to go on. Even after their judgments are handed down, enforcement is on a hit-and-miss basis. The judges feel that they need a marital relations counsel, with a trained investigative staff, to supply them with factual information as to the resources of divorced couples and the fitness of those claiming custody of minor children. The marital affairs counsel would also receive all alimony payments and turn them over to divorced wives and children, thus providing an accurate record of payments made and giving the counsel an opportunity to move promptly against any party in default. The existing Domestic Relations Commissioner does not have sufficient authority or staff to serve these purposes.

What the judges are proposing is that they be given administrative assistance in the domestic relations field that will make their judgments effective. To our way of thinking, this is of great importance. If injustice flourishes for want of adequate facts and prompt action, the people will lose confidence in our judicial system. If cases involving the breaking up of family ties are bungled, the result will almost inevitably be increased juvenile delinquency and crime and increased demands on public relief. We hope that the marital affairs counsel bill will meet with favor in Congress in spite of the bar's objections.

Small Business

At least three of the five major measures proposed by President Truman to overcome the financial handicaps of small business appear to us to meet long felt needs. They are the recommendation for (1) Federal insurance of commercial bank loans up to $25,000 patterned after FHA-insured loans for home improvements, (2) establishment of national investment companies to provide equity capital and long-term loans for small business, and, (3) a plan for setting up a clearing house in the Department of Commerce to collect and supply scientific, engineering, and managerial information to small concerns that cannot afford to employ expensive research staffs of their own.

There is a question as to whether the provision for limiting the maturity of the proposed type of insured loans to 5 years may not be too restrictive. The Federal Reserve officials, for instance, allege that the 5-year limitation on industrial loans for working capital purposes that the Federal Reserve Banks are authorized to make, or to, underwrite when made by member banks, is too severe. The President proposes to repeal this Federal Reserve loan provision and substitute a self-sustaining system of loan insurance by private banks, subject to compliance with federally approved standards. Under proper safeguards this insurance plan would, in our opinion, strengthen, rather than weaken, the private banking system. For it would enable private commercial banks to grant loans to small businesses for working capital purposes that they would not dare to undertake in the absence of such protection, thereby reducing the pressure for direct Government loans.

The proposed national investment companies are designed to meet a different kind of need—provision of equity capital and long-term loans for small business. Our commercial banks are not in a position to assume the risks of financing the long-term capital requirements of small business. Moreover, it is virtually impossible for small or even medium sized businesses to sell securities in the open market. The cost of loan flotations in small amounts is prohibitive, and the issues of small companies are hard to sell.

In the past small businesses have usually been financed out of the savings of owners and local people. But the so-called small business of today would have been considered a few decades ago a big business. Costs have mounted, too, thus increasing the capital needs of going businesses and the capital required to start a business. National investment companies would, therefore, fill a gap in the financing structure by providing a channel through which pooled savings available for long-term use could be more safely invested.

In the beginning such companies might not attract private investment support, since it will take a good deal of time to build them up, and the risks of loss, especially at the experimental stage, are considerable. For that reason the initial capital of the new investment companies would probably have to be provided by public or semipublic agencies, such as the Federal Reserve Banks. However, if successfully launched, commercial banks would doubtless find it to their advantage to invest in the new investment companies, even if the direct returns from their holdings were small, for they would benefit indirectly from the strengthening of the capital resources of local industries that are their customers.

There is slight danger that the plans would lead to further Government encroachment in the private banking field, if private banks actively cooperate with the new investment companies and if private funds, supplied by banks and other investors, are forthcoming. Admittedly the proposal is experimental and there is some danger of its being launched on an overly ambitious scale. Color is given to this fear by the emphasis put on the importance of the program for increasing the credit aids to small business as a means of insuring a steady expansion of the economy and providing increased employment for a growing labor force. The program is rather a long-range reform that should contribute to the ultimate attainment of those objectives by strengthening the competitive standing and ability to survive of small businesses. But it would not have much immediate effect on employment or afford any great immediate stimulus to business expansion. It is not a relief measure, but a means of providing more appropriate and more adequate types of financing for small scale enterprise at all times through private banking channels, with a minimum amount of support and supervision by Government agencies.

Home Rule For Guam

Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman and Carlton Skinner, the first civil governor of the island of Guam, testified recently before a Senate Interior Affairs Subcommittee in behalf of a bill to provide civil government for the tiny American dependency in the Pacific. Enactment of the bill is long overdue. Only apathy stands in its way, and we hope heartily that this will be overcome before the session's end.

For half a century, since we acquired Guam from Spain, along with Puerto Rico and the Philippines, the island has been under Navy rule without any organic law. This means that its native inhabitants are denied American citizenship, although they proved themselves loyal Americans during the war; they lack access to Federal courts and any legal guarantee of civil rights. Governor Skinner advanced three compelling reasons for enactment of an organic law giving them civil government: (1) It is in accord with American principles of self-government; (2) self-government is essential to the growth of a self-reliant and self-supporting population; (3) self-government will stimulate commercial, agricultural and industrial growth.

In short, the granting of self-government to Guam will at once extend the splendid example of American colonial policy exhibited in connection with the Philippines and Puerto Rico and will at the same time strengthen the island as a strategic American naval, military and air base in the Orient. The United States and Guam alike will benefit from development of the island under American principles.

Too Many Drives

The large group of community leaders which met at the District Building on Wednesday was unanimous in two conclusions: (1) that there are too many fund-raising drives in the District, and (2) that something must be done about it. The gathering was undoubtedly wise in not trying to outline any specific plan for consolidation of these fund-raising drives. It is admittedly a most complicated problem. But the first step toward united community action was taken by authorizing the appointment of a committee to draw up a plan in the light of the principles that seemed to have general acceptance

The strongest appeal in the Community Chest idea is that a multiplicity of separate campaigns for funds can be eliminated. At present, however, the Chest, even though it speaks for 102 agencies, is only one of many organizations conducting city-wide appeals. Some of these agencies, being national in scope, have been unwilling in the past to join forces with local Community Chests. But the competition among them has become so keen that all are likely to suffer if no means of combining their drives can be found. Many large industrial firms have already forbidden multiple drives in their organizations by limiting solicitations to one each year for the combined benefit of many participating agencies. This movement will grow rapidly in communities that do not succeed in establishing some sort of united services campaign.

But it is not simply a problem of inducing the Nation-wide fund-raising agencies to join in a common effort. If all the drives are to be rolled into one (or two) each year, more effective means of soliciting contributions will have to be adopted. Contributors will have to be impressed with the magnitude of the single enterprise. They will have to be encouraged to meet suggested standards of giving and to spread their payments over the year by means of payroll deductions. Education campaigns may have to be year-round affairs, even if solicitations are limited to one designated month.

Indeed, the most effective work appears to be done by permanently organized chapters of united services campaign organizations with both labor and management participating. By this means it is possible to give emphasis to the work of the many agencies without waiting for a fund-raising drive. By a united effort and better organization Detroit increased total contributions by a million and a half dollars. There is no reason why Washington cannot do proportionately as well if we have unity in making one big drive as well as unity in excluding others.

Day Of Reckoning

Speaking the other day at the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Hoffman ventured to allay some of the apocalyptic fears now rife among his countrymen. The position of the Soviet Union, he suggested, may not be as powerful as it appears to be. The tensions among the peoples within the Iron Curtain are increasing, and while a semblance of conformity to Communist rule may be enforced by the police terror, an explosion is likely at the first moment of crisis.

What would be the nature of such a crisis? Mr. Hoffman implied very broadly that he expected it to take the form of a struggle for power following the death or incapacity of Stalin. He envisaged "a period of turbulence," presumably within Russia itself, accompanied by the breaking away of the satellite nations. Mr. Hoffman did not elaborate this forecast, except by saying that he expected to live to see it fulfilled, and Mr. Hoffman recently entered upon his sixtieth year. His observations, therefore, shoued have a certain comfort for those who, dismayed by the wild and whirling words of politicians and military leaders, have been attempting with melancholy fatalism to reconcile themselves to the prospect of a civil war of universal proportions, enduring for a generation, and destructive of the last vestiges of traditional civilization.

Historically such dictatorships as Stalin's have often fallen apart upon the question of succession. In many instances succession was decided by harem intrigues and palace revolutions, but in others took the form of armed conflict between claimants. A famous historical example was the war between the sons of Darius II. It is obvious that whoever succeeds to the place of Stalin must do so with the support of the MVD or of the Red army or of both. Thus one possible result would be a kind of praetorianism. But if the MVD and the army, or a powerful part of it, chose to favor rival candidates, the result might be civil war. Mr. Hoffman did not say what other basis he had for his optimism on the score of that dark and hidden area of internal conditions in the Soviet Union.

Mother's Day Tribute

Going back over 50 years to an incident in my childhood. I am thankful that through her self-sacrificing love for her children, my mother gave me a knowledge of God's love for His children.

I can see myself, a tired-out, rebellious little girl, at bedtime stubbornly refusing to put my toys away. After repeated urging she finally spanked me so that I really felt it, and gave in. After she had turned the kerosene lamp down low, and left the room, I, still rebellious, sore in mind and body, felt sorry for no one but myself.

When I had stopped crying and given up to go to sleep, I heard the door knob turn very quietly and slowly. Something told me it was my mother, and to lie still, pretending to be asleep. She came in and up to the bed, gently laying aside the covers, to see if she had punished me too severely, weeping as she did so, and then as quietly left the room.

She lived to be over 80, and in all the years she lived, she never knew that I was aware of her coming to me that night, nor of the insight like a blessed ray of light, she had given me into a later realization of the glorious power of God's love. C. B.

Atoning for McCarthy

Now that the last frantic forward pass (China Lobby to McCarthy to Hickenlooper) has plopped into the mud, may we expect the Senate to cleanse the befouled arena by:

1. Voting full financial restitution to all of McCarthy's would-be victims for all legal and other costs which have been maliciously imposed upon them; together with an expression of the Senate's appreciation of Dr. Lattimore's courageous vindication of freedom of expression and research in the United States.

2. Instituting a thorough investigation of the China Lobby's merry-go-round of using Amereican Government funds to influence American Senators and American public opinion for the extraction from Congress of further American funds, part of which will again be used to influence American Senators, etc., etc.

3. Expelling McCarthy for perverting the Senate chamber from an honorable forum of debate to a loud-speaker for vicious slander.

"Record" Abuse

The current session of Congress has been characterized by an abuse of congressional privilege which, if not exceeding, must closely approach the record in that respect. I refer to the "leave to print" privilege of Representatives and Senators to extend their remarks in the appendix of the Congressional Record.

Members of either House can, by unanimous consent, get almost anything into the body or appendix of the Congressional Record, where it becomes frankable. Millions of copies of all manner of speeches and documents—some good, many of value only to one or a few individuals —are inserted in the Record and mailed free every year. That is one reason why the general public has to pay 3-cent letter postage, and why the postal service is being curtailed. When any matter is printed in the Congressional Record, a member has to pay only for having it reprinted. Uncle Sam furnishes the envelopes and postage, regardless of whether one or a million are used. He also pays the cost of printing in the Congressional Record, which costs about $85 a page.

Two of the most glaring and inexcusable abuses of the "leave to print" privilege are found in the series of campaign documents entitled "Happenings in Washington," 24 of which Senator Martin has inserted in the Record appendix during recent months. Each of these releases has consumed at least one page of the Record. Perhaps the most flagrant abuse of the extension privilege occurred on May 9 when Senator Langer had 47 different editorials relating to the curtailment of the postal service printed on one day in the appendix of the Record. But these are only two examples of an abuse that is widespread among members of Congress and which runs into millions of dollars a year in cost to the taxpayers.

Militarism's Course

Too many responsible Government and military officials have come to rely upon an entirely negative policy, which is impractical and unrealistic. They rely upon military might as a catch-all solution to the many complex problems of the world.

The adoption of militarism as an instrument of national policy will, in the long run, destroy the democratic ideals and institutions it is meant to protect here and abroad.

The late Mahatma Gandhi put it very appropriately into these words: "There is no escape from the impending doom save through a bold and unconditional acceptance of the nonviolent method. Democracy and violence go ill together. The states that are today nominally democratic will either have to become frankly totalitarian or, if they are to become truly democratic, they must become courageously nonviolent." This is a warning that the Government and military officials can ill-afford to ignore, for it is a warning against the negative course of action they are pursuing.

We must adopt a positive course of dynamic action, a course of nonviolence, truth and freedom. This is the only way we can win the moral support of all peoples. Only in this way will the people of the world unite to establish world law and order among all nations.

"Trouble In Guatemala"

The Washington Post is too distinguished a newspaper to have strayed so far off the beam of fairness as occurred in your unsound editorial in the May 8 issue, "Trouble in Guatemala." That editorial, while rightly pointing out certain disgraceful Communist-inspired actions in that country, conveyed various misleading impressons which I should like to correct now:

1. Contrary to your editorial, my statement in the Senate on April 27, 1950, far from being too strong, was interpreted by experts as a comparatevly moderate statement of the need for reasoned and firm American action to protect our legitimate interests in Guatemala and throughout the hemisphere. Your able newspaper associates —great papers like the New York Times and the New York Herald Tribune—have called for far stronger action than is implied in the appeasing "wait-and-see" tone of your editoral.

2. Contrary to your totally unfair reference to American Ambassador Richard C. Patterson, jr., it is my understanding based upon talks that my staff has had with high-policy level individuals who should accurately know the story, that the American Government has rightly had nothing but praise for the very diplomatc and effectve way by which Ambassador Patterson handled his difficult assignment in Guatemala.

As a matter of fact, to my knowledge, rarely have the actions of a State Department chief of mission met with so resounding and virtually unanimous support on the part of the press and on the part of legislative and executive officials as has Ambassador Patterson's work. I have never met with this gentleman, nor even talked with him, but I am tremendously impressed by his record that he is the type of businessman-diplomat deeply devoted to his country's welfare, and a credit to the State Department and to our Government.

3. Contrary to the implications of your editorial, according to reports which I have received, my own statement protesting against Guatemalan Red actions appears to have had a healthy and constructive effect. Observers believe (and I say this humbly and frankly but without taking any bows or asking for or expecting any pats on the back) that the responsible elements in the Guatemalan government as well as the freedom-loving masses of Guatemalan people are now more keenly aware than ever before of this fact: Their good neighbor friend—the United States—wishes nothing but warm friendship with the Guatemalan people but will not tolerate Guatemalan Red strong-arm tactics against us. We respect Guatemala's sovereignty; we rejoice in its deserved pride in its independence; we despise jingoism or chauvinism; we seek naught but the promotion of our mutual prosperity and the flowering of our political, social and economic relations.

Throughout my statement in the Congressional Record, you will note expressed the view that my greatest wish is that the responsible liberty-loving elements in Guatemala will curb the militant Red minority in labor unions and elsewhere, so that no further action on the part of the United States Government will prove necessary. At the same time, I oppose and I believe that the overwhelming mass of the American people oppose craven appeasement of the revolutionary Reds in Central America or anywhere else in the world. Hasn't The Washington Post learned that appeasement doesn't work any more than jingoistic sword-rattling works! A mid-course, a moderate course, is what we desire.

Lastly, may I also mention that, as you probably now realize, the letter to the editor carried in your May 3 issue was completely unrepresentative of the admirable Guatemalan people, because that letter-writer—one F. Guillermo Palmieri—is apparently in complete disrepute with United States authorities here and in Guatemala.

German Place In Europe

By Andre Visson

London Conference

THE MAIN objective of the London Conference was to strengthen the hand of the West against the Soviet Union. Secretary of State Acheson and Britain's and France's Foreign Ministers, Messrs. Bevin and Schuman, all agreed that to that end it was indispensable to incorporate western Germany into the Western community. But they found it much more difficult to agree on how Germany should be integrated into the Western community.

The trouble with the West is that there are too many different "Western communities." First, there is the community of the countries benefiting from the Marshall Plan—OEEC. Germany is already a member of this community. But this does not make Germany feel that it is "integrated" with the West. Nor does it make the other members feel that Germany has become an integral part of the West. If Paul G. Hoffman's and Dean G. Acheson's conception of OEEC. had been realized, the situation would have been different. OEEC would then have been a real Western community. But British opposition made this impossible. OEEC has become a kind of European "community chest" for distributing the Marshall Plan dollars. It is a temporary organization that is supposed to be liquidated by 1952. So membership in it cannot solve the problem of Germany.

ANOTHER Western community is the European Council in Strasbourg. After protracted negotiations and much brow-wrinkling Germany has just announced that she would accept the invitation to join the council. She had been reluctant to join, because the Saar has also been invited to be a member of the council. And since Germany considers the Saar her own integral part, she sees no reason for special membership for the Saar.

Anyhow, even Germany's membership in the European Council cannot achieve the integration of western Germany into Europe. Had the French and Belgian conception at the council of Europe been realized, the Council of Europe would have had adequate political power. It would have been a real Western community. But the British stubbornly opposed the idea of making the Council of Europe a responsible political organization. They reduced it to the status of a "debating club," the members of which may discuss the problems of the day and make resounding resolutions.

These resolutions do not commit anyone to action. Western Germany may be flattered by the invitation to join the club, but this does not integrate her into the Western community. And the fact of her being a member of the club does not establish her credit with the British, the French and other members of the club.

There is still another Western community—the North Atlantic Pact. It is a much more important community, since the United States and Canada are part of it. But it is a very exclusive community, whose members are united for achieving their military security. And none of them feels that Germany's credit is as yet good enough to entitle her to the membership card which would give her leave to carry firearms.

The French Premier, Georges Bidault, has come out with a proposal for another important Western community. He suggested an Atlantic High Council to deal with all political and economic matters. Should the United States, a signer of the North Atlantic Pact, become a full-pledged, permanent member of the Atlantic High Council, it would eventually be possible to invite Germany to join the council. The presence of the United States in the council would make it improbable that Germany would dare to misbehave. But the United States, the State Department feels, could not join the Atlantic High Council without an authorization from the Congress. And the Congress does not now appear to be in a mood to give such authorization.

UNDER these circumstances, all that can be done is to reach declarations of common aims and create committees to study these aims and try to put them into proposals which would then be submitted to the next conference of the Foreign Ministers.

To sum up, everybody agrees that in order to make western Europe strong, it is indispensable to incorporate western Germany into western Europe. But at the same time western Europeans feel that in order to make the incorporation of western Germany possible, western Europe must first be made sufficiently strong. It is a vicious circle. And it is improbable that a solution will be found unless the United States agrees to create a new Western community in which western Europeans will feel safe in having western Germany as a member.

The prevailing feeling in Europe today is that unification of existing economic strength would greatly help unification of the as yet nonexistent military strength. In that respect the proposal made by French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman for pooling the German and French steel and coal industries with the invitation to other nations to join the pool, eventually deserves special praise.

It may look to some like a gigantic supercartel. But as much as we may dislike cartels, it may after all be better to have a strong western Europe with cartels than to have no cartels and no western Europe.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Acheson's Gloomy World Survey

By Drew Pearson

SECRETARY OF STATE ACHESON is now on the most important diplomatic mission of his life. Upon its outcome depends whether Europe will begin working in earnest to build up its defense against Russia or will look for an excuse to let the North Atlantic Pact fall apart.

Yet the Secretary arrived in France a weary, frustrated and almost beaten man.

Much of this undoubtedly was due to the incessant poundings he has received from Senator McCarthy. Whatever the reason, Acheson has seemed not only exhausted, but overwhelmed by the problems he faced and with no new ideas for meeting the future.

To a group of friends not long before he departed, he gave this discouraging summary of the world situation:

GERMANY—We have no real policy and live from day to day. We may expect anything short of war in the expected Communist putsch on Berlin in May. However, the Russians will not catch us off guard. General Taylor has been instructed to turn back the demonstrators with fire hose, tear gas and then, if necessary, bullets.

YUGOSLAVIA—Marshal Tito is most difficult to handle. He is skittish about being identified with the west and proudly asserts that he, not Stalin, is the true Communist. Tito continues to stir up trouble against Italy over Trieste.

IRAN—Iran should be a pillar of anticommunism in the Near East, but poverty and corruption make it an easy target for our enemies. It is difficult to understand what has happened to the Shah in recent months. He appears to have lost control of his government, and, in the face of this situation, a dangerous condition is almost certain to develop.

INDO-CHINA—The French are being shortsighted in not handing over more authority and prestige to Emperor Bao Dai. He can never get a popular following large enough to overcome the Communist, Ho Chi Minh, until he can prove he is not a French puppet. The French ought to turn over to him the palace at Saigon as a symbol of authority.

THE PHILIPPINES—There has been a shocking deterioration in the strength of the Philippine government in the last few months. Today the government is unable to maintain order even on the outskirts of Manila. The Huks (Hukbalahaps) are operating in the very shadow of the presidential palace. Graft and corruption are rampant. Of the two billion dollars granted the Philippines since the war, only 125 million remain. A total collapse of the entire Philippine administration is possible within the near future. The situation is so unstable that President Quirino has fled Manila and is living in Baguio.

KOREA—Not as unstable as the Philippines but still very far from political health. There is a danger that the Korean regime may not be able to weather the storm.

GREECE—We were very happy about the whole Greek situation until just recently, when King Paul decided the time was ripe for him to take over the government. Now things are going downhill.

THE UNITED NATIONS—The U. N. is not an effective instrument in waging the cold war. In addition to the obvious problems we have with Russia, we have the more recent and almost equally serious problem of the increasing division of the western powers—such as the Anglo-American split over recognition of China, the difficulty in making plans with the shaky British and French governments. As a result, the western coalition today is very, very weak.

When a friend asked why the State Department didn't give the U. N. some ideas for saving the peace, Acheson wearily replied: "Perhaps it's because we don't have any."

The Secretary of State concluded his remarks by saying that the fact that the Marshall Plan officially ends in 1952 does not mean we can halt economic aid or retire back into isolation.

"The world," he said, "is very much with us, whether we like it or not."

Note—Secretary Acheson's diagnosis of the world coincides with that of the national defense agencies. But Acheson, perhaps because of the pounding he has taken in the Senate, seems a little wearier than they.

U. S. Steel Stages Turkey

SINCE KINDLY Myron Taylor and the late Ed Stettinius left the United States Steel Corp., that organization seems to have a highly developed faculty for doing the wrong thing at the wrong time.

The other day, GOP Congressman H. R. Gross of Iowa tipped off Speaker Sam Rayburn to the fact that United States Steel was violating House rules by staging a lavish exhibit in the House Office Building.

Not only is it against the rules for any nongovernment body to occupy space in the Capitol, but United States Steel's charts, about the size of billboards, showed how that corporation dominated various fields of life, even including American schools, by supplying textbooks.

Instead of favorably impressing Congressmen, the exhibit had the opposite effect.

Note—When Taylor and Stettinius dominated United States Steel, it was considered one of the more public-spirited corporations, followed a progressive labor policy.

Same Wage Scale as on July 5

All Losers in 37-Week Walkout

By William J. Kohm

Mr. Kohm is a Newark News Reporter

RIDGEFIELD PARK, N. J.—The long and bitter strike at one of the Nation's largest paperboard mills came to an end March 23 after 37 weeks of picketing, court actions and repeated near-violent demonstrations by the strikers. It ended abruptly with no immediate gains for either side and with both management and labor showing serious financial losses.

Workers at the Continental Paper Co. plant here began returning to their jobs after the sudden status quo settlement reached by management and Local 299, United Paper Workers of America, CIO. The men, who lost more than one million dollars in wages in their unsuccessful bid for a 15-cents-an-hour pay increase and additional overtime and vacation benefits, went back under the wage scale in effect prior to the July 5 strike call.

The agreement came as William J. Alford, jr., company president, was completing arrangements in England for the transfer of all equipment and materials from the New Jersey plant to its overseas affiliate.

His decision to dismantle the plant brought about the formation of a committee of civic leaders from this and surrounding communities, all of which suffered economically from the walkout. This group got labor and management together for a series of "do or die" conferences at which the settlement was reached.

Principal Fined

ONE OF THE major points in the agreement was the removal from the scene of two strike leaders, Anthony Adamo, CIO area representative, and Ernest Fritz, Local 299 president.

Adamo, removed from all affairs concerning the union and the plant, was fined $500 and placed on probation for five years when he was found guilty of assaulting two company officials. Simultaneously with Adamo's removal and the settlement of the strike, came Fritz's resignation as president.

Other points of the agreement are: Men were returned to work according to seniority at the pay scale in effect June 1; no new employes were hired until all members of Local 299 had been offered an opportunity to return to work; the case of Weldon Myrick, a foreman whose dismissal was given by the union as the immediate cause of the strike, was to be submitted to an impartial arbitrator; pension and insurance matters, discontinued during the strike, will be discussed three months after resumption of production, and all questions of collective bargaining will be deferred for a minimum of three and a maximum of six months.

UNDER the subsequent agreement, the workers surrendered a share-the-production plan which promised premium pay of 30.51 percent of "production values" adding to hourly wages. It had been determined in a six-year study that this was the percentage, within half of 1 percent, that employes received as wages from "production values." These production values were calculated by subtracting costs of materials and supplies from company sales receipts.

The plan was drawn up by Allen W. Rucker, president of the Tool Owners' Union. Both union and management disclaimed any connection with the group when it failed to obtain a certificate of incorporation from the New York State Board of Standards and Appeals. The Tool Owners' Union was denied a certificate on a charge that the organization was "fascistic."

Despite this, plant officials and CIO leaders broke bread at a Waldorf luncheon to celebrate insitution of the plan. Adamo dedeclared it to be "the finest industrial cooperation plan ever developed." Another union official said the affair was "a shot heard around the world in labor-management."

Qualifications

THE praise changed to plaints once the strike got under way. Adamo said that his approval was motivated by other beneficial provisions in the contract. He added that a business slump in July, 1948, made the plan "obsolete" while wages were going up in other plants.

He later qualified his statement further and said, "We never repudiated the plan—if it paid off good or if it didn't, it was okay with us."

Management and labor began negotations last May. The union submitted demands for a 15-cent hike, better than double time for every hour worked over eight on Saturdays, triple time for every hour over eight on Sundays, two additional paid holidays, three weeks' vacation after 10 years, four weeks after 15 years, and the hiring of a paid "standby" crew of 20 men.

Management's counterproposal provided for a renewal of the old contract, granting of a 12 percent increase in vacation pay and three weeks' vacation after 10 years, two additional paid holidays and medical reimbursement for nonoccupational accidents or illnesses of workers. The union turned down the offer.

Sabotage Charged

NEGOTIATIONS were progressing when Myrick, an 18-year-old employe at the plant, was discharged on charges of incompetence. On July 5, the men left their jobs after allegedly sabotaging equipment. Union leaders refused to arbitrate unless Myrick was immediately reinstated, and when management refused, the strike began in earnest.

The strike was still in its infancy when pickets halted members of Local 344, AFL International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, from entering the Alford Carton Co., an adjacent subsidiary of the Continental Co. A few days later, Bergen County police were at the scene with riot guns and tear gas bombs.

Stoning of workers' autos was reported. Police said the strikers sprinkled glass on the roads leading to the plant and attempted to overturn the car of a supervisor. Two police cars were driven through the massed workers and several men were slightly injured.

On August 2, 1949, the company sued for one million dollars, charging losses to machinery, business contracts and physical possession of part of the plant. The suit is pending.

As a result of this action, the union voluntarily agreed to stop picketing in certain areas and the Alford Carton Co. was able to resume operations. On October 6, an injunction was granted restraining the strikers from mass picketing. But the continued inactivity at the huge paper mill hit many local concerns which did business with the plant, and severely disturbed the local economy. Because of this, a citizens' committee was formed and finally brought about the end of the strike.

Alford was telephoned in England. On the third call he agreed to reopen the plant under the terms outlined. The union voted to go back.

Alford issued a statement in which he said:

"Assurance that irresponsible union leaders who caused the strike have been removed from power, and the pressure brought to bear by the citizens' committee, the newspapers and employes who lost their jobs, has brought about my decision to reopen the plant."

The Magazine Rack

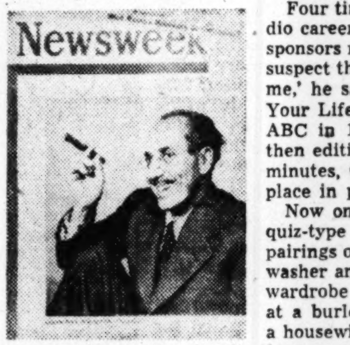
NEWSWEEK combines the funny and the not so funny. It contains two profiles, one on Groucho Marx and his comeback on radio, the other on Frederick Vanderbilt Field, the millionaire Communist and how he got that way.



Four times Groucho "approached a radio career, and four times four different sponsors repulsed him. 'Even I began to suspect that the trouble might have been me,' he says now." Then came You Bet Your Life. It got off to a slow start on ABC in 1947. By recording the show, then editing it down from an hour to 30 minutes, Groucho pepped it up to sixth place in popularity ratings.

Now on CBS Wednesday nights, it's a quiz-type performance with "bizarre pairings of contestants, such as a window washer and a parachute jumper; a circus wardrobe mistress and a stage door man at a burlesque house, or a fireman and a housewife." The comedian ad libs his part, "probes, gibes, insults, humors and gouges answers out of his victims."

Only once has he been stopped for a comeback. He asked a 6-year-old girl, "What will you do with your half of the money if you win? What do you want more than anything else in the world?" And Marian replied, "A baby brother."

After Frederick Vanderbilt Field refused to answer most of the questions asked him by the Tydings subcommittee recently, Newsweek assigned Associate Editor Harold Lavine to write the story of "How a Vanderbilt Scion Became a Kremlin Stooge." Lavine traces Field's course from a proper Social Registerite New Yorker and a brief span with the Democratic Party. Disillusioned, he switched to the Socialist and later to the Communist Party, where he has apparently worked up to the inner circle councils. Lavine doesn't quite answer the question he poses: Why?

THE people of Arlington, Va., insist that any place can get better schools if it really wants them and will get down to work, say Henry F. and Katharine Pringle in the Saturday Evening Post. They tell the local story of the citizens' uprising against an entrenched Democratic organization in the fall of 1947. They were not battling corruption; they had to cope with a harder opponent—lassitude, say the authors.

They succeeded in passing a bond issue in excess of $6,500,000 and higher taxes to pay for it. In the last two years they have raised teachers' salaries, relieved crowded classrooms and improved courses of study. Nor is the job finished.

All this was accomplished with the expenditure of only $3600 in two bitter elections, write the Pringles. It was done through the determined efforts of about 1000 hard-working citizens. This article, "Are We Letting Our Children Down?" is one of a series in the Post dealing with the unprecedented growth of population in this country and the problems it is causing.

Matter of Fact

Daring Hand at Economic Helm

By Stewart Alsop

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S elevation of Leon Keyserling to the chairmanship of the Council of Economic Advisers has hardly caused a ripple—it has been generally regarded as just another routine shift in this Administration's endless game of musical chairs. In fact, it is a good deal more than that.

In the first place, the council, like the Budget Bureau, the National Security Council or the National Security Resources Board, forms an important part of the invisible Government of the United States. This invisible Government is potentially, and often actually, more important than the visible Cabinet Government.

In the second place, together with former White House Counsel Clark Clifford, Keyserling is one of the original architects of the Fair Deal. His appointment, after six months' delay, and over the opposition of the Administration conservatives who follow the tattered banner of Treasury Secretary John Snyder, is thus a major victory for the Fair Deal element in the Administration. And, even now, the Fair Dealers are by no means a solid majority within the Fair Deal.

The Snyder group would have much preferred a conservative as chairman of the council, like Keyserling's predecessor, Dr. Edwin Nourse. This would have pretty well hamstrung Keyserling. But Keyserling is an aggressive and energetic man, and now that he is the economic grand panjandrum of the Truman Administration, he will have very great influence on Administration policy. It is therefore pertinent to inquire just where Keyserling stands.

An Outspoken Defender

ONE way to begin this inquiry is to examine his differences with Nourse, which had a great deal to do with Nourse's resignation. Nourse favored the ivory tower version of the council's role. According to Nourse, the council should in effect whisper its economic views into the President's ear, while holding itself strictly aloof from the political hurly-burly.

Keyserling, on the contrary, strongly believes that the chairman should defend the Administration's economic policies before Congress and the public, in the same way that the Secretary of State, for example, defends the Administration's foreign policy. This in itself suggests that Keyserling has no intention of becoming this Administration's forgotten man.

Another, and more vital, difference between Keyserling and Nourse concerned defense policy. Nourse, wringing his hands and prophesying economic doom, was one of the chief allies of Snyder and Defense Secretary Johnson in the post-election defense cutback. Keyserling, on the other hand, has consistently argued that council members simply are not qualified to determine American military requirements. But he is convinced that the United States has the economic strength to carry whatever defense expenditures its security requires.

Thus Keyserling's appointment is likely to hasten the Administration's creeping backdown on Johnsonian "economy." Keyserling is also convinced that the council has an important part to play in determining foreign economic policy, and here again he believes that the United States can afford "to do what it cannot do."

A Race to Stand Still

AS FOR the domestic economy, Keyserling has usually been identified with the old New Deal school of Keynesian pump-primers. In fact, his economic thinking differs in a number of respects from the depression-born theories of the old New Dealers.

He does not believe that a few billion pump-priming dollars would stave off a depression if the national income slumped severely. Instead, he believes that economic salvation lies not only in maintaining the present huge national income, but in steadily increasing it. Indeed, Keyserling's economic theory recalls the Red Queen in Alice in Wonderland: "It takes all the running you can do to keep in the same place. If you want to get somewhere else, you must run at least twice as fast."

He points out that the American worker's productivity increases, because of labor-saving devices, by about 3 percent a year, or 30 percent in 10 years. Thus, to buy what the workers make, and maintain full employment, the national income must be increased in at least the same ratio. If the national income remains constant even at its present high level, Keyserling estimates, there will be 10 or 12 million unemployed in 10 years.

Thus Keyserling is in fact the real author of the peacock-in-every pot vision of a 350 billion dollar national income which Truman has been conjuring up. The vision is certainly a pleasant one. The trouble is that neither Truman, Keyserling nor anyone else has any very exact idea of how it is to be realized. Yet at any rate, however one may differ with his views, Keyserling is a man who has energy and ideas, and in this Administration such a man is welcome.

Our Political Economy

Plugged Fount of Risk Capital

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

HOW safe is the money you have invested in life insurance? Is it too safe for the good of the economy?

For years, whenever life insurance companies were called to public account, it was for taking risks with their policyholders' money. As a result of repeated scandals, State insurance laws were tightened until legal reserve investments were limited largely to high grade bonds and mortgages.

Today it is widely believed that this enforced conservatism is helping to dry up sources of risk capital in this country.

The charge, if true, is serious. Life insurance companies are by far our largest institutional savers and investors. Americans today have far more of their savings in life insurance than in commercial banks, mutual savings banks or savings and loan associations. By the end of 1949, life insurance companies had assets totaling more than 59 billion dollars. That is twice what they held in 1939.

It is not the global figure which is disturbing. Much more significant is the fact that these companies must each year find outlets for more than five million dollars in new investments if our prosperity is to be maintained, and in the future the sums may grow even larger.

Let us take a look at present life insurance portfolios. By far their largest holding—26 percent of assets—is in United States Government securities. Mortgages account for 22 percent, public utility bonds another 16 percent. There are also significant holdings of railroad and industrial as well as State and local bonds. Insurance assets, in short, are largely invested in debt.

Life insurance companies are buying new corporate bonds at such a rate that from 1946 to 1949, their purchases roughly equaled the total increase in corporate bond issues outstanding. But while this makes it easy for corporations to issue bonds, even large companies are finding it all but impossible to float new stock issues. The sources of risk capital seem to be drying up.

This is potentially a dangerous situation. With insurance companies seeking billions in new investments, yet limited by law to various forms of debt, the point is obviously coming when most corporations will find their debt ratio too large. This will force them to limit their borrowing at the same time that insurance companies will hesitate to take more issues.

At this point there could be a piling up of insurance savings without investment outlet. The impact on the economy could be severe, particularly if it were reinforced by a similar hesitancy among other investors, and a depression could easily ensue. The heavy debt ratio among corporations had much this effect at the end of the 1920s.

Depressions Aggravated

THERE is a further reason why it is bad for insurance companies to hold most of their assets in bonds: it makes depressions, when they come, both deeper and more prolonged.

As conditions begin to turn down, there is a tendency for the companies to hold increasing amounts in cash, partly for the reasons given above, and partly because of the uncertainty over the investment outlook. And, unfortunately, when business shows signs of recovering, there is a further tendency to hold off investing in the hopes that interest rates will rise.

Thus, what is good business judgment for an insurance company can have a devastating effect on business. This was an important factor in the 1930s, and with insurance companies holding 59 billions in our savings, it could be far more serious in the future.

So long as companies are required to hold debt rather than equity—bonds rather than common stocks—their investment policies will help bring on depressions and will make recovery from them harder then they would otherwise be. That is why Federal Reserve Chairman Thomas F. McCabe has suggested that they be permitted to hold a larger part of their legal reserves in common stocks.

A few have sought new outlets for their money. Metropolitan Life has invested large sums in low-rental housing, and is studying the question of loans to small business. Equitable Life has a plan for buying freight cars and renting them to railroads.

But these swallows do not a summer make, nor are they likely to so long as State laws remain what they are. There is need for study and discussion by all concerned, and for a drastic change in the present psychology of insurance investment.

Can Streetcar Pass Be 'Abused?'

By Harry N. Stull

IT IS difficult for the average bus or street car rider to understand the mass of figures presented to the Public Utilities Commission in the recent hearing on the proposed fare increase.

STULL

The transit company's request for higher fares was based on its own estimates of anticipated revenue under the plan submitted by it. The commission's auditor submitted a counter proposal, and the result was that the two experts were a million dollars apart on the anticipated net revenue. All this is very confusing to the general public and must be to the commission itself.

The main bone of contention is the weekly pass, and, if it is continued, what price should be charged for it. The Federation of Citizens Association, at its last meeting, overturned a recommendation of its public utilities committee and by an overwhelming vote decided in favor of retention of the pass.

In discussions of the matter, and in testimony before the commission, there was talk of the "abuse" of the pass. When analyzed, this is found to mean that persons purchasing passes use them more than the company had anticipated. This can hardly be said to constitute an "abuse." The word connotes some violation of a law, rule or condition, and it cannot be said that when these passes are used more frequently than was expected, that the pass holders have violated anything.

It must be remembered that the weekly pass was proposed by the transit company, with suggestions that it could be used by the entire family. It has indeed served a useful purpose.

The company's figures show that each time the fare has been increased, the number of riders has decreased. If the company believes that upon abolition of the pass, those who formerly bought them will immediately turn to paying cash fares, it is likely to be greatly mistaken. There will undoubtedly be a greater number of pedestrians, an increase in the use of taxicabs and the formation of car pools. If the company's plan is adopted and the revenue is still insufficient to provide a fair return, there will undoubtedly be another demand for a fare increase.

The transit company, unlike our other utilities, is in a competitive business, and it is of major importance that inducements be offered to the public to use its cars and buses. Heretofore, the company's answer to deficit operation has been to curtail service, which has resulted in further increasing the deficit.

Blots on Our Best Dress

VISITORS to the city in May will see the Nation's Capitol in its finest dress. Trees and lawns are taking on their greenest hues, and many yards show blossoming azaleas and other flowers in profusion. Nurseries report an unprecedented demand for evergreens. This, in part, is due to the great number of recently purchased homes and the pride of the owners in their property.

It is unfortunate, however, that among this show of beauty there should be spots that mar the general appearance of the city. There are entirely too many aged and disreputable looking housing units in our community. Under present regulations, it is difficult to determine when a building becomes uninhabitable. Overcrowding and insanitary conditions exist in these dwellings to an alarming extent. While we undoubtedly have some of the most beautiful sections of any city in the country, we also have some of the worst.

The Schwab "Purge'

IF IT IS true, as reported, that the Interior Department is bringing pressure on the District Commissioners to prevent the reappointment of James E. Schwab as a member of the Recreation Board, it is just another instance of the Federal Government using its power to inflict its will on the politically impotent residents of this city in a matter that is purely municipal in its nature. If this attempted purge is successful and the Commissioners appoint some person who will carry out the wishes of the Interior Department in recreation matters, it will be a further humiliation to our people.

The Unpaid Jurors

IT APPEARS that the Juvenile Court has run out of money and cannot pay 28 jurors who completed three months of duty in March. They will have to await the passage of a deficiency bill by Congress. This is still another instance of a municipality which has to await the movement of a ponderous Federal machine whenever a few dollars have to be spent.

Judge Smith Having All the Fun

By Benjamin Muse

MOST Virginia Congressmen will have easy going this year as far as reelection is concerned. Six will have no primary to worry about, and some presumably will have no Republican opposition in the fall.

MUSE

But the Eighth District's Representative Howard W. Smith has both a primary and a general election contest to face. The 67-year-old dean of the Virginia delegation in the House is not lucky in the matter of opposition. His heterogenous district, which extends from the Charlottesville neighborhood right up to the Washington suburban area, harbors many shades of political opinion and many varieties of political ambition. Even Miller the Terrible is one of his constituents, although Francis, of course, is not running for Congress—nor is Mrs. Miller, who toyed with the idea but was apparently better advised.

All four of the challengers are from the Washington suburban area. Two of Smith's former opponents are trying again: Arthur F. Souther of Arlington, Democrat, and Tyrrell Krum of Fairfax, Republican. Krum, professional veterans' adviser and dynamic campaigner, made the district's Republican Party almost a going concern by his sensational run in 1948. He rolled up 27,000 votes, or only about 5000 less than the winner. As either Krum or a still better man is going to carry the Republican banner this year, Smith and his friends will have to beat the bushes with considerable vigor.

A Vigorous Granddad

THE new faces in the picture are those of Navy Lieut. Comdr. Herman Keany Kopp of Alexandria, Democrat, and Hal Flood Hughes of Arlington, Republican. Hal Flood Hughes, by the way, is not related to the late Hal Flood, nor to his nephew, Senator Harry Flood Byrd. It just happens that Hughes was born on July 10, 1900—the same day that Hal Flood was nominated for Congress from the old Tenth District—and Hughes' elated parents decided to give the name to their newborn son.

The candidate's father was alternately Democratic and Republican—out in Botetourt County—but the younger Hughes has been a simon pure Republican all his life. This is his first jump into politics, however, above the precinct level.

Graying, grandfatherly Hughes (who happens actually to be three times a grandfather) looks older and acts younger than he is. Already busily getting around the district, he is dead certain that he will knock out, first, Krum, and, then, Smith. Douglas Clark, by the way, whom Krum narrowly defeated for the Fairfax County Republican chairmanship, is going to manage Hughes' campaign.

A Very Busy Man

KING 87550 is a phone number to be remembered. This column has not identified the location of the phone beyond the fact that it is in the city of Alexandria, but it has reason to believe that history is in the making there.

Passing through Alexandria the other afternoon, it occurred to the writer that it might be a good idea to pay his respects to Lieut. Comdr. Herman Keany Kopp, presently of the United States Navy, who has announced his candidacy for Congress.

Ringing the Kopp home at Engleside, the writer was informed that Commander Kopp is a very busy man and that he could only be reached by calling King 87550. By persistent questioning it was learned that this is "a sort of campaign headquarters."

From King 87550, the writer was informed that the candidate was not there, and he was again informed that Commander Kopp is a very busy man. The voice at the other end of the phone identified itself as that of Herman's brother, Kenneth, and added that the statesman would not be able to see newspapermen "for about a week." Asking then if he could drop around to King 87550 and chat with someone else, the writer received a negative reply. "We're all terribly busy here," the voice said.

So this column will have to postpone any firsthand low-down on the man whom the Navy is about to lose and whom Congress may gain, or something. However, the Associated Press man, who is smarter than the writer, has learned that Herman Keany Kopp, a native of Alexandria, entered the Navy in 1942, won his wings at the Pensacola Naval Air Station, served extensively as a test pilot and will retire from active duty tomorrow.

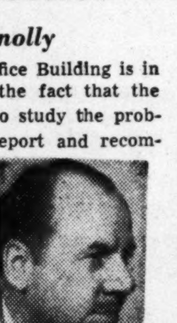
Two Cities Reach for a Fat Plum

By James P. Connolly

THE QUESTION of a State Office Building is in the news again, owing to the fact that the Governor's commission named to study the problem is expected to make its report and recommendations soon. The problem, of course, is whether to buy or build—and where?



CONNOLLY

Where, is the main question. A resolution pending in the Baltimore City Council reports that efforts will be made to have a site chosen somewhere outside the city, which means that a building would have to be erected, since there is none adequate for the purpose anywhere else in the State.

The resolution asks Mayor D'Alesandro to take "prompt steps" to try to win the project for Baltimore. Introduction of the resolution now, with its emphasis on immediacy, suggests that the author, Councilman H. Warren Buckler, has had some inkling of the efforts he speaks of to locate the building elsewhere.

If any location outside Baltimore is being urged or considered, it probably is somewhere between Baltimore and Annapolis on or near the Ritchie Highway. No other community or subdivision, except Annapolis and Anne Arundel County, has made any serious bid for the proposed improvement.

Recouping Its Losses

BUT a location nearer Annapolis than Baltimore has been advocated by Wilbur R. Dulin, member of the State Racing Commission and former State Senator from Anne Arundel County. Annapolis is highly conscious of its distinction as the State Capital and is acutely aware of the economic advantages that go with being the seat of the government.

The town always has resisted the removal of any State offices and never has failed to fight for their return. The problem of placing a new office building gives it an opportunity to seek the restoration at one swoop of practically all the offices it has lost over a long period of years.

But the question arises: If the building is to be constructed near Baltimore, why not in Baltimore? On behalf of a location nearer Annapolis, it is urged that it is closer and more convenient to the people of southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore.

On this point, the Buckler resolution says:

"It is desirable that such office building be located in Baltimore, where it will serve the convenience of the larger number of citizens. It will also be more convenient to the several State departments and less expensive to the officers and employes in reaching their posts."

A majority of the State's offices already are in Baltimore. Some 40 agencies are scattered among 60 locations in the city. Also, the preponderance of the State's private business interests is in Baltimore, and probably the bulk of the State's business is with firms, rather than with individuals.

The inconvenience to jobholders of having to go out into the country to get to their desks would be considerable, but it would be as nothing compared to the inconvenience to commerce and industry of having to go out into the country to do business with the State.

Slum Clearance Project

IF THE BUILDING were to come to Baltimore, two birds might be killed with one stone. Civic interests have pointed out that the project might be used to serve the double purpose of slum clearance. If this seems like a strictly local service, the welfare of the State as a whole is tied in pretty closely with that of the city.

A two-million-dollar loan for the building was authorized by the 1945 Assembly. In these days of higher construction costs, a larger loan would have to be floated. Or the State might take advantage of a unique offer made recently by Robert Garrett & Sons, Baltimore investment bankers.

The Garrett firm has offered to finance the cost of a building and site up to a total of seven million dollars and let the State buy the property out of rent over 25 years. Incidentally, the same firm has made somewhat the same offer to the Federal Government for a new building in or near Baltimore for the Social Security Agency.

The agency is planning to move in four or five years to a proposed new building at Suitland, Prince Georges County. Its quarters in the Candler Building and three or four others in Baltimore are unsatisfactory. But Baltimore is anxious to keep the agency, with its 5000 employes and 15-million-dollar payroll.

As part of the effort to keep the agency in Baltimore, the Garrett firm has offered to finance a new building there up to a cost of 12 million dollars on the same terms it has offered the State.

Love Survives German Chaos

Vivid Picture of a Postwar Hell

By Lee Grove

WINTERTIME. By Jan Valtin. Rinehart. 439 pp. $3.50.

JAN VALTIN has drawn a brilliant reportorial picture of the chaos of postwar Germany, a chaos like some squirming, blue-lighted hell out of Dante.

Incidents of misery, brutality, bestiality follow one another in close succession. Slurred in the telling, those incidents first encountered fascinate the reader with their ugly horror. In time they blur together—there are so many of them, what is one case?—which is, of course, the effect on those on whom the roof fell.

The interaction of physical horror and mental despair that gives rise to almost unbearable soul sickness is at once a part of, and the background of, a love story in this new novel by the author of "Out of the Night."

Jan Valtin's hero is Martin Helm, captain of the tugboat Sirius in the fictitious port of Nordune, an old Hanseatic town near Helgoland. His sweetheart is Lisa Berzins, a refugee from Latvia, whom he takes off an outbound ship on which she has stowed away.

Among the others who figure in the lives of Martin and Lisa are Marianne, an artist who lost a leg and her child in the bombing of Nordune by the Americans; Hein Rode, Helm's mate, whose wife died of torpedo juice which she had purchased in the belief that it was cooking oil; Marcus Berzins, Lisa's brother, who has turned into a killer; Wetterman, a Communist, whom Helm is obliged to kill, and Waldemar Hacker, a journalist.

An Uncomplicated Man

CAPTAIN HELM did not participate in the war. At its outbreak his merchant ship was scuttled off the American coast and he spent the following years in Texas as a prisoner of war. Because of that farm life, he seems less demoralized than those around him. Because he is a simple, straightforward man, he is a less complicated figure than those in his milieu who are given to thinking.

When Helm tips off the American military police to the whereabouts of the hidden poet-killer, who had participated in the Nazi massacre in which Heim's Jewish first wife died, his action follows no great searching of soul. It is like his other actions, originating in an instinct, because thinking could be pushed only so far before it became uncomfortably lost in the wellsprings.

Lisa, too, despite the brutalities and bestialities she has endured, is a figure of simple and direct motives, a girl who wants her man of good will, a home and a normal life.

At the end, after the chase—yes, this novel has a chase—Martin Helm and Lisa are reunited for a moment before he begins a prison sentence for barratry, and the reader feels confident that Lisa will be waiting for him at the prison gate. The reader hopes, too, that the nine-year sentence will be reduced.

Martin's politics are simple. He is a patriot. And what is a patriot? A man, according to Martin, who does not want to be ashamed of his country.

Democracy and Meat

REFLECTIONS on the present and future of the Germans occur to both the writer and the reader of "Wintertime."

Martin, himself, thinking of the younger generation, reflects: "To all of them Hitler would be no more than a half-forgotten failure, a sour specter; but the Frontgeist—the spirit of the battlefront—would dominate their lives. Where was the force, the love patient enough and big enough to change it? . . . Not in the Americans. The truth of the 'German enigma' was simple; the surviving leadership potential was nationalistic, and the rest was trash . . ."

Waldemar Hacker observes: "A democracy that functions where the meat consumption per human being is 173 pounds a year cannot function here, where consumption per capita is about seven pounds a year." And again: "Morals are the property of the winner, an expensive luxury to the loser."

Since Jan Valtin's novel is based on actual case histories, it may be fairly supposed that these sentiments reflect German thinking—and confirm previous reports about it. It is naive, of course, to expect gratitude for American aid. But it is irritating to see little or no awareness that it was the Germans themselves who unleashed the war, no realization that they made others suffer first. The Nordune mother who lost her child in a fire raid has no thought of the bereaved mother in Coventry or Rotterdam. In its collective self-pity, it seems like an outlaw psychology.

Jan Valtin presents a grim and bleak picture, but in his novel—which cannot help but trouble the mind—it is a picture not without hope.

To Martin, going to prison, Lisa gives a narcissus, the one flower that the spring had brought forth in the garden she had started in the rubble. Waldemar Hacker, observing the gift, writes: "Springtime arises most beautifully in lands where the winter is harshest."

On this note, "Wintertime" ends. One hopes it is more than a movie ending.

Nutshell Reviews

CROWDED COMPANY. By Philip Gibbs. Medill McBride Co. 286 pp. Ill. $3.50.

SIR PHILIP GIBBS, journalist and author, reminisces about a half century crowded with events and people, mostly people. He recalls covering a hearing on the sinking of the Titanic, the shooting down of a Zeppelin in World War I and the "doodlebug" bombing of London in World War II. The English village and the glitter of society in St. James' Square are here, along with scattered reflections on a way of life that is no more. Pencil drawings by the author are a feature of the book, an English importation.

GUIDE TO THE RUINS: By Howard Nemerov. Random House. 54 pp. $2.50.

HOWARD NEMEROV'S new collection of poems, "Guide to the Ruins," displays a variety of forms and a use of imagery which, while difficult, is little short of magnificent. Nemerov's previous books include an earlier volume of poems, "The Image and the Law," and a novel last year, "The Melodramatists."

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF HENRY MONNIER, 1799-1877. By Edith Melcher. Harvard. 253 pp. Ill. $4.25.

GENERALLY and undeservedly forgotten today, Henry Monnier in his day was an artist, an actor and a writer. As an artist, he was in the vein of Daumier; as an actor, he excelled in character roles, and as a writer, he was a forerunner of the Realists. The versatile Monnier, whose life spanned most of the nineteenth century, was also the creator of potbellied Monsieur Joseph Prudhomme, who has been felicitously described as "the French Babbitt." Edith Melcher, of the Wellesley College faculty, has written with restrained relish a book that blends colorful biography with social history.

JOSEPH HENRY, His Life and Work. By Thomas Coulson. Princeton. 352 pp. $5.

JOSEPH HENRY, American physicist and pioneer in electrical research, is perhaps better know internationally than locally today. Yet the Smithsonian Institution here is virtually a memorial to his genius in scientific organization. The author, who is director of museum research at Philadelphia's Franklin Institute, delves full length into the productive life (1797-1878) of Henry to give the Smithsonian's first secretary a rightful space in history. Monumental as Coulson's work may be in painstaking research, the biography becomes mired in too detailed accountings of the physicist's contributions to magnetic fields and other scientific subjects. This book, with its fascinating start toward the human study of a great scientist, too quickly resolves into a reference tome of too, too limited appeal.

Rabbi Lazaron to Review Stokes' 'Church and State'

WHEN the Rev. Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes retired in 1939 after serving for 15 years as Canon of Washington Cathedral, he said that he wanted to write two books which had been neglected because of his regular work. The first of these has just been published by Harpers in three scholarly volumes, "Church and State in the United States." They cover American history from the adoption of the Constitution down to the recent Spellman-Roosevelt controversy.

This monumental work will be reviewed in a subsequent issue of The Washington Post by Dr. Morris S. Lazaron, rabbi emeritus of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation, author of many books, booklets and pamphlets and frequent contributor to magazines. Dr. Lazarus was active rabbi of the Baltimore Hebrew Congregation from 1915 to 1947. He now lives in New York City

The Rev. Dr. Stokes, meanwhile, is now completing the second of his two projects, a history of universities from the twelfth century.

A Comedy of Morals

A Crusader Takes Busman's Holiday

ANOTHER PAMELA: Or Virtue Still Rewarded. By Upton Sinclair. Viking. 314 pp. $3.

TWO HUNDRED and ten years ago, Samuel Richardson, a one-time printer and village letter writer, set all England by the ears with what is generally called "the first modern English novel."

"Pamela: Or Virtue Rewarded" (1740) told breathless readers the story of the longest holdout in the history of courtship. Richardson admitted that his primary purpose in writing the book was "to warn attractive maidens against rakes."

"Women wept and strong men swore wildly" over the predicament in which Pamela found herself. Wooed passionately by her young master, whose intentions were strictly dishonorable, the virtuous and godly servant girl persevered through countless monthly installments of the novel and at last married her naughty employer, hoping to reform him.

A modern reader might wonder whether marrying such a fantastic wastrel was indeed a "reward."

Upton Sinclair, whose lifelong intentions as a writer have been at least as moral as those of Samuel Richardson, has set himself a difficult task in writing a modern parallel to "Pamela."

A cynic might ask, "Where in the contemporary world will you find a woman that virtuous?" And Upton Sinclair, quite aware of this and other problems involved, settled upon a naive Seventh-Day Adventist maiden, so pure that she has never tasted meat, seen a motion picture, kissed a boy or allowed herself a day of pleasure.

A Deft Contrast

BROUGHT as a maid into the home of a millionaire, parlor pink, California dowager, this modern Pamela is soon being avidly pursued by the dowager's playboy nephew, Master Charles, who uses his charm, his wealth and his Mercedes to impose what used to be known as "a fate worse than death" upon a large assortment of attractive young women from every social stratum. Only Pamela, of all these girls, sweetly and tearfully defies her master.

In a modern comedy of manners and morals which will probably make very few readers weep or swear wildly, Sinclair deftly contrasts life among the very rich and very poor, the very worldly and the very unworldly in America's daffy Sunshine State during the Era of Wonderful Nonsense.

To dowager Maggie's fabulous ranch comes as varied a collection of social misfits, freaks, reformers, long-haired Greenwich Village poets, I. W. W.'s and other crackpots and sycophants of the lunatic fringe as you are likely to find anywhere except on one or two endowed New York leftist publications.

Sinclair is wryly and gently amused with this itchy-palmed rabble of "idealistic" charlatans, but not as wholeheartedly sympathetic as he would have been several decades and several misbegotten revolutions ago.

In fact, he is sufficiently openminded to admit that the rich Aunt Maggie is a finer person than most of the free-loaders who take advantage of her hospitality.

A Living Heroine

BUT since this is a busman's holiday for the spry old crusading novelist, he allows himself a large measure of comedy to a small measure of social uplift. There is even some evidence that he is beginning to show more interest in Christianity than in Socialism, more concern for private than for public virtue.

The modern Pamela, despite her quaint manner of speech, her peerless character and her refreshing sweetness and honesty (in a literary era crawling with vicious "heroines"), does seem to be of living flesh and blood.

It is a tribute to Upton Sinclair's very real ability as a novelist that the reader not only admits the verisimilitude, but is concerned over the girl's fate—obvious as that fate must be to parallel Richardson's eighteenth century plot.

And once again the reader may ask whether such a reward for virtue is actually a reward.

In fact, the ironic point which never has been driven home concerning Richardson's "Pamela," and which may escape most readers of Sinclair's "Pamela," is that in neither case was virtue really rewarded while in both cases vice was tremendously rewarded.

Come to think of it, both books are utterly immoral.—STERLING NORTH.

A Highly Personal Style

Wide-Eyed But Talented Reporter Tours Israel

By Philip L. Graham

GOING TO JERUSALEM. By Willie Snow Ethridge. Vanguard. 313 pp. $3.50.

TWO years ago, Willie Snow Ethridge gave a warm and personal account of the Greek situation in "It's Greek to Me." In this volume she gyrates over the far shore of the Mediterranean in the same breathless and wide-eyed manner.

Mrs. Ethridge "writes the way she talks," but this statement conceals a double triumph. Certainly no one in the wide world can equal her in talking with the rapidity and roving aim of a machinegun in the hands of a whirling dervish. Yet, somehow, she has trained her typewriter to record exactly this virtuosity of the human tongue.

Most of the time this highly personal style is rollicking good fun. A high point is the hour she spends spouting Georgia English at Abdullah's Queen, who can spout back only in Arabic. But in some few instances (she repeatedly calls her husband "the roommate") the style has about as much charm as "cute" letters from a girls' boarding school.

The Other Side

SHE went to Palestine when her husband, Mark Ethridge, was the United States representative on the United States Palestine Conciliation Commission. "My mind about that area of the world," she writes, "was virgin soil. My ignorance amazed even me."

She paints her ignorance with a pretty broad brush, even pretending to think that the Grand Mufti was a way of dressing and to have no idea that the metric system of measurement existed. But she is serious when she says that her visits to camps of Palestinian refugees provided her first knowledge that "there are two sides to the Palestine dispute."

Heeds Advice

MANY readers will think that the impact of this discovery has still left Mrs. Ethridge with a distorted, if different, view of the situation. She does, however, try to follow her husband's advice: "Don't let yourself get emotional. The Arabs aren't like whites and neither are the Jews. It's a confused, complex situation."

The real charm of the volume comes from Mrs. Ethridge's real reportorial talents and her incredible energy. She gives a vivid account of what she saw in Arab Palestine and in Israel, and she managed somehow to see an incredible lot.

Helen Jacobs Is Mirrored In Her Novel

By Burke Wilkinson

Mr. Wilkinson is secretary of the District Tennis Association, and several times competitor in the world championship matches at Wimbledon. He is also the author of "Proceed At Will" and another novel to be published this fall by Little, Brown.

CENTER COURT. By Helen Jacobs. Barnes. $2.50.

HELEN JACOBS' novel about a girl tennis player begins where many sports novels end—with the central character winning the national championship. But that is just the start of Kathy Webb's headlong, headline career.

She has to defend her title twice against intense competition, and suffer some heartbreaking setbacks in Europe before she gets a crack at the most glittering prize of all, the world championships at Wimbledon.

The fact that Kathy's adventures are written by a tennis player who herself won four times at Forest Hills and went on to nail down the big prize in 1936, is more than pure coincidence. Kathy has a flat forehand and a slice; Helen herself in her heyday was famous for her chopped forehand. But this you might call athletic license.

In other ways, the two girls are very much alike, and fine girls both. In fact, the strong autobiographical tinge is what gives this story its particular merit. It moves along at a good clip, with a love story and a sharp rivalry with another girl star to keep the plot boiling.

The reader learns, too. Here are tips on strategy and court tactics, on training and practice, on sportsmanship and gamemanship that boys and girls of all ages, 8 to 80—well, 75—will find helpful. Here, too, are glimpses behind the scenes in the world's most international sport.

Helen Jacobs, now a lieutenant commander stationed at the United States Naval Gun Factory here, writes her workmanlike yarn as competently as she once served and volleyed and chopped her way to tennis fame.

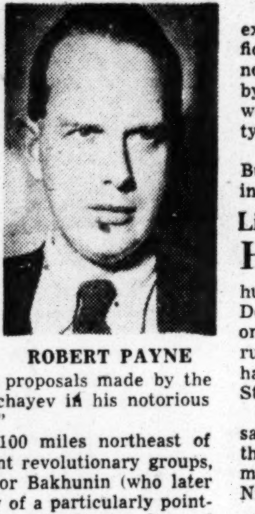
Theory of Recurring Nihilism

A Monster Who Horrified Marx

By Sterling North

ZERO: The Story of Terrorism. By Robert Payne, with an introduction by Pearl Buck. John Day. 270 pp. $3.50.

IT HAS BEEN evident for some time that the Russian revolution has been slipping from socialism into nihilism; that there is less of Marx and more of Nechayev in every brutal, retrogressive step taken by the terroristic and probably terrified Politburo.



ROBERT PAYNE

Much of the confusion in the minds of many sincere but deluded left-wing idealists springs from the disparity between the Marxist promise and the Russian performance. This book may help to resolve a portion of the paradox.

Marx was sufficiently cynical in his view of humankind and must always bear the stigma of burdening socialism with bloody violence. But even Marx was horrified at the proposals made by the brilliant but demented Nechayev in his notorious "Revolutionary Catechism."

Sergei Nechayev, born 100 miles northeast of Moscow in 1847, led student revolutionary groups, influenced his co-conspirator Bakhunin (who later denounced him), was guilty of a particularly pointless and atrocious murder, practiced every form of deceit, blackmail and demagoguery, and continued to proselytize even after he was convicted and jailed.

He has the doubtful honor of first codifying nihilism as a revolutionary weapon.

Using the "Nechayev Monster" as a symbol, Robert Payne shows how not only Germany and Russia, but a large part of the world has fallen under the spell of a theory which counts the human being as "zero."

Inadvertent Inspiration

I AM NOT certain that this book should have been published. Pearl Buck, who has written the introduction, seems to have similar doubts.

Its danger lies in the fact that it might, inadvertently, inspire in some ill-balanced person a career in nihilism.

The author's stated intention, bolstered by a passionate concluding chapter, is to strike hard at the growing cult of terror. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Payne is fascinated by the savage rituals he describes. And he comes dangerously near to dignifying them with a philosophical system. Furthermore, he lets a note of hysteria creep into his prose and into his reasoning.

There can be no question that the traumatic shock accompanying many wars and devastations has inspired human sacrifice and widespread torture. But Mr. Payne is oversimplifying when he attempts to identify every form of Satanic sadism, from the excesses of the Dionysian revels to the atomic bomb, with a single theory of nihilistic disregard for human life.

It would take a book longer than Mr. Payne's to explain the differences between fertility sacrifices, the persecution of religious and political minorities, the reasons for salting Carthage, expiation by witch burning and the justifiable use of modern weapons of war in defense against an aggressive tyrant.

None of these evils is pleasant to contemplate. But, fortunately for humanity, they do not all fit into a neat theory of recurring nihilism.

Life at Its Cheapest

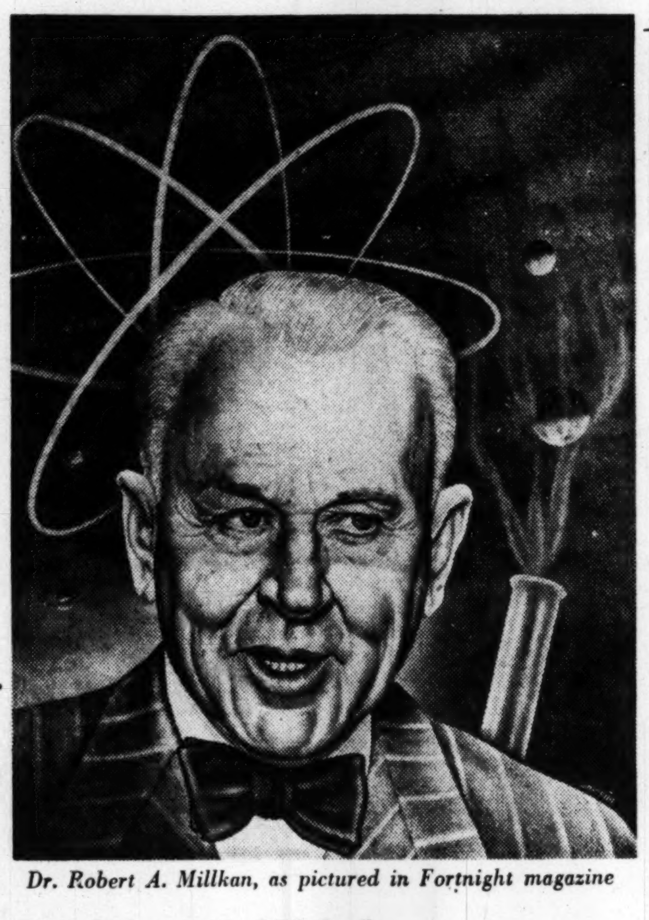
HOWEVER, the major point of this book cannot lightly be ignored. Rarely in the history of humanity has human life been held more cheaply. Despite pyramids of skulls, mass executions of prisoners and other debauchery of the ancients, few rulers in all history were sufficiently bestial to have dreamed up Hitler's death furnaces and Stalin's slave camps.

We are living in an era of terror for terror's sake. There is no other possible explanation for the refinements of torture practiced on innocent millions. Today we really are the victims of the Nihilists.

Unfortunately, Payne is also right when he contends that some degree of nihilism resides in millions of breasts. Children are nursed on crime comics. A man goes berserk in Camden, N. J., and shoots 13 people at random. Other men slip time bombs aboard loaded passenger airplanes. And humanity at large, which some few years ago outlawed dum-dum bullets, is now prepared at a moment's notice to wipe out millions of "the enemy" with a few atomic bombs.

How are we to combat so overwhelming an evil? Robert Payne thinks that we must crusade to once again make human life sacred. That under no circumstances may "men be condemned to death, or tortured or deliberately placed in peril." Through intensive application of religion, the arts, science and social legislation, we must create the environment and atmosphere in which we can reinstate the dignity, the self-respect, the freedom and the divinity of man.

Nihilism, like war, is merely human competition perverted to the level of mass murder. I only hope that Mr. Payne's well-meaning book on the subject will not be used as a text by some incipient Nihilist.



Dr. Robert A. Millkan, as pictured in Fortnight magazine

Reminiscent of Nobel

Millikan's Broad Faith Embraces God and Atom

By N. S. Haseltine

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF ROBERT A. MILLIKAN. Prentice Hall. 311 pp. $4.50.

SCIENCE, even with its atom bomb, and a belief in God are not only compatible but represent "the two great sister forces which have pulled and are still pulling mankind onward and upward".

So writes Robert A. Millikan, pioneer atomic physicist, in this, his autobiographical attempt to reach a lay readership.

Positivisits in science may take issue, but coming as a mature judgment of the dean of American scientists, the belief is cheering.

'Clear as Crystal'

UNFORTUNATELY, even lay students of history can attack his belief in the peace-provoking quality of the atom bomb. They can recall, for instance, a disillusioned Nobel, who thought his dynamite so destructive a force that peace must surely reign.

For Dr. Millikan, whose achievements in science were so vital to the Manhattan Project, argues:

"The great service to mankind of the advent of the atomic bomb has been to make as clear as crystal, to all classes and conditions of men the world over, the necessity . . . to find a substitute for war in the handling of international relations."

Dr. Millikan's views, except for his final chapter on science and religion, are welcome gems in a mass of discourse on research on measurement of the electric charge of protons, spectroscopic studies of high voltage sparks, the significance of cosmic rays.

Even the venerable author admits in his introduction that some of the chapters may be too technical for general understanding. He erred only in estimating the number of such chapters.

'Bad 10 Minutes'

DR. MILLIKAN began his studies of physics in 1893, when leadership in scientific thought was largely European. His contributions, those of his students and those of his contemporaries have steadfastly brought American dominance to the physics accomplishments.

He's to be honored for all his works, and all his important writings. The latter, however, are his textbooks and his scientific papers. The job of making his life story interesting to lay readers might better be handled in biography.

What writer but a Dr. Millikan would dismiss his happy marriage, in the story of his life, with the bleak:

"On April 10, 1902, I married Greta Blanchard. I was just then getting my 'Mechanics, Molecular Physics and Heat' ready for the printer, and in order to finish it before going to Europe I read proof till 6 p. m. on my wedding day. I had a bad 10 minutes when I found the exit door locked, but finally located a janitor and got out in time to appear at the Blanchard home to play the assigned role."

It Finally Comes Home to Bill

East End, With War Overhead

MY TIME, MY LIFE. By George Camden. Doubleday. 253 pp. $2.75.

WHAT IT WAS like on the ground when the Germans were destroying completely one out of every five homes in London, is the theme of Camden's book.

The litmus paper in this novel is Bill, a plausible East End worker, deeply devoted to his pretty wife, Pat, and to their small daughter, Kathie, and, just outside the family circle his friend, Curly Goldstein.

Bill's father had told him: "Billy Boy, the war just comes when you least expect it. Bang, like that. One day you're walking about in the sun, getting your ears tickled with the heat; the next day you're in uniform and the sergeant is bawling you out. You ain't asked beforehand, if you know what I mean."

Knowing Their Place

THAT WAS about the way it was, too. Bill, as a war worker, never wore a uniform, but when the war was fought over their heads, civilians as well as the uniformed were in the battle lines.

Bill's father had known World War I, and the attitude summed up in his phrase, "you ain't asked beforehand," was expressive also of Bill's attitude and that of his friends.

It was a feeling of knowing their place in the scale of classes, accepting it, and never expecting to rise above it; a feeling of having no real voice in the decisions made in Downing st.; a feeling of basically having very little in common with more fortunate classes—a fatalistic feeling that startled more than one American serviceman accustomed to the more fluid society here.

Bill and his peers were happy to keep off the dole, happy when they could keep up the installment payments on their furniture, find escape in the cinema. There was more of a feeling of kinship with working classes in other countries than with some strata of their own society, and the more active minds found pasturage in communism.

The Odd Portrait

TO AMERICAN readers of Camden's novel, the matter of fact picture of communism's role in the East End will come with some of the same surprise with which American servicemen first observed on the walls of dingy pubs pictures of Churchill, Roosevelt—and Stalin.

Bill, not much of a thinker but a man of solid instincts, was not a Communist, however, and in his halting way he occasionally needled the shop steward, a party member, about the twists in the party line.

Bill's allegiance was to his home. Beyond that there is a kinship with the people who walk his native East End pavements and a love of London that is not much expressed.

It is not until it is nearing the end that the war really comes home to Bill, who is skeptical and unconcerned with issues and principles, and he is truly aroused.

Camden's novel is written in a simplified style and in a restrained frame of mind that does not overstate the situation. It is effective, though he gets ahead of himself a bit at the conclusion, but the style also has a limitation: the reader does not become as fully involved emotionally as might have been possible.

The reader hears "the hooter," but never quite feels the first moments of fierce uncertainty when the warning signal screams down the spine and conversation unconsciously breaks off for a moment in midsentence.

Camden's people, too little treated in fiction, are likable, and this novel of their life under bombing will find readers appreciative and sympathetic.

'Rip' Got Start Here, A Rare Memoir Reveals

By Richard L. Coe

"RIP VAN WINKLE." The Autobiography of Joseph Jefferson. Foreword by Eleanor Farjeon. Appleton Century. 375 pp. $5.

ONE OF THE most celebrated of American theatrical memoirs has in recent years been available only in the second-hand book stores. Appleton Century remedies this and at the same time reminds us of a fabulous theatrical career in publishing Joe Jefferson's autobiography, which he aptly called "Rip Van Winkle."

Aptly, because of his nearly 70 years on the American stage, Jefferson devoted nearly 45 of them to playing Rip of Washington Irving's Sketch Book. It took Jefferson several tries to get the story properly dramatized after other writers and actors had tinkered with it.

Interestingly enough, the first performance of Jefferson's own version was in Washington, at Carusi's Hall in 1859. The result, he states, "was both satisfactory and disappointing. I was quite sure that the character was what I had been seeking and I was equally satisfied that the play was not. The action had neither the body nor the strength to carry the hero; the spiritual quality was there, but the human interest was wanting. The final alterations and additions were made five years later by Dion Boucicault."

Boucicault's work pulled the trick and Jefferson was seldom away from the role till his death in 1905. What a span! He played it in Australia, New Zealand, South America and in England, and many are the playgoers still active in their hobby who boast of having seen Jefferson in his great part.

But it takes more than one great part to make a man remembered 45 years after his death. His lively reminiscenses show you why. He was a friendly, witty man, and at the time he wrote them he had 15 more years before he died in 1905 at the age of 76.

The Jeffersons were a theatrical family, the grandfather a famous comedian, the father a charming but impractical man whose early death found his young family vagabonding as players in the Deep South during the 1830s.

Reading of the American theater of a century ago is a fascinating experience; so much of what Jefferson experienced you understand completely. Life hasn't changed so much, though our material position has. And his advice to actors on scene-stealing, overacting and the priceless value of experience might well have been written by one of today's greats.

Preceding Jefferson's lively text is a foreword of charm and perspective by Eleanor Farjeon, one of England's three writing Farjeon's, grandchildren of Jefferson. The revue writer's recollections of her grandfather, of whom she heard so much but knew only briefly near the end of his life, serve to set the stage for this remarkable player whose story has vitality 45 years after his death.

Graceful, Sparkling Prose

A Wise, Stirring Look At Chaotic 50 Years

Edited by John Barkham

INCREDIBLE TALE, by Gerald W. Johnson. Harper, 301 pp. $3.50

IN THIS, perhaps the finest of his many books, Mr. Johnson looks back over half a century of unprecendented upheaval. The long, lingering look he takes is described for us with such thoughtfulness and wisdom, such an understanding of the ferment in our civilization, that the reader finds himself nodding constant approval.

It was a half-century that came in like a lamb and went out like a lion. For nigh on a hundred years no major war had threatened mankind. Queen Victoria sat securely on her throne, nations traded peacefully with each other, prosperity and progress seemed the natural order of things.

The child of that remote age is hardly an old man yet, but almost all his gods have been overthrown. True, the United States survives, more powerful and immensely more responsible—but threatened also by an ideological concept of immense power, communism.

Mr. Johnson says these things with grace and with a profound perception of the movements of history. His prose sparkles with literary allusions and historical parallels. He couples Wilson with Franklin Roosevelt, and Stalin with Lenin, holding that in each case the work of the earlier leader was enhanced by that of his successor.

Our author is apprehensive, perhaps without sufficient justification, lest the United States assume hegemony over the Western democracies and so become corrupted by this power. For him, the hope of the future lies in the common American, who has survived it all. He closes his book with a modest apostrophe to his own "battered generation," which as Mr. Johnson observes with massive understatement, has been somewhere and seen something." So will the reader who is wise enough to read this stirring book.

Winning Cold War

THE CURTAIN ISN'T IRON, By Joseph C. Harsch. Doubleday. 200 pp. $2.

MR. HARSCH is one of our thoughtful foreign correspondents, and in this book he presents an intelligent analysis of the cold war, based on a constructive idea of his own. Confining himself for the most part to the Iron Curtain area, he makes the issues very clear.

If, he argues, we want to wipe out everything that has happened there in the past four years, we must go to war with Russia, liberate eastern Europe by force of arms and attempt to reimpose the prewar status quo. The attempt will probably fail.

If, on the other hand, we are interested primarily in breaking the exclusive control of Moscow, there is a fairly good chance of success short of war. It has already happened in Yugoslavia, and it could happen in other places—provided we are willing to help Tito penetrate those areas where his brand of Communism has proved itself a more effective instrument for political operations than Western liberalism.

This seems to make sense. Mr. Harsch's analysis of the Russian threat itself is just as interesting but rather less convincing. He contends that the danger lies in the combination of Russian power and the Communist dogma. Separate them, he maintains, and Communism, unsupported by a powerful state, would be as harmless as the holy war against the infidels that Mohammedans preach in Cairo to this day.

Apart from its tendency to oversimplify, this is a hopeful, informative, lucidly organized and clearly presented case for taking the offensive in the cold war.

Historical Novel Gets The Works

THE AMERICAN HISTORICAL NOVEL. By Ernest E. Leisy. University of Oklahoma. 280 pp. $3.75.

PROFESSOR Leisy of Southern Methodist University has written what is probably the first full-length study of the most popular type of fiction in America today.

After pointing out that the good historical novel is more than escape literature, he says that it, like other forms of fiction, rests "on a valid hypothesis of human nature, regardless of locale. If the historical novel enlarges our understanding of the character of human life and of human institutions, it justifies itself beyond the point of therapy and entertainment." Which is to say that if there is a "Forever Amber," there is also "The Scarlet Letter."

Leisy concludes, after tracing the development of the historical novel—which has been popular in the United States for 150 years—that the fiction of today is more psychological and sociological, the characterization better and franker and the action faster. Unfortunately, too much emphasis is also placed on vice and coarseness.

Leisy treats of so many historical novels that his book is a handy guide for readers and teachers. His book also suggests that authors have to scratch hard to find historical material not yet mined.—L. G.

Self-Interest, Not Sympathy

A Point IV Answer to 36 Senators

By Ferdinand Kuhn

BOLD NEW PROGRAM. By Willard R. Espy. 273 pp. Harpers. $3.

THIS book is a forceful answer to Senator Taft and the 35 other Senators who tried the other day to kill the Point IV program of technical help for backward areas.

To Senator Taft, Point IV is "simply an idea summoned out of someone's mind"—an idea "of some other way the United States can go around the world and assume to interfere with the affairs of other people, and try to improve the standards of living of other people."

To Willard Espy, a good servant of private enterprise, a promotion director for the Reader's Digest, the attempt to help "other people" is a necessity for American survival. He reminds us that more than half of humanity today drags out its days in poverty, ignorance and filth.

"They are ready to die at an age when the average American is ready to marry," he writes. "A wage-earner may earn a nickel a day in India, a cent an hour in China, as little as $20 a year in Egypt. And what business is that of ours?"

Not human sympathy, he answers; not because it wastes precious resources, but "because the people of backward areas are a drag on the progress of all other peoples, including Americans; because they present a standing condition of social unrest, an invitation to revolution and war; because, finally, if they are denied democratic progress they will fall prey to communism or some other form of reaction, and we shall remain but briefly a crumbling island of freedom in a totalitarian sea."

In preaching this gospel, Espy often lets his heart go to war with his head. Hs heart tells him that great development schemes like the TVA are the challenge of the future in every backward land. He devotes a good part of his book to describing such schemes: the Lowdermilk plan for a Jordan Valley authority, the fabulous Savage plan for a Yangtze River dam, and dozens of others less familiar but no less fascinating. In these visions of a hundred years from now he sees "a goal to stir the pulse of America."

But his head tells him, as his pulse doesn't, that huge development projects are utterly useless for most of the backward areas today.

"Many underdeveloped countries," he writes, "literally do not know how to increase their food production, how to save their soil and trees, how to make use of their water, how to safeguard their cattle, how to catch their fish.

"A program for basic improvements in health, agriculture, literacy, land tenure and social customs is the first essential for backward areas."

Truth Overwhelmed

IT IS too bad that this author, and others in his field, did not pay less attention to the grandiose projects and more to the tsetse fly and the hookworm. For there seems to be a fixed idea in the United States, as the Senate debate showed, that Point IV is the start of a supercolossal spending and building program. In truth it is a simple attempt to show backward peoples how to do the simplest jobs of self-betterment.

Although Espy tells the story eloquently there are at least three flaws in his argument.

In the first place, he has the touching faith of most advocates of Point IV that private capital will somehow come forward, in the backward countries or from the United States, to do the actual work of development. How does he know? Have Egyptian pashas or Latin-American landlords shown any eagerness to use their hoarded wealth for the public good? In spite of all inducements to go abroad, hasn't private American capital preferred to stay at home, except in the extractive industries, and in a few countries?

Espy blandly assumes, too, that technologists in infinite numbers will be willing to go into distant and unhealthful countries to take American know-how to the heathen. But where are they to come from? Can our technical schools and Government agencies supply the need? Won't we have to make a giant effort to recruit and train them?

Basic Deficiencies

FINALLY, the Espy book glosses over the need of ordinary administrative competence in the countries that have to be developed. In many self-governing countries like Iran, Afghanistan and Siam, and in some of the Latin republics at our own back door, governments do not yet know the elementary jobs of census-taking and tax-collecting.

It is all very well to talk, as Espy does, of industrializing such countries. But until someone teaches them how to govern, and trains a generation of honest officials, even the simplest efforts to promote literacy or public health may be like so many drops of water on the Sahara.

Still, the Espy book outlines a challenge to American ingenuity, the greatest peacetime challenge, perhaps, since the conquest of the Western wilderness. Point IV, says Willard Espy rightly, is not a boondoggle; it is "an act of faith in the world—and in ourselves."

Notes on the Margin

By Lee Grove

IN WASHINGTON, one is apt to find a writer anywhere — in proof of which is offered First-Novelist David Demarest Lloyd, concealed behind the facade of the White House.

Lloyd — the Huguenot middle name is to distinguish him from his father, a New York literary agent — is making his "debut" with "Son and Stranger," a Houghton, Mifflin publication May 23.

A lawyer by profession, Lloyd has been in Government and political work since 1935. Currently, as a member of the White House staff, he works chiefly with Charles Murphy, special counsel to the President.

His English background for "Son and Stranger," a story of two parents whose son died in England during the war, was gained as a graduate student at Cambridge University and in 1945-46 as a member of the American Embassy staff in London. During this later period he and his wife, Charlotte Tuttle Lloyd, also a lawyer, lived for two weeks at the former home of Rupert Brooke near Cambridge.

The Lloyds, who have two small children, live in Alexandria now.

In addition to his interest in writing, Lloyd is also a watercolorist, and one of the pictures on the jacket of his book is taken from one of his aquarelles, painted near Cambridge.

A slender, 39-year-old man with light brown hair, Lloyd, when asked if he had any other avocations, replied: "Well, I am supposed to help around the lawn a bit."

IN WASHINGTON — to repeat — you are likely to find a writer anywhere, a novelist in the White House milieu and a religious-book writer in the statistical department of United States News. The latter is William H. Stannard.

Stannard is the author of "My Christian Responsibility," just issued by the Christopher Publishing House, Boston. He is also a native of the District, and a former student of playwriting at King-Smith Dramatic School and Catholic University.

Corroborative Fracture

BEING a student of the Civil War period is not without its eerie moments, judging from a story told by Stanley Horn when he was in town recently. Horn is editor of the "Robert E. Lee Reader," published by Bobbs-Merrill last fall.

Horn and a fellow Civil War enthusiast, while on a visit to a Southern town, decided to call on the widow of a man who had claimed to have the body of John Wilkes Booth. She welcomed them in friendly fashion and showed them her late husband's extensive papers. But when Horn asked her if she still had the body, she said no, it was in California.

The following night, Horn and his companion returned to finish their look at the papers. It was nearly midnight when they were ready to leave. As they were going, their hostess said, "You seem to be genuinely interested. Would you like to see the body?"

So, to the barn the two men went to inspect the embalmed body alleged to be that of Lincoln's assassin, by the light of a flickering kerosene lantern.

"What do you think?" Horn asked his colleague afterward. "I don't know," he replied, "but the leg had certainly been broken. I felt it."

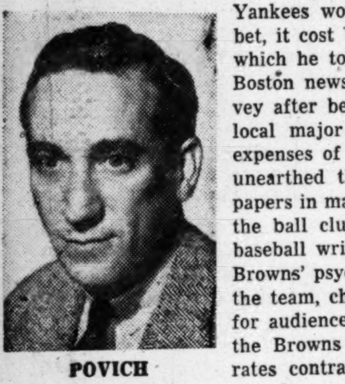
Beantown Still Jinx Town to Nats, 5 to 4

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern

BOSTON, MAY 13.—Frank Quinn, the former Yale pitcher and campus hero who went to the Nats from the Red Sox at the $10,000 waiver price, was the medium of a curious bidding contest by the Yankee and Boston teams when he graduated in 1948 . . . Red Sox Owner Tom Yawkey bet a hat with Paul Kritchell, Yankee scout, that the Yankees wouldn't get Quinn. To win the bet, it cost Yawkey a hatful—$50,000 with which he topped the Yankees' bid . . . A Boston newspaper which conducted a survey after being chided for permitting the local major league clubs to pay all the expenses of their baseball correspondents, unearthed these figures: of the 41 newspapers in major league cities, 21 are letting the ball clubs pay the expenses of their baseball writers . . . Dr. David Tracy, the Browns' psychologist who is traveling with the team, charges $20 per hour as his fee for audiences in his New York studio but the Browns have him under a wholesale rates contract . . . The most fascinating name in any of the major league baseball lines belongs to the Cubs' second baseman, who answers to the handle of Wayne Terwilliger, which sounds like something Dickens might have thought up.



POVICH

BOSTON'S MOST incurable baseball fan is Mrs. Grace Coolidge, widow of the late President, who watches the Braves and Red Sox in fair weather or foul . . . Recently she held baseball writers enrapt in an hour-long discussion of her objections to the intentional walk . . . Ted Collins, owner of the New York Football Yankees, is squawking his head off to NFL Commissioner Bert Bell at what he calls a raw deal in the schedule making, and demanding revisions, with a threat to pull out of the league, or sue, or something . . . It's a dull market for season tickets in Washington, too, the Redskins are learning. A year ago, they boasted of 21,000 season books sold. This year, at this point, only 14,000 season tickets have been claimed by Redskin followers . . . The suspicion is growing that the recent Nats-Red Sox deals are merely the piano-playing prelude to the big one to come: Scarborough to Boston. The transfer of Shortstop Merrill Combs called for more than what the Washington club ostensibly gave Boston . . . When the Tigers won a double header in Fenway Park the other day, they tied their season record of 1949, when they won only two games here . . . And it was the first double defeat of the Red Sox in their own park since May, 1948.

DICK WAKEFIELD is hinting that if Commissioner Chandler permits the Yankees to suspend him without pay for 30 days, he'll take his case to the civil courts. That's sufficient to make all the baseball brass take heed . . . Ford Frick says the National League is now subscribing to the American League rule that no player can be recognized as a batting champion unless he has gone to the plate 400 times during the season . . . Because Bob Hope will be defending his title in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament in Washington June 3-4, he will also have the privilege of choosing his playing partner . . . Walter Driskill is moving out as general manager of the Baltimore Colts and Al Ennis of Philadelphia is moving in . . . One of the differences between Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams: DiMag tips his cap at applause, Williams doesn't . . . The press services didn't report the reason why Umpire Al Barlick ejected Eddie Stanky of the Giants from a game the other night, except to say there was an argument. Stanky accused the ump of hamming it up for the television cameras . . . The Nats won't be a real good ball team until Eddie Robinson starts to hit.

ONE OF THE REASONS Clark Griffith won't toss out television next season is because the $125,000 revenue he gets is all neat, or net, with the visiting club cutting in for no share. It's equivalent to more than 150,000 admissions . . . Buck Newsom has won more games for Chattanooga (4) than any pitcher has won for the Nats . . . In the current Senate investigation of Nation-wide bookmaking syndicates, General Manager Bryan Field of the Delaware track may be called up to testify that the tracks would like to dissociate themselves from any connection with booking, and offer their aid to the committee . . . Walt Dropo of the Red Sox was dropped last season after hitting only .146 and batting in only one run in 11 games. In his first 11 games this year he has batted in nine runs and is hitting .436 . . . The Nats' distinction as the eighth-place club of 1949 is frozen for 30 days of this season under the league rules which give Washington first pick of any player on the waiver list before the end of the first month . . . After that time, the positions of the teams in the 1950 race govern their priority rights . . . Roberto Ortiz is sure of a job with the Nats as long as his fellow Cuban, Conrado Marrero, keeps winning. Only Ortiz can transmit Bucky Harris' orders to the non-English speaking Marrero . . . Frank Quinn, the Nats' newest pitcher, is apt to get a favorable press. He was one of the three Red Sox players who would not vote to bar baseball writers from the dressing room. The only other two were Birdie Tebbetts and Lou Stringer.

Hill Prince Winner Over Middlegr'nd In Withers

By John Chandler

New York, N. Y., May 13 (AP).—Hill Prince, the flying gentleman from Virginia, hung it on the Kentucky Derby winner — Middleground — today in the $29,750 Withers Mile at Belmont Park, and proved he'll be a tough number in the Preakness next week.

A crowd of 40,088 customers, who made Hill Prince and Eddie Arcaro the favorite, gave Chris Chenery's powerful bay colt a mighty cheer as he took command near the top of the stretch and romped home with something to spare.

Hill Prince, second choice in the Derby at Louisville last week, blazed under the finish line in a sparkling 1:35¾, which tied the record for the stake first run in 1874. The immortal Man O'War set the record in 1920, and it was equalled in 1922 by Snob 2d, and again by Johnstown, in 1939.

Ferd Third

The impressive note in Hill Prince's victory is that the Virginia-bred son of Princequillo-Hildene packed 126 pounds, compared with only 118 carried by Man O' War and the others.

Hill Prince bounced under the wire, his stubby tail flying, a length and one-half ahead of Middleground, while the King Ranch colt from Texas was four lengths on top of the third horse, Mrs. Andy Schuttinger's Ferd. That's the way the crowd had bet 'em, with Middleground at 3-2 on the board, and Ferd 3-1. Hill Prince paid $4.20, $2.30 and $2.10; Middleground $2.30 and $2.10, and Ferd, $2.10.

Seven colts, six of them eligible for the rich Preakness at Pimlico in Baltimore next Saturday, started. Brandywine Stable's Greek Song was fourth, Wilburton Farm's Erosion fifth, Mrs. W. M. Jefford's Suleiman sixth, and C. H. Scheid's Maryland Day last. Only Erosion is a non-Preakness horse.

Your Host, Bill Goetz's California derby favorite which ran ninth in the roses gallop, had been entered in the Withers, but was scratched. It was reported Trainer Harry Daniels couldn't find a suitable jockey.

"I wasn't prepared for Hill Prince's early move," said Bill Boland, who steered Middleground to his Derby score. Boland rode as an apprentice today for the last time.

Yanks Club Macks, 8-3

New York, May 13 (AP).—The New York Yankees celebrated Ed Barrow day at Yankee Stadium today by lambasting the Philadelphia Athletics, 9-3, behind the six-hit pitching of Vic Raschi and Bob Porterfield.

Barrow, former chief executive of the Yanks during the 1920 to 1945 era, received a plaque and bats autographed by all participants in an old timers game that preceded the regular game.

The American League "old timers," composed of former Yanks, beat a group of former National League stars, 3-1 in two innings. The National Leaguers were made up of players who faced the Yanks in the World Series from 1921 to 1943.

Once the regular game began, the Yanks wasted little time in sewing it up. The Yanks jumped on former National Leaguer Hank Wyse for four runs in the second inning with Yogi Berra and Bobby Brown supplying home runs. 1946.

W. & L. Crew Sweeps Meet

Washington and Lee's crew scored an upset yesterday at the Potomac Boat Club as they swept every event to sink George Washington High.

The Varsity, bucking a strong head wind, won the featured mile race in 5:12. The General's Junior Varsity had a tough time edging out George Washington, but they did it by half a length.

The four-oared gig contest also went to W. & L., the Generals navigating the half mile course in an even three minutes.

Detroit Wins, 1-0, in 11th on Wertz' Single

Detroit, May 13 (AP).—Vic Wertz delivered a single with the bases loaded in the eleventh inning to give the Detroit Tigers a 1-0 victory today over the St. Louis Browns.

Wertz's blow scored Johnny Lipon, who had singled with two out.

The game-winning blow was a heartbreaker for Ned Garver of the Browns, who had hooked up with Virgil (Fire) Trucks in a tight mound duel before 16,002 fans.

Garver didn't give a hit until George Kell got one in the sixth. Hoot Evers wasted another in the seventh.

In the Tiger half of the eleventh, Aaron Robinson and Trucks were easy outs. Lipon followed with his single and Jerry Priddy, a one-time Brownie, bunted safely. Kell walked. Wertz slapped the fourth pitch for his single to end the game.

Nats Get Joe DiMaggio, Farm Him to D Club; Decide Mele Good Enough to Play Center

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Nats acquired Joe DiMaggio yesterday.

But don't start doing handstands. He isn't THE Joe DiMaggio of New York Yankee fame.

But he is a reasonable facsimile, on paper, anyway. He's an 18-year-old second cousin of the fabulous real McCoy and like his illustrious kin, he, too, plays centerfield.

His real name is Bartola Joseph DiMaggio, but he prefers just plain Joe DiMaggio, for obvious reasons.

He came to the Nats from a baseball school at Peekskill, N. Y., recommended by Scout Eddie Holly who swears he didn't know the fellow's name was Joe DiMaggio.

Despite his awe-inspiring name, and a facial resemblance to the real Joe, the Nats decided he isn't quite ready to break into the majors and shipped him to their Class D farm team at Concord, N. C.

Like (Second) Cousin Joe, the Nats' DiMag was born in California, at Monterey, only a line drive's distance from the real Joe's native heath, San Francisco.

And also like Yankee Joe, our DiMag bats and throws righthanded; is 6 feet, 2 inches tall; weighs 185 pounds, 10 less than the real Joe, who's been eating major league food for 13 years;

"We don't expect him to live up to his name, but if he's only one-third as good we'll be satisfied," said Ossie Bluege, the Nats farm club director, who jubilantly announced the Nats' coup

Babe Leads, Sets Record

Cleveland, May 13 (AP).—Long-hitting Babe Zaharias moved into the lead of the Weathervale Transcontinental Golf Tournament today by firing a sizzling 73 for a 90-hole total of 398.

Her 73 set a new women's record for the 6250-yard, par 77 Ridgewood course and ousted Louise Suggs of Carrollton, Ga., from the top spot.

Miss Suggs turned in a 79 for a 400 total. Freckled Patty Berg of Chicago also had 79 and remained in third with 411.

Betty Jameson, the former National Open queen from San Antonio, Texas, kept her No. 4 spot with 82 for 416 while Bettye Mims Danoff of Dallas and Alice Bauer of Midland, Texas, tied for fifth with 427. Mrs. Danoff shot an 83 while Miss Bauer came in with 79.

Marlene Bauer, Alice's sensational 16-year-old sister, cooled off after a brilliant 38 on the first nine and finished the home stretch in 42 for an 80. Marlene missed the first 36 holes of the 144-hole tournament and is not eligible for the $5000 top prize.

Tribe Wins, Feller Homers

Cleveland, May 13 (AP).—Loosing a barrage of 11 hits, including 3 homers, the Cleveland Indians pushed their winning streak to four games today by scoring four times in the eighth to down the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 2.

Bob Feller, Bob Kennedy and Allie Clark hit circuit clouts for the Tribesmen. For Feller, who was removed for a pinch hitter in the seventh after allowing five hits, it marked his sixth homer in 14 years of baseball.

The game was closely contested until the eighth, when Cleveland came to bat with the score tied 2-2. Kennedy and Clark homered and Al Rosen singled. Joe Gordon doubled him home and then went to third on a passed ball. A single by Ray Boone scored Gordon for the fourth run of the inning.

Hogan, Sarazen, Picard, Thomson, Didrikson Bauer Lead Golfing Greats in Celebrities

By Bus Ham
Post Sports Editor

THE BIG GUY likes his golf straight off the tee.

"I know," he said, "that you have a lot of famous people in the National Celebrities tournament this year. Bob Hope and Arthur Godfrey and Walter Winchell and Frank Leahy of Notre Dame and Earl Blaik of West Point, two dozen of the biggest people in Washington and many, many others.

"But what about the golfers, the guys and gals who can shoot in the 70's. Those are the ones I want to see."

Fair enough, big boy.

When you walk up to the first tee at the Army-Navy Country Club at 12 o'clock noon on June 3 to see the two-day Celebrities tournament begin, you'll get a close-up of:

Ben Hogan, who tied the world record over a par-70 course by shooting 259 at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., recently, whipping Sammy Snead by 10 strokes on Snead's home course;

Gene Sarazen, an all-time great;

Jimmy Thomson, long recognized as the longest hitter in the game;

Toney Penna, among the topflight tournament players;

George Fazio, new pro at the Woodmont Country Club, and one of the leading money winners on the pro circuit;

Henry Picard, former PGA and Masters champion, among the sweetest swingers in the business;

Lew Worsham, Washington's own former national Open champion;

Such veterans of the professional trails as Vic Ghezzi and Jug McSpaden;

Fred McLeod, Columbia Country Club, and Allan Burton, Army-Navy Country Club, popular pros of the clubs that have been hosts to the Celebrities;

Jimmy Nichols, one-armed champion;

Chick Evans, former national Open and national Amateur champion;

Johnny Fischer, one-time national Amateur champion, and Jim McHale, jr., among the brighter young amateur stars;

Babe Didrickson, who has won everything there is to win in women's golf;

Marlene Bauer, latest sensation in women's circles;

And many others.

When you have Hogan, Sarazen and the like in men's golf and Didrikson, Bauer and the like in women's golf, you've got almost everything you can ask for, Big Boy.

Coan Fans In 7th and 9th With Bases Full

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Boston, May 13.—The Nats' Fenway Park hex was unshakeable again today. They kicked in the winning run for the Red Sox in the eighth inning and then made it stick in a dismal ninth-inning batting turn that was enough to curdle even a mother's love.

Gil Coan, author of two grand slam homers within the past fortnight, was no hero today. He struck out with the bases loaded as a pinch hitter in the seventh and did it again in the ninth.

Sam Dente's fumble of Bobby Doerr's routine grounder at the start of the eighth put in motion the run that ultimately left Sid Hudson with a 5-4 defeat, in the park where the Nats have won only five games in four seasons.

The Nats had to rise to the peak of futility, however, to lose the ball game in the ninth. They put the tying on third base with none out, then fell on their collective faces, unable to nudge it the last 90 feet.

Robinson Feeble in Clutch

A couple of innings before, they were quite magnificent in driving Chuck Stobbs from the box with four score-tying runs. And they had Walter Masterson on the ropes in the ninth when Kozar drew a walk and Pinch Hitter Eddie Stewart singled him to third immediately.

Manager Joe McCarthy waved in Joe Dobson from the bull pen and, it developed, the Nats were a gone gang. Eddie Yost popped a fly to Ted Williams behind third base, Dente walked to fill the bases, and in this highly-inviting situation, Gil Coan struck out.

Eddie Robinson, in the tight grip of the worst batting slump of his career, sealed the Red Sox victory with a harmless tap to first base.

Mixed up among the blows that beat Hudson were a pair of sixth-inning homers by Ted Williams and Walt Dropo, each with the bases empty. Williams clouted his into the right center bleachers, and Dropo dropped his over the left field wall.

Hudson Drives in Two Runs

Those two swats upped the Boston lead to 4-0 at that point, but Hudson bravely kept the Nats in the ball game by batting over two runs personally with a bases-full single in the Nats' four-run seventh.

And then he got a brutal break in the eighth when Dente fumbled Doerr's grounder to lead off the inning. Hudson slipped a third strike past Dropo, but after walking Keltner he was reached for a Birdie Tebbets single to left that scored Doerr with the game's decisive run.

The Red Sox skittered three hits through the Washington infield, singles by DiMaggio, Zarilla and Doerr, to wrench two runs out of Hudson in the first inning, but they got no more until their sixth-inning homer attack.

Stobbs meanwhile was getting sensational support from Doerr, Stephens and Keltner in his infield to keep the Nats scoreless until the seventh.

Stobbs Chased

In that inning with two out, they suddenly mustered four runs, technically unearned. Robinson was hit by a pitched ball, and Mele singled to center. Ortiz hit into a force play, but Evans drew a walk to fill the bases. Pinchhitter Al Kozar grounded to Keltner who fumbled, and the Nats had their first run.

Bucky Harris left Hudson in to hit for himself and was rewarded when the pitcher singled solidly to left center to score the second and third runs. That swat removed Stobbs, and Masterson walked in.

Masterson's first act was to walk Yost and refill the bases. His next was to pitch a centerfield single to Dente that scored Kozar with the tying run, but Hudson was cau-

Larry Brandenberg Double Winner; Catholic Second

Washington College of Chestertown, Md., won the Mason-Dixon conference track and field championship yesterday by scoring 63½ points with the help of six first places.

Larry Brandenberg, anchorman on the Sho Men's Penn relay championship mile team, paced them by winning the 220, 440 and running the last leg for the victorious mile relay team.

It was the fifth time that Washington has taken the title, tying host Catholic U. in that respect.

Final Standings

Mason-Dixon Track Championships:

Washington College, 63½; Bridgewater, 35¼; Catholic, 25¾; Randolph Macon, 23; American, 18; Loyola, 16½; Roanoke, 16; Lynchburg, 6½; Gallaudet, 5½.

The Cardinals finished third with 25¾ points, marking the 15th straight year that they've placed in the first three. Bridgewater was second with 35¼ points.

Two conference records were shattered, one on the heavy track, drenched by firemen fighting a blaze in the stadium's press box the night before, and the other in the high jump.

Russ Johnson, lanky C. U. sophomore, broke thte high-jump mark by 2 inches with a leap of 6 feet 3 inches. He tried for 6.6, but ticked the bar on the way down.

John Acton of Randolph-Macon set a record in the low hurdles with a mark of 25.5 seconds. In the trialse the day before, Acton had set a new standard in the low hurdles with 15.2.

American U., which wound up with 18 points for fifth place, scored one of the big upsets when Jimmy Ferguson clcked off a 10.2 100 and nipped favored Ken Howard of Washington by two strides.

Maryland Wins Final Event to Score, 69 2/3-61 1/3

Maryland settled its track feud with Georgetown yesterday by nosing out the Hoyas on their new oval, 69 2/3 to 61 1/3.

The duel wasn't decided until Mort Cohen set a record of 22 feet to win the broad jump, last event on the program.

The Terps won five field events and tied for first in the sixth. The Hoyas swept first places in all nine track events. Maryland's depth decided the meet in its favor, the Terps sweeping all three places in the shot, javelin and discus.

With the track in superb condition and scarcely a breeze to bother the competitors, four track and field records fell for the Georgetown field.

Deady Hoya Standout

Joe Deady, the Hoyas' standout distance man, scampered the half mile in 1:54 flat. Later he ran the first mile of his three-year collegiate career, and won in the remarkably good time of 4:24.5.

Mitchell, who saved the Hoyas from a shutout in the field by tying for first with a 5-foot, 10-inch high jump, snapped his own hurdles records with 14.4 in the highs and 24.6 in the lows.

Sprinter Vince Cino of Georgetown was responsible for setting the fourth track record when he took the 220 in 21.9 seconds.

Ward Sets Record, Too

In dominating the field events, two Terps broke records too. Bob Ward, 185-pound guard on Maryland's football team, sent the javelin soaring 185 feet, 10 inches—10 inches farther than he heaved it in winning the A. A. U. title a week ago.

And Cohen in saving the meet for the Terps, broad jumped 22 feet. The Hoyas needed a first and a third place in that event to pull the meet out of the fire, and Mort Kane almost got them their first.

On his third try, he leaped 22 feet, 2 inches, but a foul was detected. Kane had started his jump an inch beyond the rubber, and his mark was disallowed. He wound up with second place, however.

However, Palmer's performance paced the strong Wake Forest team to a record breaking squad performance. His 139, 143 by Dick Tiddy, 146 by Frank Edens and 147 by Sonny Harris gave the Deacons a 575 total, five strokes under the record set a year ago by Duke, winner of the team title a dozen times.

Hoya Frosh Win in Track

Georgetown's very promising freshmen trackmen broke three Hoya varsity records yesterday and swamped Baltimore Olympic Club, 77-36, yesterday at Georgetown.

Jim Fielding bettered the 100-yard dash record by winning in 9.7. Joe La Piere ran a sizzling 4:20.4 mile after being clocked en route at 2:05 for the half. And 118-pound Irv Capozzolli won the two-mile in 9:31.2, breaking the old Georgetown field record by 30 seconds.

Another standout performance was turned in by Robert (Bugs) Thompson of whom great things are expected in football. The former McKinley Tech high athlete, out for track only one day, won the low hurdles in 26.4 and finished second to Fielding in the 100 in 9.9.

Wright Wins, 8-7

Wright Real Estate beat the YMCA Eagles, 8-7, and the Cardinals defeated Fairlington, 12-5, yesterday in play on the East Ellipse. Bob Goldstein hit a homer with two on for the Redbirds.

M. I. T. Shatters Harvard Lock On Rowing

Annapolis, Md., May 13 (AP).—MIT broke Harvard's monopoly on the Eastern Intercollegiate crew spring championships today with a one-tenth second victory on the Severn River.

Surging ahead in the last quarter mile, MIT saved enough to fend off Harvard's powerful drive at the finish of the 2000-meter row.

Princeton was third in the fleet of 12 crews which battled a crisp cross-course wind and bumpy water in the feature event of the east's major regatta.

Coach Jim McMillin's powerful sweep swingers—none shorter than 6 feet 2—were clocked in 6 minutes 28.8 seconds. Harvard was timed in 6:28.9. Finish line judges estimated 4 feet separated the two bows.

Harvard, which swept the sprint championships last year, found some satisfaction today in recapturing the Rowe Cup, awarded to the school whose crews score the most points in all three races.

Crimson freshmen won the opening race and the Harvard junior varsity finished three-quarters of a length behind victorious Princeton in the second test.

34 Crews Compete

Thirty-four shells, largest field in the regatta's five-year history, competed.

Princeton's sprinting varsity shot ahead after the 12 big shells settled down to steady beats from a good start in the feature race. Never more than a length back, M. I. T., Harvard and Penn pressed the Tigers constantly until the mile mark. Then Penn faltered, while M. I. T. and Harvard advanced.

Two-time losers to the Crimson this year, M. I. T. pushed its beat from 34 strokes a minute to 36, then to 38. The low-paced Harvard eight, hewing to a 34-beat through most of the race, went up to 36.

Harvard, a little more than one length ahead of Princeton, thus lost a title it had possessed since 1947.

Wisconsin, which won the first Eastern Asociation of Rowing Colleges regatta on the Severn in 1946, was far back in tenth place, Penn was fourth and Syracuse fifth ahead of a Yale crew which fell back after an early challenge.

Harvard's freshmen spurted in the last 200 yards to finish a half-length ahead of Princeton in 6 minutes 47.1 seconds. Boston University's frosh, who beat Harvard last month, were third.

The junior varsity grind saw Princeton come back and whip Harvard by three-qarters of a length. The Tigers were clocked in 6 minutes 33 seconds. Navy was third, almost a length behind Harvard.

The order of finish:

VARSITY—1, MIT; 2, Harvard; 3, Princeton; 4, Pennsylvania; 5, Syracuse; 6, Yale; 7, Columbia; 8, Navy; 9, Cornell; 10, Wisconsin; 11, Boston U.; 12, Rutgers.

JUNIOR VARSITY—1, Princeton; 2, Harvard; 3, Navy; 4, Yale; 5, MIT; 6, Cornell; 7, Syracuse; 8, Boston U.; 9, Pennsylvania; 10, Columbia.

FRESHMEN—1, Harvard; 2, Princeton; 3, Boston U.; 4, MIT; 5, Cornell; 6, Yale; 7, Pennsylvania; 8, Navy; 9, Columbia; 10, Rutgers; 11, Syracuse; 12, Dartmouth.

ROWE CUP STANDING—1, Harvard, 17 points; 2, Princeton, 15; 3, MIT, 10; 4, Navy, 2; 5, Boston U., 1.

Yale Crew Beats Princeton

Derby, Conn., May 13.—Yale's lightweight crew won its first Goldthwaite Cup in 13 years, beating Princeton by two lengths and Harvard by a half boat more on the Housatonic River today.

The Yale boat, stroked by sophomore David Zogbaum, covered 1-5/16 miles downstream in 7:14. Yale trailed briefly in the early going, but took its beat up to 34 and gained the lead after a half mile. Winners added to it every stroke thereafter.

Yale also won the preliminary freshman race and finished in a tie with Harvard in the junior varsity match.

Navy Loser To Hopkins In Lacrosse

Annapolis, Md., May 13 (AP).—Pouring it on in the second half, mighty Johns Hopkins rowed over Navy, 8-4, today for its twenty-eighth straight lacrosse victory.

The score was deadlocked, 3-3, when Fred Smith put Hopkins ahead for good, bouncing a 12-yard shot past a huddle of players into the Navy net after 4 minutes and 4 seconds of play in the second quarter.

Forbush was the game's high scorer with two goals, both in the second quarter when the tide turned for Hopkins.

Partisan feeling ran high in the springtime classic. Referee Tommy Dukehart ousted Midshipman Joe Bray from the game for a swing on Neil Polhaus 14 seconds before half-time.

DUGOUT CHATTER
Presented by GEORGE'S
RADIO AND TELEVISION CO.

THE WOLFF DEN

Senator Harry Cain of Washington pitched batting practice before the Nats-Chicago game the other night with one thought in mind. The Senator was hoping that a hot drive through the box wouldn't raise Cain . . . All of you know the poem, "Casey at the Bat." But do you know how many were on base when mighty Casey struck out? . . . You're wrong if you think the bases were loaded . . .

When the American League umpires get together in the dressing room before each game nowadays, there's a lot of mud-slinging involved . . . but it's all aimed at the baseballs. The umps have a can of special soil to which they add water. The resulting mud is applied to the baseballs. After it dries the mud is rubbed off and the baseballs are ready for the game.

In Boston, after popular Al Zarilla struck out time after time in the first few games, a Boston sportswriter looked down from the press box and asked: "Is that a man or a revolving door."

Al soon snapped out of it, however, and started revolving around the bases.

THE BAER FACTS

Colorful Buddy Baer, ex-heavyweight contender, recently invaded New York as a nightclub singer. Which reminds us of the time last year when he was appearing at the Club Kavakos, and dropped in on our televison show.

Buddy made a name for himself by knocking Joe Louis through the ropes right here in Washington. But he still has a high opinion of Joe. We asked him how tall Joe was in comparison to the giant Buddy, and Buddy had a ready answer, "He only came up to here," said Buddy, pointing to his chin, "but he came up to here too often."

New York Herald-Tribune columnist Red Smith tells of the time a man greeted Baer, "Hello, Buddy, where'd you get all the gray hair?"

"Did you ever fight Joe Louis twice?" Buddy said. Then he added, "You've got plenty of gray there, yourself."

"Yes," the man said. "I bet on you both times."

BACKWARD GLANCE

Indiana's giant guard, Casimir Witucki, is a man who's proud of his physique. One day he was showing it to a group of awed freshmen.

Bragged Witucki: "See these shoulders? Push-ups built them up. My stomach and chest—lots of sit-ups. And lots of running built up my big legs."

Just then the line coach, who was eavesdropping, commented, "Looks to me, Cas, like you did a lot of horse-back riding, too."

GEORGE ON GEORGE'S

Last week we had George Kell on our George's Dugout Chatter show on WTTG. And it was really George's show.

Kell demonstrated his famous hands-apart grip on the bat for our televiewers. The hands are placed about two inches apart on the bat handle.

This was Ty Cobb's style when Ty was burning up the league. But Kell thinks he is the only one now playing in the American League who is using the unique grip.

George told us he adopted the grip to help himself become a pull-hitter. And evidently it worked, for George pulled himself right up to the American League batting championship.

CHAMPIONSHIP STYLE

George Kell has a batting style all his own. George, like every player, tries to use the style which suits him best. There are also many styles in television and radio sets and George's Radio and Television Company, metropolitan Washington's largest radio, television and electrical appliance dealer, has a radio or television set for every taste. See for yourself at the main store at 816 F Street or at any of the George's stores listed below.

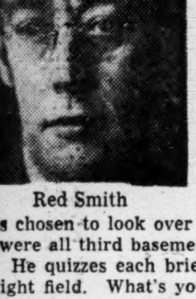
Phils Win 6th in Row Behind Simmons, 7-1

—Instead of Braves—

Maybe Bums Should Play the Youngsters

By Red Smith

BROOKLYN, MAY 13 (NYHT).—The sun was warm in the corner of Ebbets Field where the Dodger bullpen is, and the air fairly shivered with a treble clamor. Kids swarmed and chattered around a box in the front row where four boys sat wearing baseball uniforms. Pee Wee Reese should cover an area as wide as their grins.



Red Smith

The box is the headquarters of Happy Felton's "Knot-Hole Gang," a television show that goes on daily for a half-hour before the Dodgers' home games. It is, in this book, a solid show because it brings kids into the ball park; it sells baseball.

Each day, Felton, an ample and genial actor who is himself a baseball fan, selects three members of juvenile teams around town and takes them to the game for "tryouts." If they're catchers, he asks a Brooklyn pitcher to throw a few to them. If they're pitchers, Roy Campanella or Bruce Edwards handles their stuff. An infielder is chosen to look over the infielders, and so on. Yesterday the kids were all third basemen, so Billy Cox took them on.

He quizzes each briefly. "With a man on first, the batter hits to right field. What's your position waiting for the runner trying to come over to third?" "I straddle the bag," the kid says, his grin fading as he concentrates.

THERE'S THE sketchiest sort of workout and then Cox decides which kid handles himself best. All the boys get the same prizes—bats, balls, gloves and cap—but the kid named the best gets an autographed ball designating him the best for that day. Then he may return the next day, with his father or a friend, for a chat with the Dodger he wants most to meet.

One day Preacher Roe was working with a young catcher. One pitch squirted out of the youngster's mitt.

"What pitch was it, Preacher, that got away?" Felton asked.

"I call it my blazer ball," Roe said.

"You mean your fast ball?"

"No," the Preacher said.

"The one that goes the furtherest."

Another day Jackie Robinson was the instructor. He noticed that the bats given as prizes were Louisville Sluggers of his own model, bearing his signature.

"Where'd you get them?" he asked.

"Bought 'em," Felton said, "in a store."

"Look," Jackie said, "Will you buy me some? I can't get any. All I got is an old bunch of splinters."

TODAY'S WAS NOT precisely an ideal game for the small guests, except for one nipper from the Bronx who is a Yankee fan and could hardly be expected to bleed over the Dodgers' wounds.

From the Brooklyn point of view things were bad at the outset—the Dodgers were home from a western tour where they lost six of ten games, and they'd been whipped in their last two starts—and they went swiftly from there to worse, much worse.

First Reese lost a pop fly in the sun. There were two out and two on base at the time, so the runners were in motion and when Pee Wee wrapped his arms around his skull in self-defense the ball dropped behind him and Willard Marshall, the reformed Giant, had a run-batted-in.

"There's that power the Giants traded away," a critic said.

Then Sid Gordon, a retreaded Giant, lashed a two-run homer into the seats, and Sam Jethroe, whom the Dodgers sold to the Braves, flogged a hideous line drive into the far stands of centerfield, and Marshall tripled two runs home, and Walker, a Giant of earlier vintage, doubled another across, and Buddy Kerr, formerly of the Polo Grounds, singled for still another.

THE DODGERS were behind, 9 to 0, and getting a mite frantic. Robinson smashed into Reese's Adams Apple chasing a popup, knocking Pee Wee out of action. Duke Snider and George Shuba nearly collided on an outfield drive.

With Vern Bickford twisting the knife—except for an anemic roller which Earl Torgeson messed up in the fourth inning, he was a no-hit pitcher until Billy Cox skipped a single past second base in the seventh inning—the Dodgers writhed miserably.

They were being tormented by a very good baseball team. Powered by those New York exiles, the Braves can hit, run and field. Kerr hit three singles and made a sweet double play on Robinson, digging up the ball near second, stepping on the bag and firing to first. If Bill Southworth can get pitchers to help Bickford, Warren Spahn and Johnny Sain, he'll have a better team by far than the one that won the pennant two years ago.

In the ninth inning, Cooper walloped a frightful smash into the bleachers in dead centerfield. Three runs came in and the score was Boston 12, Brooklyn 2.

"The Giants," a man conceded, "have at last learned how to beat the Dodgers."

oe DiMaggio oins Nats

yesterday.

Bluege wouldn't say what it cost the Nats to sign the boy, but hinted it was many dollars less than the $100,000 the Yankees are paying the real thing this year.

"He isn't a bonus player, but we did have to outbid the Phillies and Braves for him," Bluege added. To fall into the bonus classification, a player must receive at least $6000 for signing.

"I almost keeled over when Holly called me Thursday and said he'd signed Joe DiMaggio," Bluege continued.

"Holly said he'd watched this kid for several days at the school and he was impressed. When he asked this fellow Haines, who runs the school, what the kid's name was, Haines said Joe DiMaggio. Holley told him the kid looked good, but not that good, to cut out the kidding and tell him his name. Haines repeated, 'Joe DiMaggio, I swear it,' and Holly took it from there.

"I didn't believe it, either, but I told Holly to stop stalling, go ahead and sign the boy. Hell, if he turns out to be a flop, maybe we can sell his autograph and get our money back."

And so Holly got the kid to sign a Charlotte contract and whisked him off to Concord, N. C., where George Lacy, one-time Boston Red Sox catcher, manages the embryo Nats.

"But he can't play right away because his mother hasn't signed the contract yet," Bluege said.

Washington's DiMaggio played the outfield and pitched for Monterey High last year and played semipro ball after graduation.

"I haven't the slightest idea how he happened to show up at that school in New York," Bluege concluded. "Maybe he just wanted to be close to his cousin."

Meanwhile, Sam Mele, a substitute centerfielder, continues to play centerfield for the Nats, while Joe DiMaggio learns how in a Class D. league.

of the backstretch and Maryland Day went in front midway down, with Ferd and Suleiman close by. Heading into the far turn, about a half mile from home, Ted Atkinson shot Ferd into the lead by a scant margin, while Maryland Day tired, and Hill Prince and Middleground opened the throttle.

Ferd was through at the top of the stretch, but Hill Prince came roaring on the rail, with Middleground going slightly wide to lose some ground. They were only heads apart until Arcaro stepped on the accelerator a bit more and Hill Prince drew away in the final eighth of a mile.

MIDDLEGROUND was well placed early, lost ground on the stretch turn when his rider permitted HILL PRINCE to come through on the inside and racing wide through the tretch was unable to get up although finishing steadily. FERD was saved back of MARYLAND DAY for the first half mile then went to the front and raced on the nside thereafter but was no match for the first two. Dick Sisler And Ennis Hit Homers

Philadelphia, May 13 (AP).—Curt Simmons, the $65,000 bonus beauty of the Philadelphia Phils, came up with a brilliant three-hitter today as the league-leading Phils defeated the New York Giants, 7-1, for their sixth straight victory.

Simmons, in gaining his fourth straight victory against one loss, didn't allow a hit until the fifth inning when Rookie Gilbert and Ed Stanky singled. He fanned eight and walked five.

The Giants picked up their only run in the first inning when Stanky walked, moved to second on a balk and scored on infield outs.

Faulkner Sets Car Race Mark

Indianapolis, May 13 (AP).—Walt Faulkner of Long Beach, Calif., qualified for his first 500-mile Memorial Day Race and smashed the Indianapolis Motor Speedway records for both 2½ and ten miles today.

He averaged 134.343 miles an hour in the four-cylinder rear-drive Grant Piston Ring Special. His best lap was 136.013.

The 30-year-old Faulkner's performance broke the four-year-old qualifying records set by the late Ralph Hepburn in 1946 in an eight-cylinder front drive Novi Special.

Hepburn's top speeds were 134.499 for two and one-half miles (one lap) and 133.944 for ten miles.

By virtue of last night's victory, the Jets now are leading in the series, 3-1, and can clinch a tie in the eight-game competition by winning today's matinee contest at Uline's at 3 p. m.

Griffs Beaten Again At Fenway Park, 5-4

tiously held up at third base. Coan moved in to hit for Tom O'Brien, and absorbed a third strike with his bat on his shoulder. In fact, it dried up the whole situation for the Red Sox.

IN SHORT. The anti-Ted Williams faction among Fenway Park fans have adopted Rookie Walt Drepo as their new hero and are trying to outshout the Williams fans. The Nats' Mickey Grasso, an alumnus of three years in a German prisoner camp, tomorrow will be presented with a life membership card by the American Prisoners of War . . . and in another pregame ceremony Birdie Tebbetts will be presented with a scroll, commemorating his 1000th game in the majors . . . Lloyd Hittle will pitch the opener of tomorrow's twin bill for the Nats, with either Steve Nagy or Dick Weik going in the second. Mel Parnell and Al Papai will pitch for Boston . . . Eddie Robinson's fearful hitting slump, two hits in his last 24 times at bat, has dropped him to a dismal .179 average . . . Joe McCarthy squawked loudly that Ortiz should have been out for interference when Keltner bobbled Kozar's grounder in the Nats' big seventh . . . the Nats must lop off two players before Thursday midnight to meet the 25-player deadline. One rookie pitcher and one outfielder face the axe.

4 Ex-Giants Rout Bums For Braves

Brooklyn, May 13 (AP).—Vern Bickford came up with a three-hitter today but his brilliant pitching was overshadowed by the batting exploits of four former New York Giaonts as the Boston Braves romped to a 12-2 decision over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The former Giants, Walker Cooper, Sid Gordon, Willard Marshall and Buddy Kerr, drove in 11 runs and collected nine of the 13 hits yielded by a trio of Brooklyn pitchers. Rookie Sam Jethroe accounted for the other Boston run with his fifth homer.

Cooper, recently acquired from Cincinnati, did the most damage. The big catcher drove in five runs on a three-run homer, double and fly ball. Gordon knocked in two runs on his eighth homer while Marshall batted in three on a single and triple and Kerr one on a one-bagger.

Terps Score 10 In Two Innings To Win, 14-0

Baltimore, May 13 (AP).—Maryland scored four runs in the first inning and 10 in the eighth—all off Pitcher Bob Wroblewski—today for a 14-0 baseball win over Johns Hopkins.

Dan Wagner pitched hitless ball for Maryland through the first five innings to gain credit for the victory, the sixteenth in 22 Terrapin games.

The sparkling righthander retired the first 13 batters in order. He walked the next two, then fanned the next two, giving him six strikeouts.

Gordon Kessler pitched the last four innings for Maryland, surrendering only one hit in the eighth and another in the ninth. Wroblewski, who was banged for 15 hits himself, got one of the two registered by Hopkins, a double.

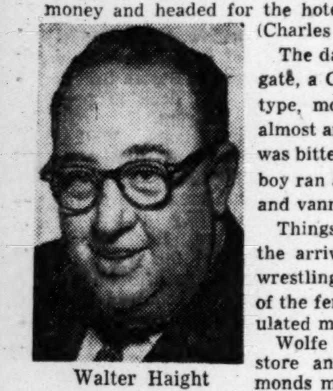
A Girl, a Song, a Horse

It Was Different, This Derby Morning

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

LAST DERBY MORNING began like many others. The morning-after boys, little men with wire brushes, were around early and swept out my head. I washed up, dressed, counted my expense money and headed for the hotel coffee shop there to meet Leeds (Charles Town) Riley.



Walter Haight

The day was still routine when Walter Fugate, a Georgian not of the "Tobacco Road" type, moved in with us for breakfast. As almost any sports page reader knows, Fugate was bitten by the Derby bug when his Hallieboy ran a good race at Lincoln Downs (R. I.) and vanned the colt 1700 miles to Louisville.

Things ceased to be normal, however with the arrival of one Billy Wolfe, husband of wrestling champion Mildred Burke and czar of the female end of the Nation's video-stimulated mat game.

Wolfe is a combiation of walking jewelry store and human "milky way." His diamonds make him shine like a chandelier in a gay '90s dining room—$60,000 worth.

He sported a diamond belt buckle featuring a stone with the brilliance of a locomotive headlight; cuff links that sparkled like the sun on a wind-rippled lake; a stickpin with the moonless-night glare of a blue-white neon sign; a horseshoe-shaped watch fob that made me wish I had worn sun glasses; rings on his fingers—four of them, but a solitaire given exclusive right to one hand, is the daddy of them all. Although two carats were lost in cutting to modern setting, the stone weighed in at 10 carats, he explained.

GETTING BACK to the breakfast scene, Wolfe whispered to Fugate and, just before leaving said aloud, "When you're through here I'll be in the night club up the lobby. Join me there."

Before we could wonder at the strange alliance, Fugate filled us in. Wolfe's interest came from reading about Hallieboy and he fell in love with the colt after watching him workout. He wanted to buy half interest before the race for a sum Fugate described as "less than $15,000."

On the spur of the moment I didn't know whether I smelled a story or a rat or both and I was pleased when Fugate invited us to accompany him and smiled, "I might need witnesses."

Now get this scene: The time is 10:30 a. m. and, with the exceptions of Wolfe and a girl wrestler lolling in a chair beside him, the place is devoid of customers. Two bartenders are shining glasses while several waiters are wandering aimlessly.

FORMING A HALF circle around Wolfe and the feminine Lordos, Miss June Beyers, is a Latin orchestra. They are plunking their instruments and each seeming to have picked out a Wolfe diamond. While they are aplunkin' and a-starin' a girl vocal—could-be Portugese or Brooklynese—is giving out with moans the South American way. That's the scene.

Wolfe slipped off the course to talk diamonds but Fugate, better than a green hand at diplomacy, reined him back to horses. All the while, the musicians were a-strummin' and a-starin.'

Joe Engel, Fugate's friend and breeder of Hallieboy, came in and before leaving whispered to the owner trainer, "If you can get anything over ten grand, take it. Don't be a fool."

Finally, Fugate asked time to talk it over with his wife before the family left for the track and Wolfe responded with, "Let them meet you here," raising his voice as the music, at the crescendo stage, literally was being poured down our necks.

WELL, THE FUGATES arrived—fresh from Chicamauga, Ga., the women folk as neat as student nurses on graduation day and the children in Sunday best.

Here was a rock-solid, church-going, small-town American family, that never dreamed two weeks before of attending a Kentucky Derby, much less of being in a night club at 11 a. m. with a wrestling promoter, a girl head-locker, a race track official and a fat reporter.

There was mother Fugate, a sweet little lady, her printed dress adorned by a purple orchid; daughter Judith Ann, a simply attired 12-year-old; son Walter, jr.; a 16-year-old chip off the old block and two aunts, one slightly on the "Gone With the Wind" side.

The upping of the night club clientele still confined to Wolfe's party, necessitated a move to a banquet-size table at which Wolfe, after seating Mrs. Fugate at the foot, assumed position at the head.

THE CUBANS, not to be left for collateral, slithered to the new location without missing a beat and taking positions best suited to eyeing the diamonds.

The Cubans stopped a-strummin' but not a-starin'. The momentary silence was broken when the elder Fugate, looked up, caught his daughter's eye and said, "Judy, sing us a song."

The child, obviously was surprised at her sudden importance, fought to keep her composure. Her mother said, quietly, "Why not sing 'Always'? That's father's favorite."

Her voice rang out clear and mellow.

Judy finished, gave a half curtsy and sat down.

The party was over but not before Wolfe said to Fugate, "We'll complete the deal for Hallieboy at the track. Where can I meet you at 2 o'clock?"

The horseman replied, "In front of stall No. 15 in the paddock and if it's a deal we can sign the papers in the secretary's office nearby."

IN THE LOBBY, Fugate called me aside and proved, once again, that he was no country boy under the skin by saying, "Do me a favor and get every reporter, photographer, movie man and radio announcer to come to stall No. 15 at 2 o'clock. I believe this fellow will go for $20,000.

When the meeting came, Wolfe had Miss Burke as well as Miss Byers with him, remarking, "Anyway, I'm well protected."

However, Wolfe's lawyer had cooled him out on the phone meanwhile and the deal was off.

Of course, Hallieboy ran tenth in the 14-horse field. But the Fugates can't count their Derby fling a complete failure. King Ranch has Middleground, Billy Wolfe has his diamonds, Mildred Burke has her wrestling title—but the Fugates have little Judy, a champion if there ever was one.

Last Derby morning was different.

Loser Weeper Easy Winner in Dixie 'Cap

Going Away 3d Behind Tuttle Horse

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., May 13.—Loser Weeper laughed at eight rivals today as he approached track record time in winning the $20,000 added Dixie Handicap before 17,168 fans at this historic turf center.

The son of Discovery, Maryland-bred at the nearby Sagamore Farms bounded home five lengths in front of the closest opposition in the 49th running of the famous race that outdates even the Preakness.

C. E. Tuttle's Double Brandy was a charging but well-beaten second by three quarters of a length with Brookmeade Stable's Going Away third and Mrs. E. DuPont Weir's Royal Governor fourth.

The favorite, Palatine Stable's Chicle 2nd, was a dismal seventh while carrying 120 pounds to the 108 borne by Loser Weeper.

Near Record

The winner was clocked in 1.56-1/5 over the lightning-fast strip, a fraction over the track mark established by Capot in winning the Preakness last year. Second choice Loser Weeper paid $7 to win.

For Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who saw the race and accepted the trophy from Harry A. Parr III, in the winner's circle, this was the first major victory of his famous Cerise and White Diamonds, the Dixies and the Preakness' and the Pimlico Specials of the past all escaping the famous stable.

Anxious Moments

Loser Weeper gave his backers few anxious moments. The 5-year-old proved ready and willingly when asked for his real speed and failed to slow in the final stages when Combest with victory assured appeared to allow him to race on his own courage.

Royal Governor, old Mr. Upsetter, himself had his inning in the early stages. Chris Rogers took him to the front leaving the gate and he set a good pace through the stretch the first time. Bayeux, coupled with Slam Bang in the colors of C. Mahlon Kline, showed some unexpected speed in staying close to the pacemaker. Loser Weeper was third at this stage and under a steadying grip.

Royal Governor continued to set the pace into the back stretch but Bayeux began to fade and Combest moved Loser Weeper into second position. There was a wide gap developing between the two front runners and the rest of the field.

At the far turn, Loser Weeper went to Royal Governor and the fans anticipated a head-and-head battle. Such did materialize for a few brief moments but Loser Weeper soon shook off his rival and went into a daylight lead.

Royal Governor Drops Off

His effort in trying to stave off the Vanderbilt horse sent Royal Governor into discard. Loser Weeper opened a good advantage in the final straight away. Going Away rallied and then hung and lost the place to the fast closing Double Brandy.

Chicle 2nd, failed to live up to his Florida reputation. He made no move of any consequence dispite Johnny Gilbert's urging.

The victory was the third in nine starts this year for Loser Weeper and brought him $18,450 to boost his 1950 earnings to $45,250. Last year the son of Discovery accounted for $67,120.

With the best program at the meeting, the day brought the top betting for this year at Pimlico. The crowd sen $978,253 through the totte, $152,588 on the big race.

If He Can Duck Saddler

Titone-Cooper Winner Here May Get Shot at Willie Pep

If Featherweight Champion Willie Pep can duck a return match with Sandy Saddler, he may fight the winner of the Jimmy Cooper-Charlie Titone 10-rounder to be held at Griffith Stadium a week from Monday night.

Turner's Arena Matchmaker Gabe Menendez is trying to get Pep to clash with the winner. So far he has been stymied by negotiations between Pep and the International Boxing Corp., which is anxious to have Pep defend his crown against Saddler, who beat him for the championship two years ago and who lost it back to Pep last year.

A Pep-Saddler return bout in Yankee Stadium figures to net Pep at least $75,000.

Pep's handler's would like nothing better than not meeting Saddler again since Saddler administered a bad beating to the Hartford, Conn., champion even though Pep won. They're interested in retaining the championship and are doubtful if the aging Pep could do it again to Saddler.

However, Pou Viscusi, Pep's manager, has promised Menendez Pep if he can avoid a Saddler return and line up four other matches instead.

Titone, stablemate of Paddy DeMarco, arrives here Thursday along with DeMarco to finish training for the Cooper bout. Gene Smith, D. C.'s classy young featherweight, clashes with Jimmy Watkins of New York, in the eight-round semiwindup to the town's first outdoor fight of the season.

Dear Folks: At Pimlico.

Jockey Melvin Peterson, who scored his first success of the Pimlico meeting last Friday on Ariel Sweep, is no stranger to the winner's circle, although this is his first swing around tracks in the East. Peterson, a native of Salina, Utah, is a 29-year-old veteran of the saddle who has enjoyed excellent success in the Midwest and in California. He won the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap with Olhaverry in 1947 as well as other stakes. Peterson is married and has one child. His family still resides in California. He is in the East with the Crescent Stable, which plans to campaign at Delaware Park and in New Jersey following the Pimlico meeting. Agent Paul Donella is handling his engagements.

Blue Fish On Way Up The Coast

By Ralph Murdock

Murdock

NEWS ON THE BLUES. Tremendous schools of bluefish are on their way up the Atlantic Coast. From Southport, N. C., comes these reports. Captain Vic Lance, on his first party trip after his return from Florida, brought in 302 bluefish. Eight fishermen, all from Fayetteville, N. C., made the catch. A record haul of 678 blues was also made at the same spot by Capt. Hulan Watts, who had six other anglers aboard.

In both instances, the blues were small and only a few weighed more than a pound. Further up the coast at Cape Hatteras, the surf casters started catching bluefish on lead squids and on last Saturday, the first blues of the season were pulled in at Oregon Inlet. The Inlet catches were considerably larger, some weighing up to 3½ pounds. Practically all of the blues averaged 2 pounds each at Nag's Head.

While trolling aboard Capt. Sambo Tillett's charter boat "Spur" at Oregon Inlet, Ted Parks of Norfolk, Va., felt a tug and started reeling in what he thought to be the granddaddy of all channel bass. After a lengthy struggle, the fish was hauled aboard. Much to his surprise he had snagged a 4½-foot sturgeon. The catch was unusual because a sturgeon is never known to hit a lure or bait.

LAST WEEKEND'S hardhead fishing proved a dud at Benedict. It was not until Thursday evening before any noticeable catches were made. The croakers took on a new lease on life around 7 p. m. and hit fairly steady until 9 p. m.

Two anglers who were fortunate enough to be in the right spot at the right time were Bennie Babashan, 35 Galveston pl. sw., and George Oki, 1628 O st. nw. They bagged 17 big croakers.

Bill Conklin and Dr. Chasko, from St. Elizabeths Hospital, also got their fish before 9 p. m. Their total was nine hardheads. Shrimp was the successful bait.

ANGLER CARLSON went out from Deale, Md., and fished in Herring Bay. His catch amounted to 11. The above reports, which emanate from Ed Davis, proprietor of the Anacostia Sport Mart on Good Hope rd., convinces us of one fact—the best fishing occurs near dusk.

As long as the weather stays cool we suggest that you fish in shoal water from 2½ to 5 feet deep on shores, piers and other points of vantage. This goes for both hardheads and rockfish.

A card from Andy Scheible says that he will be located at Sand Gates on the Patuxent River during the current run of hardheads in the Patuxent River. Andy stated that his boats follow the fish.

Art Brown, who plunks the organ on WWDC, starts his spring fishing on Sunday. More about Art later.

Hoyas Thrash LaSalle in Tennis

Doubles: McCarthy and Egan (G) beat MaGuire and Foster (L), 6—3, 6—3. Muckerman and Carr beat McHale and Kelly (L), 6—3, 6—2. O'Conner and Polinka (L) beat Hynes and Newman (G), 6—2, 6—4.

Right-hander Yields Only 3 Singles

George Washington University, behind the 3-hit pitching of Bones Becraft, defeated Virginia's Cavaliers, 2-0, yesterday at Griffith Stadium.

The victory enabled the Colonials to snap a four-game losing streak and at the same time avenge an earlier 8-1 Virginia triumph.

Both pitchers went the route and were helped along by six double plays—four by Virginia and two by GW.

The G-Streeters scored both of their runs in the fifth inning. Jack Tivnan started the rally by walking. Becraft slashed a grounder to Shortstop Jim Patton, who threw late to second base in an attempt to get Tivnan. Becraft was credited with a hit on the play. The bases were loaded when Chet Pietras beat out an infield hit.

Bob Cilento walked, forcing Tivnan, and Becraft wound up the day's scoring by coming across as Joe Famulatte singled off Second Baseman Ted Davenport's glove.

Virginia's biggest threat was in the fourth inning when the Cavaliers loaded the bases with one out. Becraft got out of the jam by forcing Stan Harris, son of Washington Nats Manager Bucky Harris, and Jim Patton to pop up to Cilento.

Hoyas Lose To Fordham

New York, May 13 (AP).—Capt. Jack Guinta's two-run homer in the twelfth inning gave the Fordham Rams a 10-9 victory over Georgetown today at Fordham Field.

Guinta was about to be the goat of the game, in the top of the twelfth, he let in the tying run for the losers with a wild throw past first for what would have been the third out.

Tom Casagrande, who came in from right field in the eighth, was the winning pitcher, while Doc Dougherty was the loser.

The victory was Fordham's twelfth in 17 games and the loss gives Georgetown a season record of 13 and 5.

Munn's Word At Rosecroft

Pert Louise Munn, who used to star with Hopalong Cassidy in blood and thunder sagas of the Wild West, is expected to arrive at Rosecroft Raceway tomorrow to stable her three horses, Gallanova, Candy Harvester, and Eleanor Hanley.

Louise had hoped to drive her own horses, but a Maryland Racing Commission rule prohibits women from driving in professional races. Several amateur races are planned, though, and if they go through, Louise will get her chance.

The stable area at Rosecroft is filling up and track officials have made arrangements to stable horses at Marlboro. Over 700 will be campaigning during the meet.

Bryant Steals Home To Win for Ballston

Donny Bryant stole home in the ninth inning to give the Ballston Indians' 17-and under team a 7-6 victory over the Wood Acre Pirates yesterday on the losers' diamond.

The Ballston midget team trounced the Del Ray Boys' Club, 23-3, in an Alexandria Midget League game

SIXTH DOUBLE PLAY—George Washington University and Virginia University clicked off double plays like big leagues yesterday in their game at Griffith Stadium. Six were completed, and this picture shows the execution of No. 6 in the seventh inning. Tom Evans, Virginia pitcher, hit to Bones Becraft, GW pitcher, who threw to Chet Pietras, forcing Stan Harris at second. Pietras' throw to Lou Ciarrocca completes the double play. GW won, 2-0

W. Maryland Routed, 22-6, By Catholic U

Westminster, Md., May 13 (AP).—Catholic University pounded every available Western Maryland pitcher for 25 hits today to make a 22-6 victory.

Western Maryland sent four hurlers to the mound, but none was effective.

Catholic scored in all but three innings, and tallied seven runs in the sixth, including a three run homer by Bob Cousey.

Jahney and Zurawel of Catholic U. both got four hits in six tries, and Jahney was credited with batting in six of Catholic's runs.

McNutt on the mound all the way for the winners, got credit for the win. The loss was charged to Lathroum, Western Maryland's starting hurler who was through after the second frame.

Terps Rally To Beat Duke In Lacrosse

The University of Maryland lacrosse team defeated Duke, 10-8, last night in a hectic contest at College Park. The Terps had to overcome a two-goal deficit in the third quarter to win.

After leading 4-2 at the half, Maryland got a jolt as the Blue Devils rang up four goals in the first four minutes of play in the third period. The Terps rallied and scored four goals to go ahead, 8-6.

Duke scored two goals early in the final period to tie the score, 8-8. After eight minutes, Pat Walker put over a Terp score and Hanly Lowry iced the contest with another.

Riley Takes Amateur Golf

Virginia Beach, Va., May 13 (AP). Two terrific iron shots and lady luck combined here today to give Texas-born Polly Riley of Fort Worth, a 1-up victory over Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta and the thirty-fifth Southern Women's Amateur Golf Championship.

Miss Riley's second great chip shot on the Cavalier Yacht and Country Club's 6065 rain-soaked yards came on the 401-yard thirty-third hole. Standing 70 feet from the pin, the sturdy little Texan grasped an eight iron, sent the ball skidding from the steep slope overlooking the green, onto the velvet and into the cup.

The shot gave Miss Riley an Eagle three. That dramatic gesture highlighted a bitter, grueling battle over 36 holes that three times saw Miss Kirby pull from behind with spectacular putting.

Twice during the long struggle, Miss Kirby was four down.

Notre Dame Loses Football Game—in Practice Alumni Thump Varsity by 3 Touchdowns

South Bend., Ind., May 13 (AP). More than 25,000 fans took a peek at Notre Dame's 1950 football Varsity under actual game conditions today — and didn't think much of it.

The Old Timers, Irish alumni, walloped the Varsity, 25-7. It was the worst Varsity drubbing since the annual series ending spring drills began under Knute Rockne in the 1920's.

The Varsity scored in the first four minutes on Bill Gay's 27-yard dash and Joe Catrara's conversion. From then on the players who will represent the Irish next fall were crushed.

The Old Timers gained 217 yards by rushing and the Varsity 110. Quarterback Bob Williams connected on only 4 out of 19 tosses for 32 yards.

In the first quarter, Larry Coutre scored from one-foot out to cap a 72-yard Old Timer march in 15 plays. In the final 13 seconds of the second period George Connor, on a tackle-eligible play, took an eight-yard touchdown pass from Johnny Mazur. Steve Oracko added the point giving the Old Timers a 13-7 bulge.

A recovered fumble touched off Coutre's plunge from the 2 for another tally in the third. Emil Sitko herded a 67-yard match with a 29-yard dash to the 1 and then bucked over for the fourth touchdown in the finale.

The only consolation to the Varsity was that its No. 2 quarterback, Mazur, was "borrowed" by the Old Timers when Frank Tripucka could not make train connections out of Bloomfield, N. J., because of the strike.

At Present Woodmont Site

New Nine-Hole Public Golf Course Is Virtually Certain to Be Ready by July 1

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

A NEW NINE-HOLE public golf course on the site of the present Woodmont, to be opened about July 1, is now "virtually certain," says Roger Peacock, director of golf for Montgomery County.

Roger said that as soon as Woodmont moves to its new layout, the Federal Government will lease the premises to Montgomery County.

"Something could go wrong to block the deal," Peacock said, "but we are in agreement on all but a few minor points. I am sure that the public will soon have available an attractive course at reasonable fees."

GOLF IS A great equalizer of people—even in the Army. Paired in the championship flight at Fort Meade's golf tourney May 20 are Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure vs. Pvt. Willie Dunbar.

JUNE 25 is "Tom Ryan Day" at Belle Haven. Eddie Edwards says the celebration, held in honor of Tom's twenty-fifth anniversary as Belle Haven pro, is a little late. He's already started on his twenty-sixth. Golfing, tennis, dinner, and a dance are scheduled.

MILO CHRISTIANSEN and Don Dudley, planning Kenwood's Invitational Tournament May 15, 16, and 17, have assembled a talented field. Ralph Bogart, defending champ, will have to knock off such stalwarts as Joe Wilson, Kenwood champ; Charley Price, winner of the Cavalier Amateur Open; Don Miller and Larry Imhoff, former Kenwood titlists; Col. Jim Wilson of Army-Navy, and Keith Kallio of East Potomac.

EAST POTOMAC has come up with a good idea. Its "C" course is being revamped as a special course for beginning golfers. It will speed play on other courses and give the tyros a chance to sharpen their game without embarrassment.

FORT DUPONT Public Golf Course has elected George C. Scheirer treasurer, and Russ Lombardy, golf instructor at Tech High, secretary. The membership voted to hold its first tournament, a handicap-medal affair, May 27-28.

ANACOSTIA has announced its Blind Bogey winners. Danny Burton with 70 plus 2, and Glenn Taylor with 85 minus 13, tied for first with 72. J. L. Manning with 80 minus 7, W. W. Seay with 73 minus 0, and Harry Reidinger with 78 minus 5, all tied for third with 73.

Seay and William Swan had a best ball 61 Sunday, five below par.

THE FEDERAL Civic Golf League will begin its second year of existence with an amateur tournament at Prince Georges Monday. Over 100 golfers have entered. The Postoffice, District Police, Baltimore Police and the Fire Department are among the entries.

Trophies will be awarded the low net winners in three classes: A, 0-13 handicap; B, 14-23, and C, 24-36. Merchandise prizes will be given other winners. A dinner with Judge Joseph Kolodny as speaker, is slated.

Metropolitan Planning Hit By Mumford

The big city's days are numbered.

It will fall of its own weight and thus many small towns trying to become big towns may be saved from a similar fate, a distinguished community planner predicted yesterday.

To replace it, Lewis Mumford, writer and architect, recommended regional pooling of small towns. These would provide the cultural and service advantages of the large metropolis without the attendant disadvantages of congestion and disorganization.

Mumford advised the 200 architects attending the closing session stitute of Architects at the Maystittue of Architects at the Mayflower to get behind creation of regional authorities.

In this way, "the small town will not merely come abreast of the metropolitan center; it will surpass it," he declared.

Mumford, frequent contributor to the New Yorker Magazine, was sharp in his criticism of present cities. He blamed the city for bringing about a "devaluation of ethical principles and a contempt for life," and opined, "the metropolis is unlivable."

"Collective Genocide"

Then, he warned, "Should another war break out between the major powers, this time it would be collective genocide, unrestrained and undirected violence, on a scale hitherto unimaginable, and the big city would be the most attractive target for total extermination."

In his plea for regional planning, Mumford said it should direct itself to the task of "maintaining and multiplying small towns, not in furthering their indefinite growth."

Before winding up, the institute president, Ralph Walker, announced reestablishment of a joint committee from the group and the National Association of Home Builders to discuss in July a new fee basis for designing individual lowcost homes. The committee was dormant during the wartime shortage of homebuilding, but was revived after complaints were made of a lack of interest by architects in developing such plans.

The institute adopted a resolution that governmental reorganization proposals be studied so the group may take a stand later.

Meanwhile, the National Citizens Conference on Planning for City, State and Nation went into its second day with tours of the Washington area. This afternoon, the American Institute of Planners, one of the sponsoring groups, will hold a discussion of "Dispersion and Defense."

500 Compete In D. C. School Science Fair

The District's fourth annual Science Fair, featuring exhibits assembled by pupils from Washington-area secondary schools, will open Monday at 9 a. m. in the lobby of the Department of Commerce.

The fair, sponsored by the Washington Academy of Sciences and affiliated scientific societies, will continue through Friday and will be open to the public, without charge, daily from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Exhibits will include the work of 500 pupils, competing as juniors or seniors, in four separate scientific classes. Juniors include pupils in grades 7 through 9; seniors, from grades 10 through 12.

Besides the local awards, the fair will be the medium for selecting Washington entries in the first National Science Fair in Philadelphia May 19, 20 and 21.

Whisky Barrel Reveals Remains Of Outlaw of '80s

Rawlins, Wyo., May 13 (AP).—The mortal remains of Big Nose George, Rawlins outlaw of the '80's, have been uncovered in a whisky-barrel coffin.

The discovery was made by workmen digging an excavation for a store. The barrel contained a number of bones, including a skull with the top sawed off.

A Rawlins pioneer recalled that Dr. Lillian Heath, wife of Lou Nelson of Rawlins, owned the top of Big Nose George's skull. The top had been given to her by the doctor who dismembered the body in 1881.

Nelson brought the top yesterday and Coroner Dr. E. Ben Syurges matched it with the skull from the barrel. They fit perfectly.

Big Nose George was George Manuse, alias George Parrott, who in 1880 tried with a few accomplices to derail a Union Pacific train hauling a pay car. The plot was discovered and the outlaws fled.

Deputy Sheriff Bob Wooderfield was shot and killed when he came on the outlaw hiding place. Big Nose later was captured and sentenced to be executed. He was taken from the jail by four or five men and lynched.

Meeting at the St. James School in Falls Church, the group adopted a resolution favoring the park authority, proposed by the rally's arrangements committee. The meeting was sponsored by area civic groups.

Naval Museum to Be Opened Thursday at Decatur House

Washington's newest museum, the Truxtun-Decatur Naval Museum, will open Thursday noon, Lieut. Cmdr. Edward M. Davis 3d, USNR director, announced yesterday.

The museum, dedicated to the exhibition of material pertaining to American sea power in all its aspects, and operated by the Naval Historical Foundation, is located at 1610 H st. nw., in the carriage house of historic Decatur House on Lafayette Square.

Appropriately, the opening exhibition is devoted to "Commodores Thomas Truxtun and Stephen Decatur and the Navy of Their Time."

Decatur Lived There

The house was built in 1819, after designs of Benjamin Latrobe, for Decatur, who lived there about a year before being killed in a duel. In modern times is was the dwelling of the late Truxtun Beale, descendant of the commodore.

Preceding the public opening, a preview of the museum and its first exhibition will be given by the officers and trustees of the Naval Historical Foundation for the Secretary of Defense and other invited guests, including the Cabinet, Supreme Court, Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force, members of the Armed Services Committees of Congress, and others.

The museum's regular visiting hours will be: Tuesdays through Fridays, 12 noon to 5:30 p. m.; Saturdays, 10:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. Admission will be free.

Leased for 50 Years

The building, leased by the Naval Historical Foundation from Mrs. Truxtun Beale for a 50-year period for $1, has been thoroughly reconverted for museum purposes, air-conditioned and scientifically lighted. The architect is Mrs. Lavone Dickensheets Andrews, wife of former Assistant Secretary of the Navy Mark Edwin Andrews. Lawrence S. Harrison, of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, served as lighting expert.

Thomas Truxtun, who lived from 1755 to 1822, is remembered in Naval history for his abilities as an organizer and tactician. Stephen Decatur, who lived from 1779 to 1820, is remembered as a brave and dashing leader.

Californian Wins House Plan Award

Modern-design houses — with emphasis on floor to ceiling glass, built-in closets and drawers and fireplaces — won top places in American Institute of Architects residential competition the past week.

The first honor award went to A. Quincey Jones, jr., of Los Angeles, for a 1000-square-foot house with a fenced-in back yard and many shrubs. The two-bedroom structure has been erected in the Sunshine State at about $8750 plus lot.

The Jones house includes built-in drawers and shoe racks in each bedroom, a built-in dressing table in the larger bedroom, built-in phone table and desk and bar service counter.

The structure gives the owner additional savings on draperies, since screening garden fences give total privacy from neighbors.

It consists of four large rigid ribs running in the longest direction of the simple rectangular form, with exterior walls about 75 percent glass. The floors are concrete. Windows are high and next to the ceiling in most rooms.

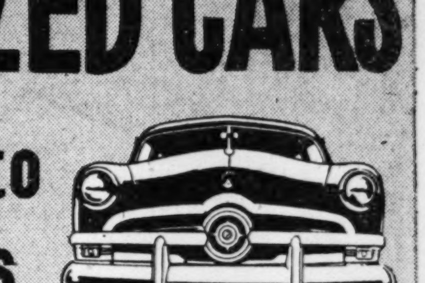
NEXT TO A NEW CAR A CHERNERIZED CAR IS BEST!

BUILT TO LAST
down thru the years!

CHERNERIZED CARS
reconditioned to
last down thru the years



Lasting things always attract more people! The 225-ton Statue of Liberty in New York harbor annually attracts 500,000 visitors. And thru the years, Chernerized cars have attracted MORE motorists than ANY other name used car! For the famous 30 Chernerizing Operations has proven its worth as one of the world's finest reconditioning systems. Folks naturally prefer this LASTING QUALITY . . . especially since it doesn't cost a penny more! MRS. FORREST SHERMAN (left), wife of Admiral Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, has her family with her for Mother's Day. Her daughter, Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, has just arrived from Spain with Diane, who is 3, and John Sherman Fitzpatrick, 7 months. The gardens of Admiral's House, home of the Chief of Naval Operations on Observatory Circle, are now in fullest bloom

Family Joins Navy's First Lady

It's Grandmother's Day, Too, at Admiral's House

By Marie McNair

YOU'D NEVER THINK to apply the word "grandmother" to Mrs. Forrest Sherman, wife of Admiral Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations. Yet she's twice a grandmother and proud of it!

Today, three generations are together for Mother's Day at Admiral's House. Mrs. John Fitzpatrick, with Diane, 3, and John Sherman Fitzpatrick, who's just 7 months, arrived last week from Spain to visit her parents and to wait for Lieutenant Commander Fitzpatrick to join them. His duty as Assistant Naval Attache at our embassy in Madrid over, Commander Fitzpatrick will be here before the month's end to receive orders for a post.

Mrs. Sherman is a modern grandmother who rides, plays bridge, has been all over the world in the wake of her husband's ship. She's a soft voiced Southerner with gray-green eyes and hair as sleek and black as a raven's wing.

Riding Is Her Hobby

SHE TAKES a rightful pride in her youthful good looks and trim figure and is reticent about revealing the date of her marriage to the handsome naval cadet she met in Pensacola back in 1923.

If there's one thing both Admiral and Mrs. Sherman like better than another, it's riding. The admiral's lady usually keeps just one horse of her own and that for show purposes only. Right now it's Marksman, which she bought since coming to Washington last fall.

Marksman shows promise, says Mrs. Sherman, who is in the habit of winning ribbons with her mounts. In Madrid, where she "based" for two years while Admiral Sherman was in command of the Mediterranean Fleet, she won high honors, and repeated them in Nice just a year ago.

House Filled With Flowers

THE BIG RED BRICK hilltop house on Observatory Circle, which is home to the Navy's top man, is always filled with fresh flowers from the garden and the greenhouse. It's a lively place now, with little Diane babbling in Spanish, the only language she knows, and John Sherman cooing in a language of his own.

Diane and her grandmother can reach perfect accord in Spanish. "But," says Mrs. Sherman, somewhat regretfully, "I would like to read her 'Twas the Night Before Christmas,' or some other story like that."

WITH MRS. TRUMAN and Mrs. J. Lawton Collins, wife of the Army Chief of Staff, Mrs. Sherman is going to the Armed Forces Day dedication celebration on Saturday at the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen's Club. Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg, wife of the Chief of Staff of the Air Force, will also be there, and distinguished guests will also include Mrs. Clifton Cates whose husband heads the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Merlin O'Neill, wife of the commandant of the Coast Guard.

The club, founded by the Woman's Army-Navy League, has had for 50 years only one objective—the comfort and welfare of the enlisted man. At the ceremonies on Saturday rooms and beds in honor of the Armed Forces in memory of relatives or friends, will be formally opened. (Pictures on page 8.)

MOTHER TO THREE stalwart growing sons, is Mrs. H. B. Temple, the former Priscilla Totten of Washington, who's coming back with her family to live after an absence of four years.

Captain Temple, already on duty as aide to secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews, left Mrs. Temple with Timothy, Nicholas and Renny in Coronado, Calif., until school closes in June.

They'll go to their summer home in Gibson Island and after that they'll all be in their house in Foxhall Village.

Mrs. Temple, born in Washington, made her debut and was married here. Since leaving, the Temples have been in San Francisco and Coronado with two years at Fort Leavenworth, when Captain Temple attended the Staff and Command College. He's just given up command of the U. S. S. Valley Forge. (Picture on Page 12.)

AT HOME or abroad, Mrs. Forrest Sherman is happiest when astride a horse. Since returning to Washington last fall she has purchased a 3-year-old which she is training for show purposes. Marksman is its name.

GI's Abroad Like Parties, Minister Finds

This is the second of a series of three Sunday articles on Mrs. Mesta's experiences as United States Minister to Luxembourg.

By Perle Mesta

U. S. Minister to Luxembourg

LUXEMBOURG'S recovery since the war I regard as little short of phenomenal. Today it is one of the most stable of the Western European countries, both politically and economically.

During the German invasion of 1940 little damage was done to the country, since no major battles were fought within Luxembourg's borders. However, in the Battle of the Bulge, substantial damage was incurred. It is estimated that 53 percent of the territory of the Grand Duchy was devastated during the final German offensive and that 38 percent of the permanent wealth of the country was destroyed.

Despite these staggering facts, Luxembourg has made an amazing recovery and today probably enjoys a higher standard of living than any other country in Europe. Prior to 1940, the Grand Duchy was recognized as having the largest purchasing power per capita in Europe, as well as the highest standard of living. She has again attained this status. Her people have worked hard to get the job done, and they deserve every commendation which can be given.

As regards my own activities, I spend my days in my office at the Legation performing the usual work of a Minister, reviewing and drafting reports to my Government and in general supervising the work of the Legation. I try to see every American visitor who wants to see me, and there are many, since many American tourists come to Luxembourg to visit the American cemetery of Hamm, where General Patton and many of his men rest.

In addition, I see many Luxembourgers, in business, in finance or in government to discuss problems of mutual interest to our two countries. Whenever the opportunity presents itself, I visit industrial establishments in the Grand Duchy. I have been down in the mines, visited the steel plants there, and technical institutions of the Ministry of Public Health.

In Touch With People

ON my weekends I go to the country to visit with a farm family or to talk with people in neighboring towns. I feel that if I am to report faithfully and accurately to my Government, I must get in close touch with the people of the country, and this cannot be done sitting at a desk.

Then, of course, there are receptions, those which I attend in my capacity of Minister and those which I give. I must say that the ones which are most enjoyable are those I give for the orphans and the GIs. I have given several parties for the war orphans in Luxembourg, and as soon as I return, I intend to give more parties for them. The size of these parties has been constantly increasing, and at the last one I gave before my departure, there were about 500 orphans present. I feel that the least I can do is to try to help these pooor unfortunate children who were orphaned by the war.

With regard to my GI parties, they got started in an unpremeditated way. Some months ago when I returned from the country on a Saturday afternoon, I found three young men waiting for me. They told me they were GIs and, of course, I invited them in. That night I was preparing a party for my staff and I invited the three young men to join us. They did, and they were the life of the party.

Letters to Mothers

WHEN they left that evening, I told them to inform their friends that any GI was always welcome at my residence, and since then, my GI parties have become an established institution. So many young men were turning up at all hours of the day and night that I was forced, so that I could get my work done, to limit these parties to the first Saturday night of every month.

I keep a guest book at the Legation, and if any of the GIs want me to write to their mothers, they put their mother's name and address in my guest book and I write a personal note to their mother telling them how their boys are getting along.

Since I have started this practice, I have received more than 500 letters from mothers, and I must say I prize these letters very greatly. I know how important it must be for any parent to get word about their son from someone who has seen him recently, and I intend to keep up this practice as long as I am in Luxembourg.

In short, my work as United States Minister to Luxembourg is as varied as it is interesting, and I am greatly enjoying my tour of duty there. I have found a community of views between the people of Luxembourg and our own which makes my service as United States Minister a most satisfying and stimulating experience.

The bride was attended by her sister Mrs. William C. Groom, jr., of Birmingham, Ala., as matron of honor. Maid of honor was Miss Caroline Triplett of Pine Bluff, Ark., and New York City, Elizabeth Croom, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Best man was Edward T. Brown of Danville, Va., and ushers were William P. Moore, jr., of Helsinki, Finland, brother of the bridegroom; Dr. William

Mary Haworth's Mail

Years Ago, When Young, Naive and Carefree, Woman Didn't Know That Old Friend Thought Her a Petty Thief; Senses Suspicion Recently

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is there something wrong with my thinking? Does this matter need a good airing? Years ago a much older woman, an intimate friend of our family, often invited me to stay overnight in her home with her, while her husband traveled. She invited two or three others as well, although never at the same time.

Then something happened that altered our relationship, although I didn't realize it at the time. Her trusted maid left and Mrs. X discovered several personal articles were gone too. In reporting this to me, she made one or two odd remarks, pursing her lips. I was young, naive, happy-go-lucky, had beaus, and missed the point. Years passed and our friendship continued much the same, although I was not asked to visit overnight.

Then one day while in her home, helping her fix some clothing for an emergency, I noticed she made continuous soft tiptoe trips into the bedroom where I was. Something clicked. Her attitude and remarks of a dozen years ago, and subsequently, flashed back. She suspected me of being dishonest!

Was that it? I was frozen with shock and hurt; and she must have noticed that I didn't go back to her home for two years, and then only at her suggestion, although we continued to visit by telephone or at my house.

Not long ago, at a party in the home of one of her relatives, I noticed I was being followed as I went upstairs to telephone my husband, who was meeting me. Once again I felt frozen with shock. Since then I don't even enjoy our telephone talks, for it seems I see her now as a sly, jealous, self righteous person who rules with a gloved hand, instead of the mild kind friend I once thought she was.

I don't see how anybody in their right mind could ever think me dishonest,—and to the point of stealing! The thought is like a cancer eating at my heart. I am a fairly busy person with a happy home, but the other day she struck me down emotionally to a new "low," and so I unburden myself to you, of something I could never discuss with anyone else. V. N.

Life Is Empty of Fellowship

DEAR V. N.: Something is wrong with your thinking, yes, or you wouldn't be rejecting this woman with one hand and hanging on to her with the other. The fact that you have nobody with whom to compare notes about her suggests that your life is critically empty of sympathetic human fellowship, and I should say that is your real problem.

Maybe Mrs. X is a bit "teched" as the saying goes, and erroneously imagines you take things belonging to others. But if you had excellent self esteem and some few fond friends who'd stick through any weather, you would think her tiptoe shadowing of you was good for a laugh up your sleeve at the poor old thing. And while you might choose to avoid her, in mingled distaste and pity, you certainly wouldn't take her morbid mistake to heart and go into an emotional decline about it.

To help you get your bearings, I feel I should insist on the probability that you weren't being trailed suspiciously the night of the party, when you went upstairs to call your husband. I suggest rather that you are sinking into mental habits of self distrust and self condemnation, incited by increasing loneliness caused by lack of psychological closeness to people; and that you anxiously imagine others are thinking ill of you, when like as not their mind is on something else.

Inasmuch as you feel deeply wounded by Mrs. X's accusatory attitude and innuendos, alleged, don't you wonder why you stay on the telephone with her, letting her drag you down to further depths of depression, so you say. I suppose it's because you have no other contact for impromptu conversation when you feel a need of it; and that brings us back to my opening theory, that your major problem is social isolation, not Mrs. X, however peculiar she may be.

For advice—your feeling of having lost your last friend is a sharp reminder to get out of your rut and form new associations, either through church work or getting a salaried job or joining a political action group; or any similar activity that will take you out of the stagnant solitude that is clouding your reason now. M. H.

Bachelor's Heart Taken —By Diplomatic Posts

This is the twenty-eighth in a series of articles on embassy homes, hosts and hostesses.

By Elizabeth Maguire

A BACHELOR from the Argentine, Senor Jeronimo Remorino, has in tow, not three girls, but three embassies. He represents his country as Ambassador to Washington, to the U. N. in New York, and to the OAS at the Pan American Union.

These duties cut down somewhat on his very excellent dancing, his golfing and riding. And huntin', fishin', shootin' might be added to the list of past pastimes. The Ambassador came close to shootin', however, not more than a year ago, when he challenged to a duel a retiring Foreign Minister of the Argentine, Juan A. Bramuglia: The latter punched the former in August, 1949, in the presence of the President of the Argentine, Gen. Juan Peron. Political reasons were given for the quarrel, and Ambassador Remorino withdrew his demand for satisfaction on the dueling field upon acceptance of the resignation of Minister Bramuglia.

As for his dancing, the Ambassador can always be spotted as one of the best dancers on the floor. Out at the Chevy Chase Club on summer evenings he guides dark-eyed senoritas and senoras through graceful tangoes, simple sambas, and subtle rumbas.

LIKE ALL solitary socialites, he is frequently asked, "Why aren't you married?" Perhaps not that bluntly. He might be asked instead, "Do you think bachelors are happier than husbands?" The question has been asked too often for him to hesitate a second. "Certainly not," he responds. "You sure?" "Oh, I am sure," he insists.

Further views are not given out on the subject, but he has just finished what is said to be a very beautiful house in Punta del Este, Uruguay, the Bar Harbor of South America. Rare chinas and porcelains for the house were acquired by the Ambassador on a recent trip abroad. He will doubtless spend some time at Punte del Este on his present visit home, as he left Friday for a two-weeks' visit in Buenos Aires. December through March is the "season" at fabulous Punte del Este.

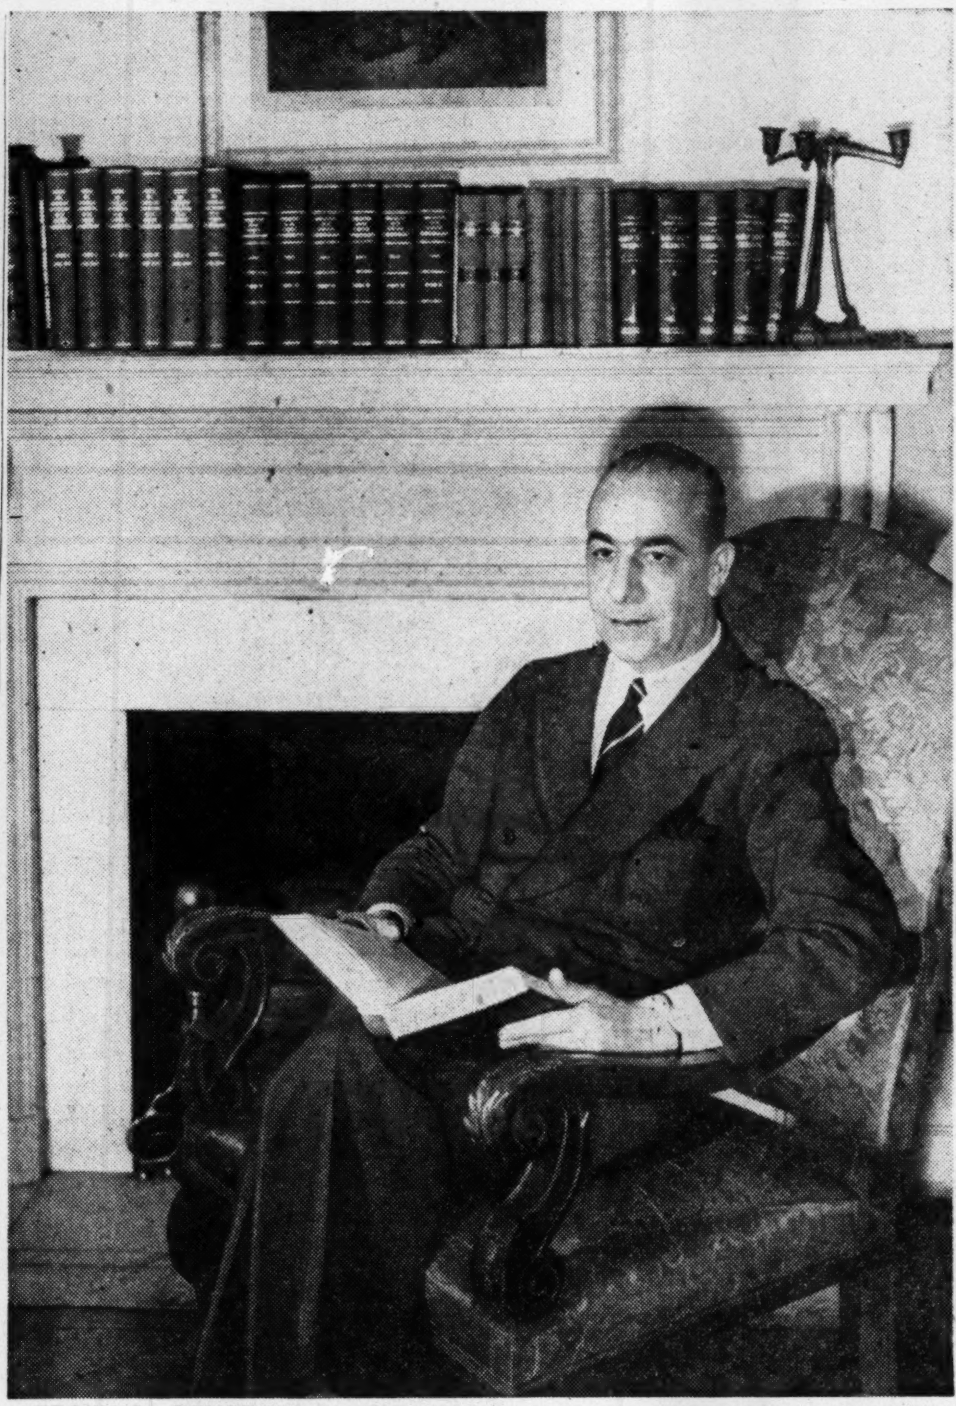
ANOTHER "must" on his visit list is his 27-year-old sister, Mrs. Oliva Velez, mother of six children. "She is a good example," says the Ambassador, "but not for me." Pen and ink drawings of these lovely children are displayed in the drawing room of the embassy.

The question of a visit to the United States from General Peron and his wife, Evita, has never been definitely denied at the embassy, but it seems no definite plans for such are in the making. A picture of the general and his wife rest on a library table at the embassy, she in silver mink and aigrette-feathered hat.

When the Ambassador took over his duties in Washington, he planned to make many changes at the embassy, but his time has been too occupied. The embassy is a sizable dwelling for a bachelor, with a ballroom, several receptions rooms, a French drawing room, a large dining room and library, and countless other rooms.

Whether the embassy is filled is unimportant to the Ambassador, however, as he is a happy bachelor and his time is well filled.



JERONIMO REMORINO, bachelor Ambassador of the Argentine, takes a few minutes from his duties to read a book in his quiet study at the embassy. He is Ambassador to the United States, the United Nations, and the Organization of American States. And he is still listed as one of the town's best dancers

A SIZABLE dwelling for a bachelor is the embassy of the Argentine on New Hampshire ave. Large, high-ceilinged rooms lend themselves well to entertaining, especially those popular, large buffet suppers

Hands

There is a hand that tills the soil . . . And gathers in the grain . . . And one that serves the factory . . . Or operates a train . . . A hand that plays piano keys . . . Or moves the pen to write . . . And one that clasps in fond hello . . . Or doubles up to fight . . . There is a hand that leads a child . . . Or stiffens in salute . . . That sweeps and scrubs and cooks the meals . . . Or polishes a boot . . . Yes, there are many human hands . . . According to their kind . . . And what they strive to say or do . . . And what they hope to find . . . The hands that steal and plunder or . . . That beg for food each day . . . And those that close in love's embrace . . . Or gently fold and pray.

D. C. Woman Turned Her Handicap Into a Career

By Ellen Buell Parry

MRS. EDNA K. MONSEES is making a career of helping people overcome the handicap of deafness with which she herself is confronted.

She lost her own hearing gradually over a period of years. Never doubting that an operation or treatments would restore her to normal, she packed a suitcase full of pretty nightgowns and bedjackets, 12 years ago, and went to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. She arrived at 10 o'clock one morning. At 11:30 she was dismissed, having been told that nothing could be done, and that she might as well shop around for a hearing aid.

"Hearing aids were fairly new then. I bought the first one I could find. I didn't know how to use it. I was frustrated, unable, to adjust to my hearing loss," Mrs. Monsees explains.

"I went to New York and worked with Mary Wood Whitehurst, the only private hearing counselor, besides myself, that I know of in the country. Two and a half years ago I came back to Washington and opened my own office."

A hearing counselor teaches lip reading, and helps a deaf person adjust himself to a hearing aid.

Mrs. Monsees works with children and adults. Her youngest pupil is 2, her oldest, 89.

THE "BEER AND SKITTLES" Club, made up of about a hundred members of the young set has learned to throw delightful Sunday supper parties with a minimum of trouble to hostesses.

A committee arrives early at the home of the hostess to fix the dining-room and make supper arrangements. The food, usually a main dish and a salad, arrives from a caterer. Paper plates, forks and cups are used. Only beer is served to drink.

Every member may bring one guest. No notice has to be given by the member as to whether he will come, or whether he will bring a guest. Members pay for guests at the door. A professional accordionist or piano player provides music during the evening.

And at the end, a committee stays to put the hostess' house back in condition again.

WHEN DOLLY MADISON WAS A GIRL—Fashions from another century will be exhibited, alongside modern costumes, at a showing in the Crystal Room at the Willard Hotel, Saturday, May 20, from 3 to 5 p. m. Presented by the Washington Cured Cancer Club, proceeds from the event will be for the benefit of its Gift and Loan closet for cancer patients. Modeling costumes they will wear in the show are, from left to right, Miss Laura Lee Guthrie, 16-years old, in a plaid dress that belonged to her great-grandmother, the wife of an officer in Lee's army; David Halsted Kern, 4 years old, wearing a jaunty outfit, with velvet jacket that is over 100 years old; and Mrs. James C. Livings, in an elaborate gown that belonged in the family of Dolly Madison

Early American Styles Will Vie With Modern

EARLY American fashions will be shown alongside modern designs of this country and abroad in a unique style show planned by the Cured Cancer Club of Washington for May 20. The event will be held in the Crystal Room of the Willard Hotel from 3 to 5 p. m.

The Cured Cancer Club is affiliated with the American Cancer Society and is composed of members who have been treated for cancer and are now well and active. Proceeds from the show will be used to establish a loan closet which will be stocked with necessary sick room supplies for patients who are not able to purchase them.

Costumes to be modeled in the show include one which belonged in the family of Dolly Madison. It had been loaned by the Philadelphia Museum of Art for the occasion. Other historic costumes from private collections will be modeled by members of the club.

The modern group of American fashions will be presented by the young Washington designer, Philip Robertson, and will be worn by a group of prominent Washington women. Representatives of the Diplomatic Corps will model costumes of their native lands. Included will be those of China, Iceland, Norway and Holland.

Among the honored guests will be Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador; Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, and Mme. Christopherson, wife of the Cultural Attache of the Norwegian Embassy.

Tickets are on sale at the Willard Hotel, Snow Concert Bureau and the American Cancer Society headquarters.

Tobe Says...

New Nylon Fabrics Are Lighter in Weight

I know that while some women loved everything about the nylon dresses they bought last year, there were others who were disappointed for various reasons. They found the nylon fabric too heavy, too warm, not porous enough, and often available only in dull colors.

You'll be glad to know all that is now changed. The new summer nylon fabrics—especially all the interesting new sheers — have everything a smart fabric should have—plus the priceless nylon quality of easy washing, fast drying, no ironing.

Tops among the summer nylon sheers are the exciting looking big blistered nylon voiles; nylon georgette; nylon chiffon; nylon nets; and sheer nylon tricot now being used in dresses, too.

Yes, the summer nylons are really glamorous as well as practical.

These Pictures Win Prizes for the Week's Brightest Babies

BRIGHTEST baby of the week is an Arlington, Va., boy—James Daryl Cloud. For the "Say, Boss" expression pictured below, he receives the $25 first prize in The Washington Post "Babies Are Bright" contest. The picture was submitted by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Cloud, 578 18th st. S., Arlington, Va.

Another Arlington entrant—Stephen Gavin—is the winner of one of the seven $5 prizes in this week's contest. Other $5 prizes go to two Silver Spring children—Judy Sahm and Michael Strong, and four Washington babies—Gwendolyn Calhoun, Bernard Phelan, Cathy Parke, and Neil Ehrlich.

If you have a photograph of your youngster in an amusing or winsome pose, there is still time to submit it for next Sunday's competition. For the picture judged the best each week, this newspaper will pay $25. It will pay $5 each for all pictures used.

A caption must accompany the photo, and the more amusing it is, the better. Pictures may be years old or brand new, but must be of children who were under 18 months of age when photographed. Photos must come directly from parents or guardians with written authorization for their publication. Write your name and address and the baby's name on the back of the photo, along with the caption. Send postage if you wish the picture returned.

Employes of this newspaper and their families are excluded from participation. Mail entries to: "Babies Are Bright," The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

Basic Training for Painters

WorkshopTurns Reluctant Novices Into Artists

By Sonia Stein

TECHNICALLY, when someone signs up for a course at the Workshop Center of the Arts, he signs up for a couple of hours once a week. But that's just the beginning. One class leads to another. One member of the family brings in another member of the family. One friend of the arts brings in another friend.

Like a pebble dropped in a still pond, enrollment at the Workshop starts a splash that ripples far and wide.

Take the David Peppers, for example. You remember the story of "The Five Little Peppers and How They Grew?" This is the story of two Peppers and how Helen Pepper's art class grew and grew and grew.

Mrs. Pepper, recently the mother of a daughter and "anxious to do something else for a change," enrolled in the art course a little over two years ago.

Her couple of hours a week soon expanded in all directions. Not content with painting one night a week, Mrs. Pepper began sketching at home. Soon she had friends from the Workshop, and neighbors who'd never sketched in ther lives, sitting around the living room engaged in sketching

Mr. Pepper Is Attracted

When the Workshop held its periodic open house in the faded grandeur of Walsh House at 2020 Massachusetts ave., Mrs. Pepper would invite a dozen friends in for dinner and take them on to the open house later.

The next major expansion occurred when husband David decided he didn't want to be left out and came to the Workshop "to see what the weird characters look like." So, at any rate, he claims. But he came, he saw, he was conquered.

Armed with a brush, he was shortly covering canvas with such items as "Faust and Mephistopheles," "Man With Lantern" and "P Street Church."

In less time than it takes to shake a paintbrush dry, David Pepper, vanquished skeptic, was rounding up the other engineers in his office at the Navy Department's Bureau of Ships. Some had a hunch they might be able to paint; others had no inkling. In the case of Dhirendra Mitra, "we just made up our minds Mitra could paint and made him come," assert the Peppers.

Paints Indian Scenes

It turns out they were right. Mr. Mitra works mostly from memory, painting scenes of his native India. His delicately done "Kanchenjunga," or "Mountain of Gold," looks not unlike a piece of oriental embroidery. A firmly entrenched Workshopper, Mr. Mitra is now on the board of directors.

Not only do the Peppers now spend their time with art, they also spend their money. Living in a small, modestly furnished apartment at 328 N. Piedmont st., Arlington, the Peppers have spent several hundred dollars on paintings, some of which are now worth more than they cost, the owners note with pride.

"There are paintings in every room in the place except the bathroom," says Mrs. Pepper.

The living room, for example, contains a handsome Madonna by Ernest Lothar, one of the teachers at the school with whom Mrs. Pepper has just begun to study. One of Mr. Mitra's Himalayan mountain scenes is there— loaned by the artist.

There are several Peppers there—some by H. Pepper, some by D. Pepper.

A rotating system is used, to give greater scope to the collection and partly, perhaps, to encourage friends at the Workshop who need to feel the heady wine of being "hung" someplace.

Familiar Situation

This is a typical situation among Workshoppers, according to Leon Berkowitz, program director, who started the Workshop—a cooperative venture—almost four years ago, with his wife.

One woman who enrolled at the Workshop was followed there shortly afterward by her husband, and soon after that by their 10-year-old son.

The father in the family began to do some spectacular work in the sculpture class and in a few months the family was redecorating the entire house to make a more suitable background for the impressionistic carvings of the head of the house.

Many of the students have taken to collecting art works—not necessarily works produced at the Workshop, says Mr. Berkowitz, who prides himself on the fact that courses at the Workshop have "increased the paying audience for arts of all kinds in Washington."

Many workshoppers confess they now spend for art books, records, paintings, dance recitals and concerts, money they would once have spent on clothes.

Havoc for Habits

Interest in the arts gained through the Workshop has been known to put a man's schedule into terrible shape. Gene Davis, a public relations man for the American Automobile Association, has always been an early riser, but now he gets up at 5 a. m. to paint before he goes to work.

"One morning I got up at 2:30 a. m. and painted until 8," he recalls.

Mr. Davis gives his pictures such provocative titles as "Three Foolish Objects," "Primordial Meeting by Moonlight," and "Transfiguration of the Minnow."

Despite careful detail, Mr. Davis sometimes finishes a canvas in half an hour. He once painted six canvases in 24 hours "inspired by the fact that somebody had bought one of my paintings," he says.

Although he has been painting only four months, Mr. Davis did sell one of the paintings that he exhibited at a Workshop Open House. In appreciation, he gave the Workshop fund a $10 slice of the sale—a generous amount considering the probable purchase price which Mr. Davis declines to quote.

"You may say it was under $1000," he conceded.

New Patterns Visible

Apart from the relaxation, Mr. Davis says that this four-month study has made his world look different. "What used to be just a tree against the sky is now a pattern; the trolley wires overhead seem to have a design and even the mud on the ground shows up as a collection of colors," he explains.

Mr. Davis has been a member of the Workshop for several years but never signed up for a class. He'd come to Open House and visit classes occasionally. Finally "the smell of turpentine intensified by the high altitude of the Workshop's fourth-floor classrooms" got him, according to Mr. Berkowitz. Mr. Davis bought some paints, worked at home for a while, showed his work—"something my brother did"—to an expert who praised it, and joined the Workshop painting courses.

Dancers Give Inspiration

Many of the art students make a point of watching the dance class, for inspiration. Sooner or later, the urge is upon them and if they have the time and the energy, they become dancers.

The Workshop specializes in teaching people to do things for fun and relaxation: real talent is quite unnecessary. Art students are urged to submit their work to regular galleries, and some of it has been accepted. There is a clubby little group that once "hung" in the Hall of Rejects at Corcoran Gallery.

Sometimes the dancers, kibitzing in the painting class as they rest between leaps and bounds, are seized upon as models. Miss Inge Kaiser, a congressional secretary with astonishingly exotic looks for a girl of Norwegian, Danish, Hungarian and French ancestry, was "found" in the dancing class and asked to sit for the portrait class. Now—well, you guessed it—she attends the Pepper's sketching "at homes" and is getting ready to study painting at the Workshop.

A Doorman, a Banker

Workshop gets most of its students through enthusiastic word-of-mouth advertising from other students. That's how it got the doorman at the Shoreham, who has just signed up, the 71-year old retired fireman, the executive who wanted to take up sculpting so he'd have a hobby in full swing when he retired; all the doctors, dentists, Government workers, musicians, scientists, Army and Navy officers, librarians, psychologists and writers. The janitor at the Walsh House who is signing up for a painting course, is another story. The Workshop believes he was overcome by the smell of turpentine and the high altitude just the way Mr. Davis was.

For people who think they are too busy to take up the arts, Mr. Berkowitz suggests a method. He teaches daily at Eastern High School, works as a volunteer at the Workshop at night, is on the board of directors of Radio Station WCFM, and still gets his painting in—by setting his easel next to the dinner table and painting between courses. His wife, who is managing director, writes poetry at bedtime.

'Operation Birthday Party' Presents Problem to Hostess of the Youngest Set; But Anne Comes to the Rescue

THE smallest member of the younger set can sometimes present the largest problems when it comes to entertaining. One reader writes:

DEAR ANNE:
I am planning a birthday party for a group of 3, 4, and 5-year-olds. Could you give me some suggestions as to refreshments, favors, games, etc.?
Mrs. H. Applestein, 809 Juniper st. nw.

Little folks of this age are too young to enjoy party games which they will appreciate when they get older. To them, a party is just as exciting as to their elders, however. They love getting all dressed up in their Sunday best and being taken by mother to a little friend's house.

In "The Complete Book of Children's Parties" (Garden City Publishing Co.), Florence Hamsher suggests sending written invitations cut out in the shape of a block since the latter is a real part of every small child's existence. Outline the edges of the block with colored crayon. On the front, print: "Come To A Party." On the back, print: "Please come over to my house, and bring your favorite toy. The games we'll play will make us all just laugh and jump for joy." At the bottom, put time, date, and youngster's name and address.

THE MOST successful party entertainment for this age group is the kind that doesn't seem planned at all. When guests first arrive, let them play a while with the toys they brought. Then have them sit on the floor while you distribute shoelaces and bright-colored wooden beads. With encouragement they will soon be concentrating on a fine work of art.

When you notice them growing tired of the beads, Mrs. Hamsher suggests that you seat them at a low table with several magazines and plastic scissors. Let them cut out any pictures that appeal to them. By this time, they will have forgotten most of their feeling of strangeness and be ready for a simple game or two. Here are a couple that children of this age enjoy:

PASS THE BALL—Seat children on floor and give them a bright red ball to pass around circle. Play music or blow a whistle for signalling. When music stops, the child caught with the ball must drop out. As soon as the music begins again, the ball starts on its way around the circle.

MUSICAL SPOTS—A version of Musical Chairs. Place circles of brightly colored paper on floor, one for each child. The youngsters march around the circles while music is played. When music stops, they must hurry to stand on a circle (only one to a child!). One circle is removed each time, so that a child drops out and the music is resumed. Sometimes, little children do not grasp the idea and resent being eliminated. If this happens, give the youngster a circle and let him march around the room with it.

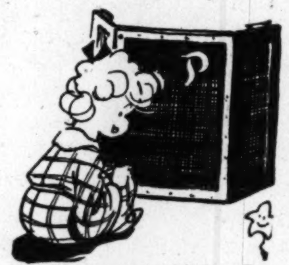
JUST before refreshments, gather the children around you and tell them a story. Make refreshments simple—ice cream or fruit juice and sponge cake, for instance, or a plate of jelly and peanut butter sandwiches, plus milk and later ice cream cones.

If the party ends near suppertime, it's a good idea to serve a simple evening meal so their mothers can put them to bed soon after they reach home.

To deck the table, a big jack-in-the-box makes a nice centerpiece, surrounded by blocks. At each place, put boxes of crayons and coloring books wrapped in bright paper. As an added treat, give each child a big lollipop—the kind with faces on them, if possible.

PETUNIA!

The screen around my fireplace wears
A shining letter P
And now there isn't any doubt
That it belongs to me!



And it's a smart addition, Petunia. Silver or brass handbag initials are easy to find and a cinch to stick on.

Mother's Day a Good Time To Remember Children

TODAY is Mother's Day, the traditional day for honoring mothers throughout the United States. Very often mothers become more proud and perhaps more aware of their offspring on that day.

To many children in Europe and Asia who have no mothers, and to many who have, the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund has assumed the role of world mother.

The fund is currently providing for the food, clothing and medical needs of six million children. This is just one tenth of the children throughout the world who are hungry, poorly clad or sick.

DID YOU KNOW

. . . That $1 will buy enough powdered milk to give 10 children a glass of milk a day for a week?

. . . That $1 will purchase a day's dose of cod liver oil for almost 300 children?

Beauty Advice For Mom's Day

ALL DAYS should be celebrated as Mother's Day, but this being Mom's own special day, there's no reason why she shouldn't have a beauty column devoted to her, and her alone.

Barrett Parker, president of the Washington Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, who thinks the teen-agers and young glamor gals have been snaring too much of the beauty advice, has these helpful hints for mother:

Keep the hair style as simple as possible, for simplicity is always charming. After 35 a woman should never wear her hair too low on the neck. The upswept mode is best, with soft deep waves, set close to the head.

If the hair is white, a mild bluing rinse should be used, and if it is just turning gray, a black rinse will create highlights. If you dye or tint your hair, use a lighter shade than your own hair, avoiding dark or black shades. If in doubt seek an expert's advice.

Daily brushing, at least one hundred strokes with a stiff brush, a weekly shampoo and regular trims will keep mature hair shining and well groomed.

To Meet Monday

Chapter J, PEO, will meet May 15 at 6:30 o'clock with Mrs. Joel C. Hawkins at the National Child Research Center, 3209 Highland pl. nw.

Cancer Units Raise Production

Monthly production of cancer dressings for indigent cancer patients has tripled and quadrupled in the seven-month period since the establishment of five cancer dressing units by the Field Army of the District Division of the American Cancer Society, Mrs. James H. Gilman, commander of the District group, announced.

In October, the first month of production, the 200 members of the five community units produced nine gross of compresses and seven dozen pads. April production amounted to 30 gross of compresses and 30 dozen pads. In addition to the standard size dressings, the units make up larger, small and specially shaped dressings for the comfort and convenience of cancer patients requiring off-sizes.

Mrs. Gilman pointed out that the casings used on the drainage pads are made from donations of used white linen or muslin materials such as sheets, pillow cases, napkins, diapers, towels, etc. The material is laundered and sterilized, a service performed for the Field Army through the courtesy of Doctors Hospital.

The five cancer dressing units and their chairmen are as follows: Westchester Apartments, Mrs. Otis Williams; Doctors Hospital, Mrs. Frank Malzones; Roosevelt Hotel, Mrs. G. M. Sigmund; Homemakers Club of Silver Spring, Mrs. P. A. Chalopsky, and the Women's Society of Trinity Lutheran Church, Mrs. N. M. Hennig.

Waiting at the gate of the Mill-To-You-Co.'s exhibit at the Home Show is 21-year-old Edythe Young of 4302 Russell rd., Mount Rainier

Home Show's Going Good

By Robert P. Jordan

LAST year, over Greater Washington, something more than 32,500 new homes and apartments were begun.

What happened here happened over the country. Across the Nation, more than a million new homes and apartments were started. It was the biggest home-building year in history.

This year, predict Federal and private housing experts, will see that record topped—probably by a considerable margin.

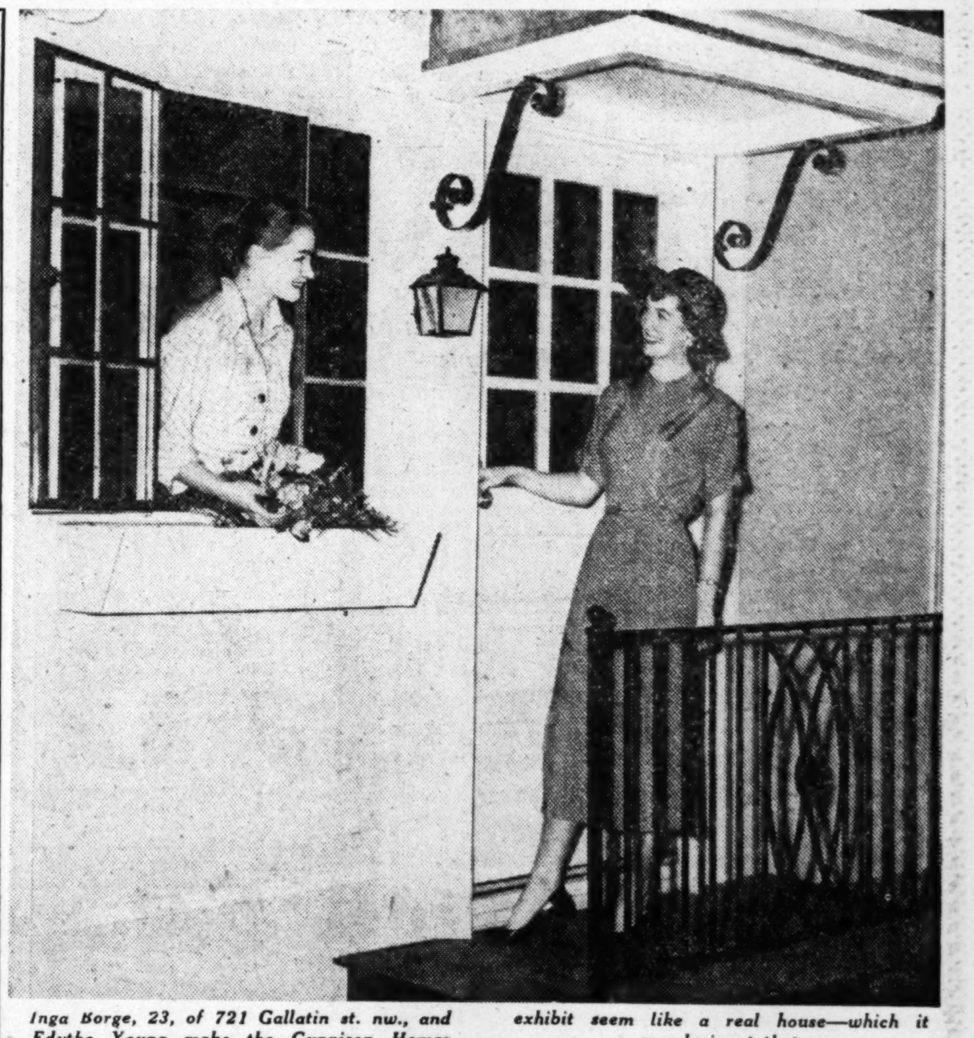
So it is that the fourth annual Home Show, which will run through May 21 at the National Guard Armory, is luring Washingtonians by the thousands to inspect the 200-odd exhibits spread out over the vast drill hall. Most of the things that go into the building of a house, or add to its comfort, or appearance, or convenience, are on display somewhere on the Armory's 2-acre floor.

Interested in washing machines? Heating plants? Furniture? Need information on home design? Want to put a fence around your place, or a garbage disposal unit in the kitchen, or a new rug on the floor? Likely your curiosity will be satisfied at the Home Show.

The theme of the show is "Better Homes for Better Living." Up and down those long lines of brightly-lighted booths is exhibit after exhibit of what they're making these days—to make your home better for better living.

The annual extravaganza has been called a "monument to home sweet home." It is also a civic enterprise, says Clarke Daniel, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, which sponsors it. The show is the result of cooperation among home builders, merchants, civic and trade associations.

All these hope you'll drop in for a look. Hours are from 2 p. m. to 11 p. m. daily. Admission is 60 cents including tax.



Inga Borge, 23, of 721 Gallatin st. nw., and Edythe Young make the Gunnison Homes exhibit seem like a real house—which it nearly is, at that

Building Boom Picks Up Even More Momentum

THREE things are giving the home building boom a new push, and a new direction:

1. Easing of financing terms, which in some cases make buying a new home look even cheaper, at the start, than buying a new car.

2. Lifting of rent controls in some communities, and the prospects of Federal controls ending soon, which make financing of new homes look cheaper than possibly higher rents.

3. Firming of construction costs, after a drop of around 10 percent in the last year and a half, which apparently induces once-reluctant home builders to decide they can't do much better by waiting any longer to start their dream house.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics says 110,000 new dwelling units were started in March, the greatest number in any one month in United States history. Indications are that even more were started in April, and the building spree shows no signs of slowing down in May.

Some observers warn that one of these days we'll wake up to find ourselves over-built, and the home market will crack. But others insist that day is distant, and that the new homes are needed and that ultimate purchasers for them are available.

The easing of home financing terms, which Congress voted three weeks ago, has extended for many months the probable time limit of the present building boom, many observers believe.

They expect the Federal National Mortgage Association to ask for another 250 million dollars, bringing to 3 billion dollars its authorized power to buy up home mortgages. FNMA has been able to resell large amounts of these mortgages—115 million dollars' worth during March and April—giving it that much more cash to pump back into the mortgage market.

The building boom, financed in considerable part by Federal insuring of home mortgages, has been one of the chief props of the current prosperity. As the construction industry booms, so do the building materials, home appliances and home furnishings industries.

Observers have noted that under the new four-million-dollar Federal housing program, approved last month, a family could buy a $1000 house by paying as little as $350 down, and then $40 a month—for 30 years. But the family would still owe $5282 on the house at the end of 10 years and $3191 at the end of 20 years.

Right now the purchaser of a popular-priced automobile is likely to be asked to pay $400 to $500

Subdivision of Low-Cost Homes Started—219 Units

A LARGE subdivision of low-cost homes will be built on Annandale rd. near the intersection of Lee blvd. in Fairfax County, it was learned yesterday.

The homes—frame and brick veneer, one-story dwellings—will sell from $8650 to $9700. To be built by the Argus Construction Corp. of Newport News, Va., a total of 219 houses are scheduled to be erected within six months.

According to E. E. Falk of Drucker & Falk, agents, prospective purchasers will have their choice of six basic floor plans. The homes will have two or three bedrooms. He said the project has FHA approval.

The subdivision will be known as Annalee Heights. Falk said his firm, a Newport News organization, will have an office on the site by June 15. Construction work is beginning now.

At that time, he said, plans call for model homes to be open for inspection.

The houses will be built on lots ranging from 7200 square feet up to 10,000 square feet, according to Falk. House area will be from 720 to 870 square feet in size.

The agent said the construction company, headed by E. A. Joseph, has built several hundred homes in Newport News. The decision to enter the Greater Washington home market was made, he reported, after a survey showed a "strong demand" for low-cost housing here.

Huge Los Angeles Project

Slated for completion late this year is the 40-million-dollar Parklabrea housing project in Los Angeles. The development will provide a total of 4253 units, housing more than 13,000 persons, on a 176-acre tract near the well-known Wilshire blvd., "Miracle Mile."

Brickmasonry Competition

Forty-one bricklayer apprentices from 19 States are contestants in the second annual National Apprentice Brickmasonry Competition, which got under way yesterday in Philadelphia.

Home Mortgages Obtained At Record Rate

Topping all previous first-quarter records, home mortgage volume of the Nation's savings asscoiations shot upward to an estimated one billion dollars in the first three months of 1950.

In announcing this, the United States Savings and Loan League reported the total was 47 percent of the same period in 1949, and 18 percent over the previous record first-quarter mark of 847 million dollars in 1948.

Included in the overall volume of the first three months of this year was approximately 340 million dollars in construction loans for new home building. The amount was 79 percent over the first-quarter total of last year, the league said.

Permit Issued For 9 Houses

Marcus Construction Co., 6626 Thirteenth pl. nw., has received a permit to build nine homes in Wheaton Hills, Md.

Plans call for two-story, brick and cinderblock residences. Size is to be 27 by 22 feet.

Home Building Gains Speed Under New Housing Law

down and from $50 to $75 a month for 1½ to 2 years.

In other words, you can start cheaper on the small house than the small car—but own the car in two years—and still owe on the house a quarter of a century later. Unless, that is, you can't keep up payments, and have to let Uncle Sam, who insured your mortgage, take the property over. If everyone did that, Uncle Sam would find himself on the spot.

In the last 12 months, 246 cities have ended rent control by municipal action, the American Municipal Association reports. Nearly 26 million live in these areas; but nearly 75 million live in the 348 rental housing areas still under Federal control.

If the rent control law lapses July 1, or is extended until the end of the year, many of these 75 million may face higher rents next year, making the easy terms on home owning seem more attractive.

With the drop of around 10 percent in building costs since the start of 1949, prices have eased on homes built during the period of higher construction costs, Government officials report. However, in recent weeks builders have been holding the price line on the homes now being built, and report they have been having no trouble selling them. Some building material prices have even gone up a little recently.

They also report that more homes in the higher price brackets are being started, reversing last year's trend. The medium-priced home is also being built in more quantity this spring, builders say, after a slump last year.

Government officials think the general business improvement has led many in the higher brackets to get out their building plans and start building.

Construction This Year To Top 1949, Official Says

CLAGUE

IF BUILDING activity in the first three months of 1950 is a good yardstick, the Nation's home builders will smash the all-time record of 1,025,800 units started in 1949, reports Ewan Clague, Commissioner, Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Writing in the May issue of the Correlator, published by the National Association of Home Builders, Clague also pointed out that the efficiency of both builders and their craftsmen has continued to improve.

He based his statement on a possible 1950 record on the 250,000 new homes and apartments already started in the first quarter. "According to preliminary estimates," he asserted, "the industry has established a momentum which will carry it well along into another successful year.

Despite the increased production of apartments, the single family house was the backbone of the industry's output last year, Clague said. It is also expected to hold its own in future years.

He also pointed out that preliminary results of recent surveys by the Bureau of Labor Statistics indicate that the one-story basementless "rambler" is becoming increasingly popular in some regions of the country where it was practically unknown before.

Clague said this type of home is especially well adapted for radiant heating, although the conventional types of hot-air and hot-water heating still predominate.

A variety of new construction methods and materials have been introduced with success, according to the commissioner, and point to further improvements and cost reductions.

"Coordinated research activity by the Government and industry, together with universities and other research centers, should lead to significant gains in construction techniques in 1950 and later years.

"As we survey prospects for 1950, these favorable factors predominate; Consumer incomes are high, unemployment has not reached dangerous levels, a spirit of optimism generally prevails, supported by the conviction that our economy is sound and progressive.

"Some analysts predict sharp declines in business activity after midyear, but this feeling is not at present reflected in the attitudes of home builders and buyers."

More Building Materials Needed For Housing Boom

INCREASED output of building materials is needed to keep pace with the record volume of new construction thus far this year, according to the Commerce Department.

The department reported that building material production, continuing the trend of midwinter declines, dropped 3 percent from January to February although it held 8 percent above the level of a year ago.

February output was recorded at 116.3 percent of (that is, 16.3 percent above) the 1939 average. The January mark was 120.2. February, 1949, was 108.2.

Lumber production increased 3 percent from January to February, but substantial decreases were reported for brick and cement among other major materials.

44 Northeast Homes Slated

A permit has been sought to construct 44 two-story and basement homes in the 600 block Madison st., 5700 block 6th st., 457-65 Ridgs rd., and the 500 and 600 blocks of Nicholson st. ne.

Owner-builder is Dan Pollin, 1634 Myrtle st. nw. The houses are to be brick and cinderblock. Size is 16 by 34 feet.

15-Home Project

Plans are being drawn up for construction of 15 brick and cinderblock dwellings in Silver Spring by Brown Realty Corp., 1025 Vermont ave. nw. The homes, for which a permit is being sought, are to be built on Eccleston st., Haywood dr., Darrow st., and Dexter ave.

Semidetached Houses

Subbids are being taken on 12 semidetached homes to be built by Goldman & Green, 7566 8th st. nw., in the vicinity of 9th and Hemlock sts. nw. Plans have been completed.

166-Home Subdivision Under Way

WORK will begin Monday on a 166-home subdivision to be developed two miles north of Silver Spring on Bladensburg rd.

The houses will be erected by R. H. Best, Inc., 8118 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, and will sell for about $11,500. They will be one and one-and-a-half story houses, with two and three bedrooms.

Located near Four Corners, the subdivision is bordered on one side by Scully dr., which is to be a 100-foot right-of-way for Belvedere blvd., a direct route to Baltimore.

To be of various modern styles, the homes will be substantially of brick construction, and will be expansible, according to R. H. Best.

Best announced the subdivision will be named McDonald Knolls. The homes will be within walking distance of schools, churches, and within five minutes of the Silver Spring shopping center, he said.

No More 'Look-Alikes'

The village of Scarsdale, N. Y., has banned the building of "look-alike" houses. Building code of the community sets forth six styles — and prohibits any two houses in a group of 10 (five on each side of the street) from having more than three of the same type.

Housing Research Program Aimed At Cutting Costs

HOUSING costs must be measured both in dollar and human terms, according to Dr. Richard J. Ratcliff, housing research director of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Dr. Ratcliff states that the objective of a long-range housing research program must aim at reductions in dollar and human costs. This can be accomplished, he reports, in these general categories:

Providing better homes at lower prices; improving housing quality at the same prices; decreasing outlay for maintenance and repair; bettering neighborhood design, city planning and urban redevelopment; cleaning up slum and blighted areas; and gaining a closer and more stable balance between supply and demand.

Home Builders Heads Meet To Study Housing Problems

NEARLY 200 of the Nation's leading home builders are in town to discuss ways and means of keeping the record building wave going full steam ahead.

It is the spring meeting of the board of directors of the National Association of Home Builders. The event will continue through Wednesday. Thomas P. Coogan, NAHB president of Miami, is presiding.

Further inflation, which would push home prices higher, is worrying the industry, reports Frank W. Cortright, NAHB's executive vice president. Building costs, down from record highs of 1948, are inching slowly upward.

Principal problems up for discussion include:

Methods of financing volume construction of new apartments renting in the $40 to $70 per month bracket for low-income families on slum-cleared land.

Increased use by municipal authorities of the "Baltimore Plan" to rehabilitate slum dwellings through enforcement of health and building ordinances.

Bridging of the present "no-man's land" between merchant builders and architects to provide the best contemporary design for mass-produced, low-cost homes. Previously, extensive use of architects to design individual homes in large subdivisions has been discouraged by architectural fee scales.

Other matters up for discussion will be an appraisal of the recently enacted Housing Act of 1950. Legislative experts will also study President Truman's reorganization plan which would transfer the Federal National Mortgage Association to the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Metropolitan Washington builders expected to attend the meeting are:

Building Boom Brought on By Better Homes

WHAT has brought about the record home building boom now under way over the country?

It stems from the greater comforts and conveniences and more attractive design of homes being built these days, H. R. Northrup, vice president of the National Retail Lumber Dealers Association, said yesterday.

Other factors contributing to the boom, Northrup said, are "stabilization of home building costs and the increased number of rental units being constructed." He also cited "favorable credit terms" as another reason for the high home building rate.

THE PRESSURE COOKER being placed on the counter by the young lady is just off the stove and hotter than a Washington summer. But as you can see, she isn't worried about searing the counter. That clay tile surface is impervious to heat. Tile Council of America, 10 E. 40th st., New York 16. N. Y., can tell you how to get one like it.

AN ALL-PURPOSE CAP for either spectator or participating sports is being produced by Flip-It, Inc., of New York. The cap has mesh sides for ventilation and a long bill for sun protection.

In addition, it has adjustable goggles mounted on a movable track under the bill to protect the eyes. The goggles can be adjusted in any position or removed entirely.

WITH THE TRAVEL season on tap, Plastic Products, Inc., Dallas, Tex., is putting out a vinylie garment bag which zips over suits, coats and dresses on their own hangers.

The company calls the new product Auto Pak, says it's designed especially for travel and keeps clothes clean, wrinkle-free and fresh. It's waterproof, weatherproof and dustproof.

AN ALL-TENITE plastic bait box, produced by Visa-Bait, Inc., DuBois, Pa., is designed on an easy-to-use pattern: weighing only 9 ounces, it is simply clipped to the belt.

When the splash-proof lid is raised, bait is brought to the top on a screen. Fresh air is forced into the water by pumping the lid up and down. It can be operated with one hand.

PITTSBURGH PLATE GLASS Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., has developed an "electrical-mechanical invisible doorman" that will open and close heavy glass doors with a feather-like touch.

The unit, called Pittcomatic, is a small electric-hydraulic apparatus said to be the first double-acting power hinge ever manufactured.

CROSLEY MOTORS of Cincinnati is ready for delivery of a new marine engine which it says is the lowest priced, four-cylinder water-cooled engine ever offered with reverse and reduction gear.

It has a 44-cubic-inch displacement and a brake horsepower of 25 at 4800 revolutions per minute. The motor can be used in salt or fresh water on boats of 12 to 30 feet in length. It develops up to 30 miles an hour on a standard 12-foot boat.

ENTERPRISE METAL Products, Inc., of Brooklyn, N. Y., has designed a new marine windshield wiper of brass, to be used either with straight or curved blades.

Adjustable spring tension holds the blade against the windshield. It is hand-operated.

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS is putting its Kem-Glo paint in a new-style paint can which is easy to open and reseal and is more convenient on the job.

In place of the friction groove seal found on conventional paint cans, the new package has a flat, gripper-type lid with a ring cap that fits tightly on a short neck above the body of the can.

FOR TAKING PAINT off boats, Aircraft-Marine Products, Inc., of Harrisburg, Pa., is putting out a quick-acting liquid paint remover that requires no neutralizing agent and evaporates, leaving a clean surface.

The liquid is brushed on, allowed to set a few minutes, and the paint rubs off with a rag.

Painting Wicker Furniture

In painting wicker furniture, says the National Paint, Vanish and Lacquer Association, a spray gun is a big aid. If you work with a brush, however, take care that paint doesn't collect in the crevices.

To preserve the wicker's natural color, use a good spar varnish, NPVLA advises. The same varnish also should be used on reed or rattan furniture which is natural-colored.

Rent Control Restored in Aberdeen, S. D.

FEDERAL rent control was reestablished in Aberdeen, S. Dak., Wednesday by Housing Expediter Tighe F. Woods upon recommendation by the Aberdeen Rent Advisory Board.

The board advised the housing expediter that since he lifted rent control in Aberdeen last September 28, "rents have risen unreasonably."

A survey made by the Office of the Housing Expediter Regional Office at the board's request showed that 35 percent of the rents free to rise were increased by 36 percent, and that rental units under $30 per month were increased by 60 percent.

The board resolution declared that housing in the city of Aberdeen is "very critical and the demand for housing far exceeds the supply"; and that "such conditions have caused and are causing hardship among many persons" in the area.

Construction Over Country Continues to Set Records

BUILDING activity last month—led by home construction—topped all previous records for the month of April.

For the first four months of this year, 6.1 billion dollars has been spent for new construction—20 percent more than in the same period of 1949.

This is announced by the Commerce Department's construction division and the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Last month, according to their report, an estimated 1.7 billion dollars of new construction was put in place, 24 percent more than in April, 1949.

Work valued at 720 million dollars was done during April on the record number of new homes that have been started in the past few months. After a seasonal rise of 11 percent over the March level, the value of new private residential construction last month was 62 percent above a year ago.

For the first four months of the year, new residential construction was 50 percent ahead of 1949, according to the report.

Private nonresidential building did not share in the spring spurt of construction activity in April. Expenditures for factories, store and office buildings were made at about the same rate as in March and were somewhat below the level of 1949 in the same period.

THE AMERICAN Institute of Architects reminds members that it has not yet approved the PHA contract forms covering architect's services for public housing projects.

ARCHITECTURE-WISE, a new language is replacing the common denominator of design these days, according to Dr. Walter Gropius, chairman of the graduate school of design, Harvard University.

In modern architecture, the common denominator has been simply whether a particular design meets with the public taste, Gropius asserted here the other night. Now that is being replaced with a "three-dimensional expression"—light and shade, color and form, and structure and texture, he said.

NEW PRESIDENT of the Washington Real Estate Brokers Association is Waddell Thomas, reports Arnett G. Lindsay, executive secretary-treasurer.

William S. Harps was elected vice president, Lindsay said. Elected to the board of directors were Eugene Davidson, Joseph H. Greene, John P. Murchison, and Richard Sterling.

LAURENCE KIEFER, of the National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association, and Harry J. Gerrity, general counsel of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, will address the latter group's forty-third annual convention next month in Chicago.

Triple Drip

Coffee Pot Has New Gimmick

STEP up, Mrs. Housewife, science has a new kitchen utensil for you today.

It is a new type coffee pot, one that does a triple filtering. The designers call it a triculator because it supposedly gets rid of most of the tannic acid and other undesirable substances that can make coffee bitter.

The pot, made by the Triculator Co., New York, comes in three sizes—four, six and eight-cup capacity. It works on the principle of making drip coffee.

Main gimmick of the new pot, however, is a silken fiber, paper-thin, through which the coffee is filtered. Actually it serves as a middle filter, as the coffee works on a principle of three filters.

The pot works simply. As explained by the designers, drip type coffee grounds are placed over a perforated metal tray after the filter fiber has been placed. Over that another metal disk, also perforated, is placed. Then boiling water is poured into the pot.

The top metal disk spreads out the water so it drips through the ground coffee at an even pace, and no grounds are left dry while others may be wet. The boiling water passes through the grounds justify and then coffee meets the filter.

Ways to Finish Birch

Birch is a close-grained wood that does not require a paste filler. It can best be given a mahogany or walnut color with a penetrating stain. Often given a natural finish with a gloss or dull varnish, a lacquer or a wax, it supplies an excellent base for enamel as well and may also be bleached.

Kitchen has an informal eating room on one side, dining room on other

Records Fall As Building Pace Speeds

NEW YORK (AP).—Construction contract awards continued to top all previous records during April in 37 Eastern States, F. W. Dodge Corp. has reported.

A dollar volume of $1,350,496,000 in awards was pumped into the building boom to make it the biggest month on record, exceeding by 4 percent or more than 50 million dollars the previous high set in March this year.

The Dodge Corp., fact-finding organization for the building industry, said the April total was 60 percent higher than for the same month a year ago. For the first four months of 1950, aggregate awards were 58 percent ahead of the 1949 rate.

The four-month totals showed residental awards more than double those of 1949, nonresidental up 33 percent, and heavy engineering up 17 percent.

Noise Make You Nervous? Tips at Your Service

"NOISE nerves" seem to be on the increase.

They've been testing for jitter-producing sounds in New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles and other cities. Here's a grouping of common noise-producers:

Trucks, 40 percent; buses and trolleys, 20 percent; private cars, riveting and excavating machines, alarms, etc., 15 percent; and the remaining 25 percent is in the home.

And here are some of the noisy home irritants: loud radios, banging doors and rattling windows, slamming of pots and pans, stamping on floors, mechanical household equipment, dripping faucets, clanging pipes, telephone and doorbells—and a thousand and one others.

As a result, your sleep is interferred with digestion is upset, physical strain is brought on—sometimes even temporary deafness; mental activity is hampered; irritability increases.

You know that. Can you use a dozen ways to combat home noises? They follow:

1. Fibrous boards on basement ceilings and playroom walls resist noise and are easy to apply.

2. Solid walls can be made sound-resistant by putting a plastered building board on either side, set away about two inches and secured by insulating clips.

3. In two-family houses, build a "floating floor" on the structural floor. This equals two inches concrete layer on rubber pads.

4. Increase thickness of windows. Quarter-inch panes are better than ordinary 21-ounce glass. Double windows four inches apart (as storm windows) insulate a room and are as soundproof as a nine-inch brick wall.

5. Insulate walls and ceilings with full-thick mineral wool. House will be more comfortable and mineral wool insulation acts to retard and absorb sound traveling through walls, floors, ceilings.

6. Have muted telephone bell, and door chimes instead of buzzer.

7. Oil hinges and metal working parts of fixtures, stoves, washing machines, vacuum cleaners, furnaces, garbage cans, heaters, mixers. Line edges with rubber.

8. Extensive use of heavy draperies and carpets helps to absorb noise. Use good-sized mats in bathrooms. Hard heels make plenty of noise.

9. Carpet liners save wear on carpets and deaden walking and stamping sounds.

10. Use electric clocks wherever possible, rather than noisy ones.

11. Play radio and phonograph softly.

12. Repair all loose boards. Cover pipes with insulating material, have silent electric switches, easy-sliding doors, rubber stripping on doors and windows.

Big Development To Be Started Near Hyattsville

A total of 236 one-story homes will be built by Lane Manor Corp. on Riggs rd. and University lane, near Hyattsville.

Construction is slated to begin soon on the first group of 46 dwellings; the remainder will be built in similar groups. Built of brick and cinderblock, the homes will be 24 by 36 feet in dimension.

Corporation offices are located at 3708 Bladensburg rd., Cottage City, Md. Victor F. Mariani is president.

Kitchens in New Subdivision Have Novel Features

Kitchens in the North Arlington subdivision of three-bedroom brick ramblers being built at Reserve Hill by John H. Miller & Bro., have been designed to save housewives as many steps as possible.

One such step-saver is built-in silverware drawers. Another results from planned distribution of cabinets. Off the kitchen are three different dining areas—all within a short distance.

Other features are the slide-a-door closets, which permit a maximum of closet space, according to a spokesman, and the divided basement with a large area, including fireplace, set aside for future use as a recreation room.

The homes are located in the area extending north to south from North Edison st. to Yorktown blvd.

50-Unit Apartment Building Planned

A 50-unit apartment building is planned for construction at 1825 T st. nw. Plans are nearing completion.

The building will have garage space for 26 cars. Architect is Milton Prassas, 1737 Harvard st. nw. Sub-bids will be taken later.

Detroit Building Gains

Detroit, Mich.—First quarter figures on permits issued here for single-family homes gives dramatic emphasis to the housing boom: over 4000 permits were issued, compared to 1477 in the same period in 1949.

Set Plants Out With a Starter Solution

Tomatoes Deserve a Place

By James H. Beattie

THE tomato deservedly reigns as queen of all garden vegetables. Rich in carotine and ascorbic acid, easily grown and economical of garden space, the tomato has a place in every garden.

In the Washington area, tomato plants may be set in the garden during May and at any time thereafter until about the middle of July. The early set plants usually bear for the entire season, but many growers find it advantageons to make a second planting during early July.

The garden setting of tomato plants this spring has been delayed because of the cool weather, but the time has arrived for prompt action. The plants may be set at least two weeks ahead of the usual time by protecting them in the garden through the use of plant protectors made of cellophane or some other product. Dealers carry these in stock. The use of these devices requires some care. During sunshiny, warm days the plants require ventilation and the covers must be lifted or even entirely removed and restored during the evening or at any other time when the plants require protection.

Tomatoes Need Sunshine

TOMATOES require plenty of sunshine, and it is always a good plan to select a site where the plants will receive at least eight hours' sunshine daily, more if possible. Tree roots, poorly drained soil and dust or smoke are other unfavorable factors. Any reasonably fertile soil is likely to be suitable for the growing of tomatoes. Land that has been heavily manured, or that has received large applications of commercial fertilizer containing a high proportion of nitrogen, is liable to cause an excessive growth of the plant and result in blossom-drop and failure to set fruit.

On soils of average fertility the standard 5-10-5 commercial fertilizer used at a rate of about 10 pounds to each 1000 square feet is likely to give satisfactory results. Plants spaced 3 to 4 feet apart will each require about 3 ounces. A portion of the fertilizer should be mixed with the soil before the plants are set and the remainder applied in a furrow 12 to 15 inches in diameter around the plant.

Soils that are very fertile, particularly those that have recently received a heavy application of manure or highly nitrogenous commercial fertilizer, usually require no additional nitrogen. A commercial fertilizer of the 0-12-12 or the 0-14-14 composition may be used. These contain both phosphate and potash and their use is generally advisable.

Correcting Boron Deficiency

SOME soils in the Washington area are deficient in copper and boron, particularly sandy soils. The boron deficiency may be corrected by applying a tablespoonful of borax dissolved in a 2-gallon sprinkling can of water to each 300 square feet of soil. Spraying tomatoes with bordeaux mixture and other copper bearing compounds usually corrects a deficiency of copper. Some use the special fertilizer mixtures which contain the so-called rare elements; others use the regular garden mixtures fortified with one of the packaged rare element preparations.

When setting tomato plants, water them with a starter solution made by stirring a double handful of garden fertilizer into a 2-gallon watering can of water. A half pint of this solution to each plant will give the plants the push they require for fast development.

Tomato varieties are numerous, but a few will meet almost any home garden requirement. The widespread occurrence of Fusarium wilt in our local soils makes it desirable to plant only wilt-resistant varieties. Pritchard, Marglobe, Rutgers, Pan America and Southland are wilt-resistant varieties. Pritchard produces ripe fruits a few days earlier than the others, and a few plants of this variety should be included in the garden.

Rutgers and Marglobe are splendid varieties for this area, and Southland has also given a good account of itself. Hybrid varietites are receiving quite a lot of attention, and under favorable conditions they do very well. Fordhook Hybrid and Burpee Hybrid are well-known hybrids. Neither is wilt-resistant, and they should not be planted on wilt-infested soil.

Sunray is a wilt-resistant orange-colored tomato of excellent quality. While it is suitable mainly for salad purposes, its attractive color and high quality commend it for limited scope home garden planting.

Shun Poor Plants

STURDY greenhouse or hotbed-grown tomato plants in 4-inch clay pots or large plant bands are ideal for the home garden. Healthy, carefully handled Southern-grown plants are also very satisfactory. These require prompt and careful handling and they are a little slow in starting, but soon develop very rapidly. Ripe fruit is sometimes obtained within six to seven weeks from the time the plants are set in the garden.

The kind of plants commonly offered for sale are poor, to say the least. They require a long time to get started, causing a delay in obtaining ripe fruit. Fortunately, tomato plants will grow out of a bad start.

Unless trimmed and tied to supports, each tomato plant should have from 13 to 16 square feet of garden space. If trimmed and tied up, only about half that amount of space is required. Tomatoes allowed to grow at will on the ground should be planted from 3½ to 4 feet apart. When grown as trimmed and staked plants, the rows are usually about 4 feet apart with the plants about 2 feet apart in the rows. Tomatoes require plenty of light, and nothing is gained by crowding the plants.

Save Space

PLANT as suggested, then trim to one or two main stems to each plant and tie the plants to a stake or to a trellis. The pruning and staking of home-garden tomatoes is nearly always profitable. More and better fruit from the same space almost always results.

Some use a trellis made of strong stakes or small posts supporting coarse woven wire fencing. Others set individual stakes beside each plant. Most gardeners prefer round stakes cut in the woods, others sawed ones. With the latter there is a tendency for the plants to slip down. This can be avoided by driving a few nails part way into the stakes before they are set in the ground.

The main part of the pruning consists in the removal of the shoots that arise in the axils of the leaves. Care should be exercised to avoid injuring the fruit clusters which arise opposite the leaf stems.

Tomatoes' Enemies

FLEA beetles, small dark beetles that eat holes in the leaves, may be controlled by dusting or spraying with Rotenone. The hole-worm may be easily destroyed by hand-picking. Most of the pest trouble with tomatoes comes from the attacks of one or more of the tomato diseases. In the home garden, disease control must be largely of a preventative nature. The use of varieties resistant to Fusarium wilt is generally advisable.

Planting tomatoes on fresh land where tomatoes, potatoes and related crops have not been grown during recent years is an excellent plan. Spraying or dusting are valuable as preventative measures against some tomato diseases, but the treatment must be thorough and start within 30 days of the first development of the blooms.

Unfortunately, some of the best of the fungicide preparations for tomato diseases are not as yet readily obtainable. The fixed copper sprays and dusts and such proprietary compounds as Dithane Z-78 and Parzate will help in controlling late blight and certain other diseases. We will gladly try to locate these materials for you. Just drop a line to me at The Washington Post.

Summer's Harbinger

It's Lilac Time All Over Again

By Katherine Barrett Pozer

"LILAC TIME" is a time we all love. There are few of us who do not get a bit nostalgic as we remember the gardens of our childhood where we gathered the fragrant blossoms and revelled in their perfume and beauty.

These lovely flowers have long been the backbone of many American gardens.

Lilacs were originally brought to Europe from Constantinople in 1554 but later botanists discovered their native home in the mountains of Bulgaria. Many of the first improvements in size, color, and form were made in the gardens of Victor and Emile Lemoine in Nancy, France, and so the term "French lilacs" has been given to the newer varieties. Today there are more than 500 different kinds with a color range from white through blues, lilac, pink to deep purple.

Flower of Many Uses

LILACS can be used in many ways—as a hedge, as specimens or in a mixed border. The new shades offer splendid opportunities for unusual color effects. A lilac hedge of shaded blooms is extremely beautiful. With their improvements, lilacs have lost none of their good qualities. The new varieties are as hardy as the old type, which made it one of the plans chosen by early pioneer women to take with them to their new homes, so that one finds old plantings from coast to coast.

One of the virtues of the newer varieties is that they bloom at an earlier age and many are more suitable for small gardens. The old Persian lilac which has been in cultivation since the middle of the Seventeenth Century still has its many "fans." It is very charming with its delicate lilac blooms and makes a very good border plant, forming a dense screen from 5 to 6 feet high.

Richardson Wright in his Gardener's Day Book calls attention to the "Nodding Lilac," the Syringa reflexa, which he says is a garden "must." It, unlike its cousins with their upright blooms, has drooping flower clusters and the plant is fountain shaped. For the lover of "bigger and better" in flowers, many of the new hybrids have enormous flower clusters with individual flowers an inch or more in width and leaves two or three times the size of those of the older varieties.

They Must Have Sun

LILACS like the sun. If you have lilacs and they have stopped blooming, check and see if some of your trees have not grown so that the bushes are more shaded than in former years. We found this the reason for lilacs not blooming in our own garden and when a little tree trimming was done the lilacs bloomed again freely the following year. This year the reason for not blooming probably is the cold weather which killed many of the flower buds. It is also very important to cut off all dead flower blooms before they go to seed.

They will thrive in any good garden soil and they like lime. In putting out new bushes the ground should be deeply cultivated and given a base of plant food. As one experienced lilac enthusiast puts it, "Buy a dollar plant, but put it in a 5-dollar hole."

Lovers of flowers who have not had an opportunity to follow the flower trek from the South will in coming days be able to follow them northward and on to Massachusetts, where the Massachusetts Horticultural Society is sponsoring a tour of gardens in "Lilac Time."

The tour will open with "Lilac Sunday" at the Arnold Arboretum on May 21. In the following days gardens will be open in North Easton, Milton, Canton, Brookline, Chestnut Hill, Dedham Dover, South Natick, Wellesley, Essex, Ipswich and Newburyport. Further detail can be obtained by writing Garden Week Massachusetts Horticultural Society, 200 Massachusetts ave., Boston 15.

Sowing Thick, Thinning Out Will Prolong Garden Harvest

IN THE small home vegetable garden, where a maximum yield is desired, there must be no vacant spaces in the row. The only way to insure this is to sow plenty of seed, but not too much, and thin out the excess plants.

No matter how high the germination of the seed, accidents may occur which destroy seedlings, and there must be spares to replace these losses. But unless the stand is gradually thinned, the plants may be so crowded that both quality and yield will suffer.

With some crops, especially those of which the roots and leaves are eaten, this method of planting starts the harvest weeks earlier, and substantially increases the total yield, because half grown plants pulled up in the thinning process, provide delicious servings.

Carrots, for example, can be allowed to grow without thinning until the roots are as thick as a little finger. Roots pulled at this stage will be sweeter and more tender than the mature crop.

Beets may be thinned the first time just when the bulbs begin to form. Cooked with their young tops they will be a dish to remember. Half grown vegetables cannot be bought in markets, but they are among the most delightful dividends which the home vegetable garden pays to its owner.

To maintain his supply of spare plants until sure of a perfect stand, the amateur should thin out by degrees.

A model home has been completed and furnished at a new project of 58 semidetached brick residences in the 500 block of Foxall pl. se. The developer is Master Builders, Inc.

The homes will sell for $11,950, according to N. G. Frederick, of Frederick Real Estate, sales agents.

Each unit has a full basement with toilet and outside entrance. First floor has a large living room, dining room, and equipped kitchen, including garbage disposal unit, range, refrigerator and cabinets. Upstairs are two bedrooms and bath.

The builder, Frederick said, is following the new trend in plumbing fixtures and has installed colored bath fixtures instead of white.

The houses can be purchased on conventional financing terms, with $1500 down. Furnishings in the model house are by the P. J. Nee Co.

Burnt Offering

Redondo Beach, Calif. (AP).—Frank Jensen's 12-year-old automobile backfired then caught fire going up a hill. A crowd gathered. "What are you going to do with it?" a youthful bystander asked Jensen, who stood staring disgustedly at the car. Jensen pulled out his certificate of ownership, signed it over to the lad, handed him the keys and walked away. "It's yours," he shouted back.

Long Life for Garden Hose

A garden hose is an important home investment. You want it to be in first-class condition, but you can't afford to replace it often. Here are a few precautions that will add years of life to your hose.

When a hose gets dirty, clean it with plain water only, not with soap or detergents. Don't try to renew the finish with ordinary home polishing wax.

Drain the hose and wipe it clean before reeling it.

Never coil or bend a frozen hose. Never hang it over a nail; use a reel or rack. Never kink it to shut off water, and don't shut off the water at the hose nozzle for long periods.

Don't run over it with a car or wheelbarrow—protect it with a simple wooden bridge. Don't drop or drag hose couplings on the ground or pavement.

The most critical part of a hose is the end which is attached to the sill cock. You can prevent sharp twists, bends and kinks with new swivel gooseneck connectors and snap-on couplings.

Increase in Home Ownership Seen

"Three of every 10 families in the $3000 to $5000 income bracket is expected to be in the housing market in the 1949-53 period."

This is the prediction of FHA Commissioner Franklin D. Richards, based on Federal data and made before a recent meeting of mortgage bankers in New York.

Bright Building Future

Atlanta, Ga. — D. L. Stokes, builder and developer, foresees construction of 50,000 new homes and apartments in this area by 1953. He said he believed the greatest number would sell from $4500 to $10,000.

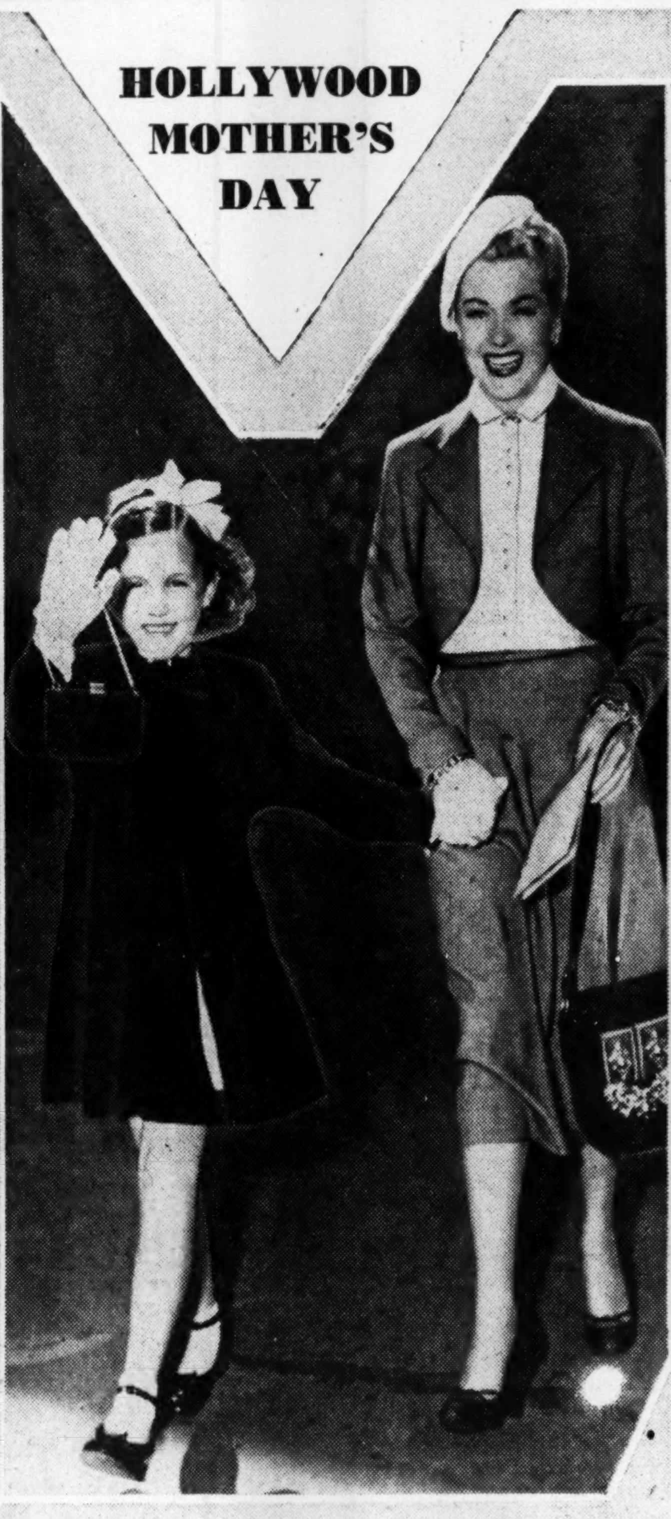
HOLLYWOOD MOTHER'S DAY

MOTHER'S DAY serves to remind Hollywood attackers that many of the glamour girls are also just plain Mom to a large new generation. Above Joan Bennett (Mrs. Walter Wanger) receives some flowers from Daughter Stephanie while Sister Shelley just sits



LUSCIOUS LANA may be the girl who draws whistles, but as Mrs. Bob Topping she's Mom to Cheryl Christine. Lana and her daughter are seen leaving the Metro lot, where Mom has spent the day costarring with Ray Milland in "No Life of Her Own." Cheryl's smile, you'll note, isn't unlike her mother's

THAT WISTFUL little girl on the right is Kathy Payne, the big-eyed lad on Gloria DeHaven's lap is Tommy Payne. Movie Star John Payne is the children's dad. Gloria's next for Metro is a Technicolored musical with Mickey Rooney, "Summer Stock"

Signing of King Swells 'Peep Show' Coffers; Kay Thompson to Get Record Coin at Paris Club

YOUR New York correspondent.

The Broadway Lights: M. Todd's "peep show" (which bows in Philly shortly) banked considerable coin for advance ducats 24 hours after the front pages featured his signing of the King of Siam to do the score. The King will not be invited to witness the New York premiere. "He would detract from the show," logic'd Todd, who spent a total of $18 in cables to win His Majesty . . . Angela Lansbury, the beautiful, could have inherited Beatrice Straight's lead in "The Innocents" (while the star blessed-events), but Angela wanted the Mint . . . Kay Thompson opens at Les Ambassadeurs on June 12 (for three months) at the tallest wages ever paid an American in Paris . . . Jane Cowl, who okayed the role, changed her mind and will not star in Shaw's "Getting Married" . . . "Death of a Salesman" now appears in 32 countries . . . The late Irvin S. Cobb's granddaughter, Buff Cobb, is now a Chicago disk-jockess . . . "The Liar" (due last Thursday evening) decided it needed another week of training in the tryout burgs before challenging the Broadway critics . . . "Mr. Roberts" has made a million in profit, but more than six million dollars was lost on Broadway shipwrecks this season.

WINCHELL

THE Cinemagicians: Ronald Colman's urbane fooling in "Champagne for Caesar" is top-flight entertainment. The film spoofs the giveaway radio programs . . . "One Way Street" is a conventional kissinema with James Mason as the physician, who runs a fever when he feels Marta Toren's pulse . . . "The Golden Gloves Story" offers a punchless boxing fable . . . A Britisher named "Mrs. Fitzherbert" is a crumb off the old crumpet. About the prince and a pretty commoner . . . "Adam and Evalyn" also arrived from the empahr, a pleasant romance . . . "Code of the Silver Sage" is another blend of cowboys and horsefeathers.

STAIRWAY to the Stars: Nils Asther, former screen idol, may be seen in a blink kissing Hedy's hand in the big palace sequence of "Samson and Delilah" . . . Some movie magnates can't wait. The Lew Ayres-Teresa Wright film "Captured" is a new version of "Pursued," which costarred Miss Wright and Robert Mitchum only three years ago . . . Betty Garde of the Warners Pictures reports she is okay and not losing her eyesight following an accident on the set . . . "The Golden Twenties" at the Astor (made of March of Time highspots since the Texas Guinan era) has a sequel coming from Warner's called "Fifty Years Before Your Eyes." Arthur Godfrey narrates . . . Cesar Romero, who played the hero of the 1941 movie "Tall, Dark and Handsome," plays the villain in its re-issue, "Love That Brute" . . . The producers of "Fire Island, New York" feared that title wouldn't sound sexy enough. The new gee-whiz tag is "Island of Fire."

THE Aristocrats: This afternoon's "Meet the Press" should be good. The guest is Senator Johnson, critic of Hollywood morals . . . Tuesday eve'g M. Berle kept repeating "de love" (in dialect) throughout his Texaco stanza. Local hunch-players played the nag "De Love," which romped in first . . . The test recordings made by one of Bing Crosby's sons in the race of the Tin Pan Alley insiders . . . Victor Young's grand "Manhattan Concerto" is another reason he rates Gershwin's mantle . . . Senator Humphreys is an erudite speaker, one of the best. But does he know he keeps saying "off'n" instead of "off" . . . Dumont's Sydney Smith and Duncan McDonald are women . . . Billy Eckstine's recital starts at Bop City on the 25th at the highest wage they ever paid. Seven years ago—when it was the Hurricane Night Club, he was canned after the first performance.

THE Intelligentsia: Kathleen Winsor's last laugh has the book reviewers groaning. Despite their negative verdict her new tome, "Star Money," jumped into the No. 5 spot on the top-seller list . . . Robert Payne, a British author in his 20's, has been in the U. S. less than two months and has had four books accepted in the past three weeks . . . Joseph Schein, an opera singer, heard in "Gypsy Baron" and "Beggar Student" and with the N. Y. Light Opera Co., is a waiter at Reuben's on 58th . . . Quentin Reynolds' "Courtroom," will be unveiled on the 25th . . . A literary mag called "Intro" will debut in August to give unknowns a chance. Would-be geniuses may start flooding P. O. Box 860, Grand Central Station, N. Y., with MSS. . . . Doubleday's "Scottsboro Boy" will not be offered to book stores in Mississippi or Alabama . . . Author Robert Nathan blasted book critics for being too kind to dull writers. What a switch. An author squawking because critics aren't tough enough.

THE press-box: Stassen's pop-off that "Truman is the worst President" is getting scads of mileage on editorial pages. The most delightful retort was: "Truman won the election. Stassen couldn't even win the nomination" . . . A reviewer in the Times referred to a dramatic critic as "being one for 30 years" and "as such a pretty worldly fellow" . . . Knows his way around an adjective, we'll bet . . . The same gazette reported that Eric Sevareid won a prize for "outstanding reporting" and then spelled his name wrong . . . After the Dodgers lost four games in the ninth, the Mirror's headline writer coined a nifty word to describe the disasters: "Ninth-mare" . . . The Russians kindly offered to settle their lend-lease debt at two cents on the $ . . . Guess the one thing they forgot to invent is money . . . An editorialist wonders why Truman is touring the country "at one of the most dangerous times in our history." Praps he's lookin' for a cave.

NEW YORKERS are talking about: Sportscaster Bill Stern's comment in "News of the Day." "If a parachute is not rigged to rigid standards," he announced, "someone may be seriously killed" . . . Ken Murray's "Ghost" cigarette trick. Uses an "imaginary" cigarette between his fingers, puts "it" in his mouth, lights a real match and exhales real smoke . . . The beautiful girls being hired by Child's (at the 14th Street branch school) to teach them how to make flap-jack pancakes in Child's windows . . . The program crowned with a Peabody award last week which is being dropped by the sponsor . . . "Detective Story," which paid back its investment after its third month and has since given backers 100 P. C. profit. "The Mystery Critic" predicted "six months at the most"

Ceaseless Drama

Critic's Life, Or, Sounds In the Night

By Paul Hume

O, FOR THE LIFE OF THE MUSIC CRITIC: A ceaseless drama in two or more scenes.

Cast of characters (and we mean characters): Any music critic; his wife; wide variety of singers, (almost always tenors), musicians, and some friends.

Scene one: Critic's home, his bedroom, with telephone at bedside.

Time: 3 a. m.

(The room is dark and blessedly quiet.) (The telephone rings—what else?)

Critic: Hello—yes, this is he, Who?

Voice (on phone): This is John Silvermouth. I just want to say that I waited up to read your review of my concert. The papers have just come out and I have read what you said about me. And I want you to know that I think it is quite unjustified.

(The critic's wife sits up, having overheard the conversation, and makes improper comments about being married to music critics. Her speech can be improvised.)

Critic: Mr. Silvermouth, may I say that this hardly seems the time to discuss your concert. If—

Voice: What I want to know is how come whenever someone with a big name comes down from New York you people always rave about them. But just let someone from—

(A loud crashing noise indicates that the telephone has been returned to its cradle. The phone company can repair the cracks in the morning.)

C's wife: Don't tell me—let me guess. That wasn't last night's tenor, Silvermouth—not at this hour?

Critic: Why not?

Wife: Do the objects of your reviews make a habit of calling you at this hour of the night? Because if they do, I am sure I can get an annulment on grounds of serious and intentional misrepresentation

Critic: Now, now. No one has called me at 3 o'clock in the morning since last year when that ballerina's husband woke me to know when I was going to stop writing articles about dead things like Bach, and do an appropriately laudatory bit about his wife's magnificent form.

Wife: What was troubling the tenor?

Critic: Some strange, unsupportable claim that I am unfair to Washington artists. Why should I bother to tell him about a half

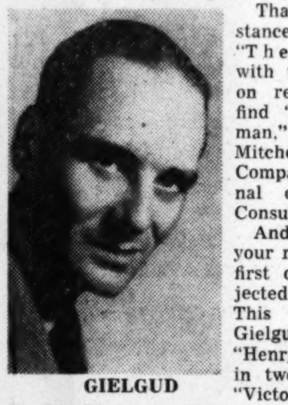
Theater-on-Records

Hear a Play in Your Home

By Richard L. Coe

TO THE FETISH-MINDED theatergoer, the odd thing is that it hasn't happened sooner.

The theater-on-records, that is, which currently seems to be beginning a boom.



GIELGUD

Thanks to Decca, for instance, you can now get "The Cocktail Party," with the New York cast on records. Soon you'll find "Death of a Salesman," with Thomas Mitchell and the National Company, and the original company of "The Consul."

And a sure-filler for your record library is the first of a series of projected ANTA Albums. This set includes John Gielgud in scenes from "Henry IV," Helen Hayes in two fine moments of "Victoria Regina," and Fredric March in "The Skin of Our Teeth" and Eva Le Gallienne in highspots of "Hedda Gabler." Those are the latest in the theater on disks you can find at the better record shops. The Disc Shop's agreeable proprietor, L. Danzinger, caters to an exceptionally hightoned clientele and his words would give New York producers food for thought. "Our record sales in the live-theater department indicate a great public for theater in Washington. Odd, isn't it, that it's lately been possible for record-buyers to get snatches of the New York hits while they don't seem to have much chance of seeing the real thing here?"

MUSICALS, naturally, have long been hits in the record departments. "South Pacific," for instance has grossed, in the record album, nearly 4 million dollars or about $1,500,000 more than the show itself. Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley," which currently is being presented by the Mount Vernon Players in their small undercroft auditorium at 900 Massachusetts ave., has been recorded by its original television cast.

Solid record collectors go back a generation for their "original New York casts" in song. You might still be able to locate the Liberty Shop's recordings of songs Beatrice Lillie sang in "Set to Music," that Roxy Music Hall number Audrey Christie made so memorable in "I Married an Angel," the ones Noel Coward and Gertrude Lawrence did for "Tonight at 8:30" (don't miss "Red Peppers" of that series) or Yvonne Printemps in "Conversation Piece."

Those are the older ones musical comedy fans still have embedded for posterity, just as the long-hair fastidos go in for the Caruso, Farrar, Destinn operatic selections of the early Victor Red Seal.

THE NEW 33 rpm—and the 45's—have made possible, according to the record people, the full-length plays that are cropping up today. It's a difficult road to hoe, because several unions are involved in the recordings, but you may notice that there's been a push toward linking the songs of musicals together so that the sense of the book comes out.

A faithful buyer can give Decca a lot of credit for the push, which got under way just before the war. The "Oklahoma!" disks, first in one volume, later in two to accommodate the songs omitted, were a great wartime seller. "Finian's Rainbow," "Kiss Me, Kate," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and "Miss Liberty," under Columbia, have been later smashes.

All those musical comedy afficionados can be heard playing over and over, just as Savoyards have been heard to do for years with the D'Oyly Carte Gilbert and Sullivan authenticos, now being issued on London long-playing sequences.

OF THE purely dramatic records it's possible to buy, my own favorite of the year is the ANTA Album, from the sales of which Decca benefits the nonprofit theatrical foundation.

On this Decca release you get a thrilling "Henry IV" from John Gielgud, two sides devoted to the great soliloquies. For the same company, Gielgud also has done a "Hamlet" group that overpowers the Laurence Olivier readings, which Victor took from the film soundtrack. The technical care in the Gielgud shows up and the great actor's emotional reading is as thrilling as the disk shelves on Shakespeare holds.

There's another Decca of Gielgud, with Margaret Rutherford, of a scene from "The Importance of Being Earnest" that's a sport to play for friends.

As remarkable as any is Judith Anderson's "Medea," expensive at $10.38, but a fine record of her sensational triumph. Miss Anderson, some years ago, did a recording of "Macbeth" with Orson Welles that's worth owning. Unique but a trifle flat, perhaps because of its years, is an album of Shakespeare by Otis and Cornelia Otis Skinner.

"THE COCKTAIL PARTY," with that Gilbert Miller cast, is reported to give a resume of the Eliot drama that elucidates some of the poet's finer points. Since I have plans for seeing the play shortly, I'm hording my original cast records, but those familiar with both state you'll get pleasure and instruction from the Columbia disks. When we will see "Death of a Salesman" here is a question, but the newly pressed Mitchell records will probably beat the live actors to this Capital. The same goes for the Menotti prize-winning "The Consul."

If you're a real theater fan you shouldn't miss splurging on the voices and plays Edison's machine has at last brought into your living room.

Award Winner

A War Put Sevareid in Big Leagues

By Sonia Stein

ERIC SEVAREID grew up in radio news broadcasting, just when radio news broadcasting was growing up. Named last week as winner of the George Foster Peabody Award for excellence in the radio news field for 1949, CBS' Sevareid had joined Ed Murrow's staff in London just a few days before the Russian-German treaty in the summer of 1939. The treaty precipitated a war, and it also precipitated quick maturity in radio news coverage.

Procedure until then had been to use a few commentators, prominent politicians and authors to assay the news. In fact, Murrow's original job in Europe for CBS was to round up distinguished personages and put them on the air. The demands of war reporting changed this. Murrow himself went on the air, put Sevareid on the air, set the staff to reporting the news when and where it happened. Sevareid, for example, followed the French Cabinet to Bordeaux and for the first confused 24 hours was the only correspondent in touch with the outside world.

Earlier he had been the first to contact the British Expeditionary Forces in France, and had made the earliest wartime broadcasts to the United States from Holland and Luxembourg. He covered the London blitz and—in every sense of the word—covered the Burma jungle when he bailed out of a crippled plane en route to China and had to walk home.

Radio reporting became a question of teamwork and organization as news roundups from all over the world took the place of ivory tower commentary.

He's Concerned

OF THIS 10-year growth of maturity in radio news, Serareid has been a part, and he is concerned—needlessly he hopes—with the current "frantic search for techniques in television newscasting" that may put it back to where radio was in the thirties when it was concerned with techniques instead of substance.

"We've given people to expect mature reporting . . . We can't withdraw it or even abridge it," says Sevareid. "I hate to see scrappy television presentation of serious news."

Even in the radio field, Sevareid sees the potential danger of losing listeners to TV, and consequently losing revenue which leads in turn to economic chopping at strong news staffs. "And

Horton to Open 'On Approval' At Shirlington Tomorrow

EDWARD EVERETT HORTON returns to the Shirlington Theater, Virginia, tomorrow night with his production of "On Approval."

The film comedian's recent appearance on the stage of the Virginia movie theater in "Springtime for Henry," prompts this quick return in another vehicle. He'll play the entire week, excepting Thursday night, when he'll be in New York for his TV show.

The Frederick Lonsdale comedy concerns a bachelor who decides to court a young widow. Paula Houston, Margaret Maginnis and Matthew Smith are in the supporting cast. Horton has acted the comedy over 500 times up and down the Eastern seaboard.

There will be Saturday and Sunday matinees, with a nightly price scale from $1.20 to $2.40. Seats are on sale at the Shirlington box office.

Alexandria Little Theater To Present Comedy

"George Washington Slept Here" will have an apt locale for its humor when the Alexandria Little Theater presents the Kaufman-Hart comedy next week.

Many are the Virginia houses of which the same might be said—"George Washington Slept Here." The group will act the play at the Cameron Street Recreation Center Monday through Wednesday, May 22-24.

Kay Burn, Ray Hagerty, Murray Sheehan and Ethel Casey have the leading roles. Cecil Wills is directing.

'Brigadoon' To Follow 'Private Lives'

BARRING the unexpected, the Gayety Theater is in the final four weeks of its season.

Tomorrow night Tallulah Bankhead will open her last week in "Private Lives." Two more weeks on the road and then the star will settle down for a three-month rest at her Westchester summer home. Leading man Donald Cook is set to sail for a three-month holiday in Sicily June 7.

A week from tomorrow "Brigadoon," now playing a return engagement in New York, will arrive for a three-week run.

This musical about an enchanted town in the highlands of Scotland is by Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe, whose songs include "Almost Like Being in Love," "The Heather on the Hill" and "There But for You Go I." Agnes de Mille's dances are a highlight of the musical.

Heading the cast will be Phil Hanna, recently returned from the London company of the hit; Virginia Oswald, Susan Johnson, James Jamieson and Virginia Richardson.

The Gayety presents Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

'Mother's Day' Lunch

The Variety Club's annual Mother's Day luncheon will be held tomorrow afternoon at 12:30 in the Blue Room of the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. J. Howard McGrath will be Guest Mother this year.

THE GREAT TRAMP: Charlie Chaplin is another comeback star whose "City Lights" will find an entire new generation for its laughter. The comedy will open Wednesday at the Dupont and the Little

ON RECORDS

THANKS MR. FLORIST—Vaughn Monroe, RCA Victor: If this record should catch on with the public, it will open up a whole new field in popular music, that of sequels. Following a successful song with a sequel is an idea which, so far, has largely been confined to hillbilly music. When it was noted, for example, that "Walking the Floor Over You" was a solid favorite with the country crowd, somebody wrote an "Answer to Walking the Floor Over You," although I can find nothing in the original composition which would merit an answer or further consideration of any kind.

Another trick of the hillbilly boys is to devise a sequel merely by adding "new" to the original title, as "New San Antonio Rose." And just recently we had "Slipping Around" followed by "I'll Never Slip Around Again," a promise which at least augurs well for the future.

However dimly you may view some of these hillbilly hits, "Thanks, Mr. Florist" definitely proves that there's nothing wrong with sequels in the popular field. In this song, the same gentleman who wanted some "Red Roses for a Blue Lady" says "Thanks, Mr. Florist for Sending the Roses, My Lady Isn't Blue Anymore." The gentleman in question is Vaughn Monroe, and this is his most persuasive release in some time. The melody is only half the length of the average popular song, a characteristic which it shares with its predecessor, and I'm sure you will find it 16 bars pleasantly spent.

FROM A DISK JOCKEY'S MEMO PAD: There are times when lyrics add appeal to a good melody, and there are times when they help it not at all. "The Stars and Stripes Forever," the great John Philip Sousa march, has managed to struggle along for the last 50 years without lyrics, and I imagine it will continue to be heard that way for the next 50. Lyrics have just been added to the song, and although they seem superfluous, I must admit that Gordon MacRae (Capitol) sings them rather well.

Another case where the lyrics fell short of the melody was "You're Too Dangerous, Cherie." While the song of that title was only a moderate success a couple of years ago, the lovely French melody to which the words were written refused to die, and has recently found favor under its original title, "La Vie en Rose," as recorded instrumentally by Victor Young (Decca).

When you visit your music store, don't overlook some of the lesser known brands of records, as they are responsible for many a hit. Both Anton Karas' "Third Man Theme" and Teresa Brewer's "Music, Music, Music" are London records, a relative newcomer among the major labels; Eileen Barton's "If I Knew You Were Comin' I'd've Baked a Cake" started as a National record; "Sentimental Me," by the Ames Brothers, bears the Coral label; Dick Todd's "Daddy's Little Girl" is on Rainbow; Lawrence Cook recorded "The Old Piano Roll Blues" for Abbey, and Bill Snyder's "Bewitched" is a Tower record. In music, as in horse racing and politics, it's the dark horses which make the game interesting.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9 a. m.; Moondial, 11:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

Music Critic Has a Bad Time With People Calling in Night

dozen Washington singers I have praised almost without reservation? Or about the Washington pianists I enjoy as much as or more than many who come with noisy reputations? Or another group of Washington musicians—its finest organists—who rank with the country's very best?

(Silence enters, covering critic and wife in a mantle of comfort at having routed the invaders.)

SCENE two: the following day, a Sunday. Both phones in the critic's home ring all day. Typical conversation runs:

Telephone voice: This is Amanda Friendly, an old acquaintance of John Silvermouth's. I would like to speak with whoever it was who wrote that dreadful piece in the paper about that poor boy's recital night before last.

Critic: (Sometimes wearily, sometimes mad as hops.) This is he. Why do you feel that the story in the paper was so bad?

Voice of A. F.: Why? Why because you just ruined that poor boy's career. You said he didn't know anything about singing. You said that his teachers were all bad and dishonest.

Critic: Pardon me, Mrs. Friendly. If you will read the story carefully, you will see that I praised Mr. Silversmouth's feeling for opera—I said that he had a real gift for Russian songs—I said that he could look forward to a highly successful career, comparing his chances to those of one of America's highest paid tenors. Is all that so bad?

Voice (slightly less upset): Yes, but you said he didn't know how to sing.

Critic: No—read the column again—it says that there is one fault to be overcome if Silvermouth is to reach a real career. That is a long ways from saying he can't sing.

Mrs. F. (much more appeased): Yes, it is—well, you know, I really agreed with what you said about that one quality. Well, I'm glad I called you. I think maybe you were right after all. After all, we would all be happy if our singers today sounded the way they did years ago.

C.: Thank you, Mrs. F. Telephone any time. We take calls any hour of the day or night.

Curtain.

Collingwood Plans May 30 Opening

The newly-formed Collingwood Theater-on-the-Potomac, 5 miles south of Alexandria on the Mount Vernon hwy., will open Memorial Day night with a play yet to be announced.

Plays that will be offered during the summer season will include "French Without Tears," "Yes, My Darling Daughter," "Papa Is All" and "Strictly Dishonorable."

The producing group this week signed Steve Zacharias, who has directed Equity Library Theater plays in New York, as director for the summer.

The theater will seat 400 and is being operated in conjunction with Collingwood Inn.

Crosby's on Records Through May 24

Although Bing Crosby has gone overseas to play in the British amateur golf tournament, his absence won't affect his Wednesday night CBS radio show. He has recorded everything in advance.

In fact he is so far ahead that he has enough programs on platters to last through May 24, which will be his finale of the season.

The finale will include Bob Hope, Arthur Godfrey, Perry Como, the four Crosby sons. (AP).

Disks of Old Piano Rolls Make Stimulating Items

GREAT Masters of the Keyboard Series. Columbia ML 4291-2-3-4-5. $5.95 each.

Here are records of music being played on the piano by Debussy, Ravel, Faure, Busoni, Saint-Saens, Leschetizsky, D'Albert, Grieg, Nikisch, Reger, Paderewski, de Pachmann, Scharwenka, Granados, Falla, Mahler, Strauss, Scriabin, and someone named Frank Marshall.

It happened this way. Early in this century, before phonograph records had achieved anything like the quality we know, the Welte Company, a German firm, devised a system of rolls for player pianos. They then acquired rolls played by nearly all the outstanding pianists of the first two decades of the Twentieth Century. They also had many of the world's most noted composers of that time record their own music.

Columbia secured the Welte library of over 3000 rolls, and from them, has made a set of five long-playing discs. The music and musicians are of greatest importance.

Fine Tone

The recordings reproduce fine piano tone. Since the rolls can be played on the finest, most modern pianos, the tone is that of the best pianos today. But the awkward mechanism by which the rolls were originally cut prevents these historical discs from sounding accurate.

Thus you hear jerky, uneven tempos, blurred pedalling, and ragged finger work from musician-pianists who never played that way in their lives. It is not Columbia's fault that this is so, but it is unhappily the case.

Thus the releases will be of principal interest to those who study music from historical documents, and to those with a special devotion to one or more of these creative artists.

Rare Moments

IT IS interesting to note the selections played played by various artists. Debussy, Faure, and Ravel play their own piano compositions. Saint-Saens, Mahler, and Richard Strauss play piano versions of their vocal and symphonic writings.

Busoni and de Pachmann play the usual virtuoso repertoire; there are moments throughout the series when the music shines with a flash of greatness; those moments are rare. It is our loss, for the accomplishment comes so close to giving us priceless treasures.

By all means hear some of these in order to decide if you want several samples of unusual merit.—HUME.

Virginia Artist's Works on Display In Whitney Show

A WASH drawing entitled "The Cliff" by Elizabeth Nottingham, a well known Virginia artist, is included in the annual exhibition of sculpture, watercolors and drawings at the Whitney Museum in New York. The exhibition will continue through May 28. The artist (in private life Mrs. Horace Day) is co-professor of art at Mary Baldwin College. She is a former resident of Culpeper.

The painting is one of a series of landscape drawings done last summer in Vermont where Mr. and Mrs. Day spent two months, associated with the Southern Vermont Artists at Dorset. The subject is a picturesque rock formation along the Mettowee River in Southern Vermont.

Omaha Due to Get TV Net This Fall

Plans for extension of the Bell television network to the West Coast make it appear that the primary link between New York and Hollywood will be entirely over microwave radio beams.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. said the extension beyond Omaha, due to get the network this fall, would be by radio relay towers via Denver, Salt Lake City and San Francisco. It is due for completion by the end of 1951 or early in 1952. A radio relay link between Los Angeles and San Francisco is being built, and the Chicago-Omaha connection also is to be by radio relay. During the summer, the Bell System will open a new radio relay hookup between New York and Chicago that will take over part of the television network traffic between the two points.

However, the full network still will make use of coaxial cable over many routes.—(AP).

BARRIE HEROINE: Marjorie Watson has a leading role in "Dear Brutus," which the Westmoreland Players will present Wednesday through Saturday evenings at the Westmoreland Congregational Church

Bank Contest Ends Today

THE Hamilton National Bank High School Musical Talent Contest—that's a long title and it's been a long contest—winds up this afternoon on the stage of Constitution Hall. Nine finalists from six Washington public and parochial high schools will compete for top awards in the bank's search for outstanding talent.

Three singers and six instrumentalists will be lined up before the audience and judges: Constance Plain, mezzo-soprano, Allan Milofsky, tenor, and William Graham, baritone, are the singers. They come from Western, Roosevelt and Coolidge schools.

Four pianists—Fan Nell Daniels and Dorothy Kemp from Dunbar, Jimmy Geralis of Roosevelt, and Maria Ros of Holy Cross Academy—vie with two violinists, Doris Gazda and Danny Steinberg, both of Wilson, for the instrumental trophy.

The contest program is open to the public, and will be broadcast over Station WMAL. Judges include Howard Mitchell, conductor of the National Symphony; Warner Lawson, Dean of Howard University's Music School; Msgr. John K. Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's Cathedral; Patrick Hayes and Paul Hume.

Sigmond Spaeth will present the awards at the close of the contest.

Five Stations Team Up to Form 'Web'

IF YOU are a dial twiddler, and the ubiquitous radio surveys say that a lot of you are, you may find your opportunities now limited during the 7 to 8 p. m. period. With the beginning, last Monday, of the Metropolitan Network—a highly unorthodox arrangement in which five competing stations carry the same program—the same show is being beamed at you from WBCC in Bethesda, WGAY in Silver Spring, WARL in Arlington, WPIK in Alexandria and WFAX in Fairfax.

This is believed to be the first time that competing stations have joined to blanket one area with five layers of the same show.

THE reason in back of the move is financial. (No!)

The station managers decided three years ago that they might profitably pool their resources for a few programs each week to produce something bangup.

Furthermore, with their composite coverage patterns, which in combination reach some areas not covered by our most powerful local stations, the Met Net can offer a sponsor wide coverage. At certain times of the broadcast day, it can even offer a sponsor a bigger audience than any one of the big stations. And it can offer these things for less money, it claims.

On the assumption that some people find their radio fare by dialing around until they hear something they like, they offer the sponsor five chances to trap the listener. If they should ever get a sponsor who wants to pinpoint his messages—say, a drugstore chain which wants to tell you where the stores in your particular suburban area are located—the stations can cut back to their own studios for the commercial breaks.

Because the technical arrangements—FM relay from station to station—are still going through the "shakedown" period, the programming from now through August will be simple, middle-of-the-road, "lowest common denominator" recordings for a one-hour daily period. Major programming efforts won't begin until later.

ONE of the most exciting prospects of the network seems to be its potential for news beats. WGAY once got a news beat on a child disappearance case in Maryland. WPIK happened to be on hand when the big airport disaster happened. With five stations pooling their news resources, the tiny little Met Net may garner some news scoops simply because it has five prongs.

After three years of wishful thinking, the Met Net was galvanized—almost overnight—by the appearance on the horizon of a sponsor. The Marjack Popcorn Co. has bought a quarter hour of the current show, thereby giving rise to the Met Net's first family joke: "We have a corny program." Corny joke, too, but it helps keep their spirits up.

Although there is always a good deal of probing at Federal Communications Commission hearings when new stations are being licensed, to determine whether the management will serve its own community properly, the limited arrangement the new network has probably won't raise any FCC eyebrows. The brief network programming certainly doesn't interfere with the stations' public-service programs.

The exact schedule for future Met Net shows—after August 31, that is—is uncertain, since these are all daylight-only stations involved, and their broadcast day gets shorter and shorter as the days get shorter. Of the five, WGAY, WPIK and WFAX are eligible to become full-time stations if the North American Regional Conference which reconvenes in Washington August 1 decides that stations operating on channels shared by Mexican stations will not interfere with the south-of-the-border stations by nighttime operations. S. S.

that can mean scrappy news shows on radio," he explains.

Peabody Prize

FOR his part, Sevareid is doing far from a "scrappy" job. The Peabody Award — radio's nearest thing to a Pulitzer Prize —was given him for "the depth and clarity, perspicacity and lucidity of the reporting and interpretation" of his 6 p. m. shows (WTOP-CBS).

Recently moved into the 11 p. m. spot over the same facilities, Sevareid now has an opportunity to do more interpretive reporting than ever, since the 11 p. m. news on CBS customarily closes with five minutes of analysis. These "think pieces" — which Sevareid writes in the afternoon —are "a lot more satisfying to do" than the "hard news" which precedes it, Sevareid explains. But even with the straight news, "I do a more orderly job than before because I don't feel pressed for time," he says, declining to rest on his Peabody laurels,

The late night stint—much as it upset loyal listeners who wanted him to stay in the 6 p. m. spot—also gives him a wider audience. At 6, which is local option time for network stations, only about 25 stations carried Sevareid. On the late show, he reaches about 60.

On the Scene

THE Peabody award also mentioned that "wherever big world news is breaking, he has either already been or is on the scene getting a first-hand" account. Normally based at WTOP, Sevareid spent the first four weeks of the new time assignment in key cities throughout the country. His travelling discomforts must have disappeared when he received word in Springfield, Ill., of the award.

He was "thoroughly surprised" by the news although "in the private recesses of our ego we all hope for it," Sevareid admits.

Not as nervous about broadcasting as he was when he was sprung unexpectedly from newspaper to air work in '39, Sevareid is still more writer than speaker.

He sips warm water to relax his throat, which is where nervousness catches him—"a heck of a place to be affected in this business"—and always writes out lectures in advance. "I can't get up and spout," he claims, being substantially in favor of saying something when he opens his mouth.

Eric Sevareid . . . had to walk home

For that reason he often has to turn down lecture invitations, and is this very minute wrestling with the problem of whether to address the Industrial War College here. For Sevareid to address them would mean several days of writing preparation, which is more than he may be able to manage on top of his daily 2000 words of tightly written air copy.

"I can't offer generalizations to them . . . I'd have to come to grips with concrete problems," says Severeid.

UNLIKE an unfortunate number of his colleagues, Sevareid is so far from being in love with the sound of his own voice, he'd rather sound like somebody else. When one of his 10-year-old twins, who wants to be a radio man himself, said wistfully that he wished he had a voice like Ed Murrow, Daddy said wistfully he wished he did, too.

And as a writer, Sevareid has much stature. His semi-biographical "Not So a Wild a Dream," published in 1946—has enormous ease and beauty of style. A Literary Guild selection, it also made the Times' honor list.

Tucked in the back of his mind is the hope he'll write another book — a novel this time so he can write about "more personal things than you can when you write about yourself" — partly because of the need radio people feel to write something of a permanent nature.

The transient nature of radio work doesn't bother Sevareid often, not as long as people write to assure him they heard a broadcast and did or didn't agree, and not as long as he has tangible evidence like the Peabody award that "some thoughtful people" listened—and remembered.

Disturbs the Speakers

Clashing colors in the studio produce more spirited debates, says John Peyser, CBS-TV "People's Platform" director.

Mrs. Freyman Heads AFRA Chapter Again

Evelyn Freyman has been elected president of the Washington chapter of the American Federation of Radio Actors for the sixth time. Mrs. Freyman is also a national vice president of AFRA.

Other local officers are Lee Vickers of WTOP, first vice president; John Batchelder of WRC, second vice president; Virginia Whitehead, secretary, and Ray Wilson of WQQW, treasurer.

Dyson's On Furlough While He Wins

CBS' "This Is Your Life," once had to stop short of its powers to save unpleasant public reaction: It just plain refused to get a prisoner a parole lest people wonder who's running things.

The Horace Heidt Original Youth Opportunity Program, with a merrier objective, didn't stop short. It wangled a furlough from the U. S. Army for Corpl. Emile Eugene Dyson for as long as he continues to be a winner of the show.

Dyson, a baritone who stands 6 feet 3 inches in his GI socks, was winner of the three shows presented in Europe with armed forces personnel as contestants, and will compete tonight (WTOP-CBS, 9:30 p. m.), against GI talent stationed in the Washington area. The program, preceded by a 2½-hour show including all of the Heidt troupe which has just flown back from a European tour for the armed forces, will take place at Fort Myer.

Jeanne Harvey . . . appears with Horace Heidt in windup of Armed Forces talent hunt tonight at Fort Myer. Broadcast of the program will be at 9:30 over WTOP

10 Million Sets

Video Audience Due To Reach 35 Million

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK (AP).—Despite some signs of a summer slow-down, television appears likely to finish 1950 with 9 million to 10 million sets in use and an audience of some 35 million persons.

The video boom has continued to outrun the forecasts of the optimists and has led to frequent upward revisions by manufacturers in their estimates on the number of sets to be produced this year.

There were approximately 3,750,000 sets in use as the year began. Most estimates of this year's production ranged from 3,500,000 to 4,000,000 sets. In February, the Radio Manufacturers Association in an informal poll of manufacturers got an average estimate of 4,500,000. The other day a similar poll produced an average estimate of 5,350,000.

In the first three months of the year, about 1,600,000 sets actually were produced. If that rate were maintained all year, it would mean 6,400,000 new television sets in 1950. However, most set makers look for some slowdown in set buying during the summer months, with a pick-up in early fall.

There are about 5,750,000 sets in use now, a gain of some 2 million since the first of the year.

It's another story with stations, however, because of the Federal Communications Commission's freeze on new permits in effect since October 1, 1948. With 104 stations now on the air, there are only seven more coming up—that already had permits when the freeze was imposed—until the FCC resumes issuing licenses.

FCC Chairman Wayne Coy recently expressed hope the freeze would be lifted before the year was out but said he could give no assurances to that effect.

PROOF that a television station can be operated in a middle-sized city and pay its own way is offered by Leonard A. Versluis, owner of WLAV-TV in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Versluis started putting programs on the air last August 15 and he says he met operating costs by the second month.

He telecasts programs of all four video networks without being on the television network hookup. He turns the trick by using his own microwave radio beam circuit set up to relay programs from Chicago, nearest network point, over a series of towers.

Being the only station in Grand Rapids, WLAV-TV takes its choice of the programs of all four networks. To begin with, Versluis is operating without studios or cameras, except for a film camera used to show newsreels, occasional movies and film recordings of network programs not brought in live on the relay system.

Versluis concedes the conditions are favorable. Although Grand Rapids has a population of some 180,000, he says there's a population of about one million within the station's range. The number of sets in the area, he declares, has risen from 350 to well over 26,000. But if he had a competitor at this stage, he adds, "we'd both lose money."

TELECASTERS are reacting to recent criticisms from FCC Chairman Coy, the National Council of Catholic Men and others on crime shows and matters of taste. The National Association of Broadcasters is considering a code for television similar to the one it adopted some time ago for radio. The Television Broadcasters Association has set up a committee to review a broad and general statement of "principles and policies" adopted two years ago, with a view to making it more specific. Station WOR-TV in New York has adopted the motion picture code as a guide on its programs.

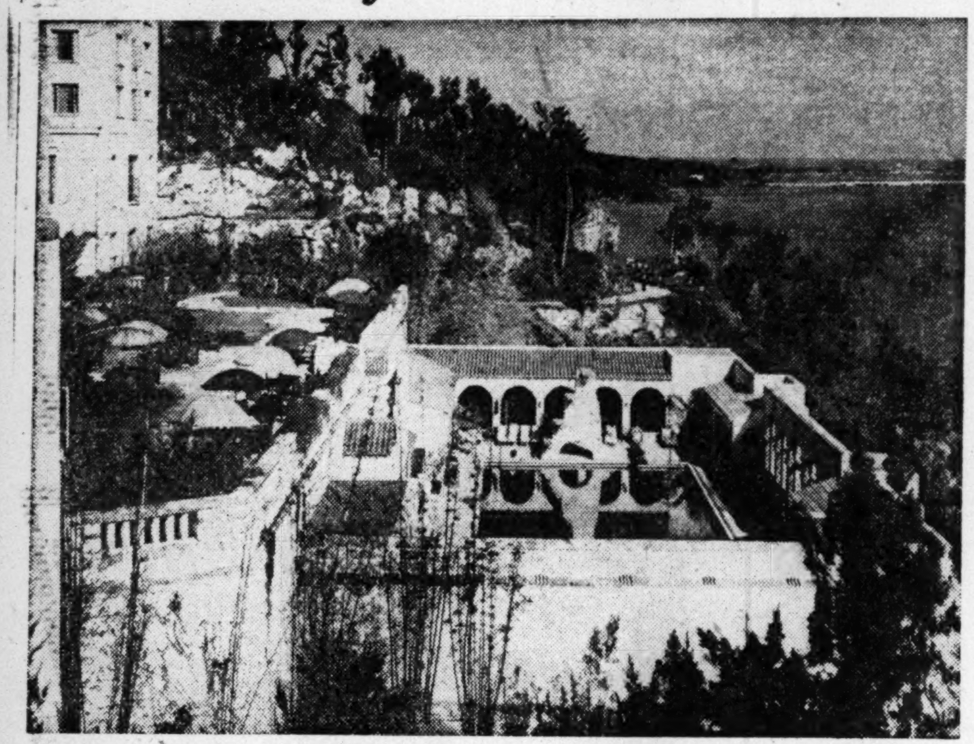
Famed Hotel Reopens After 10 Years

War's Over for Castle Harbour



Looking out over The Castle Harbour's pool and outdoor terrace, past a winding hill road to the island causeway, and beyond, the Atlantic

TUCKER'S TOWN has been part of Bermudian history from the beginning of the colony. Today, it is still in the main stream of Bermudian events, for it is the site of The Castle Harbour, the colony's largest and most sumptuous resort hotel. The Castle Harbour, dark for 10 years, reopened March 27.

Long before it became the site of The Castle Harbour, Tucker's Town entered Burmuda history when an early governor gave the area his name. The most important historical moment for the Tucker's Town area was at the time of the American Revolutionary War.

The American colonies had rebelled against the common mother country, and about half the population of Bermuda sympathized. The Americans were long on spirit and determination, but short on ammunition. They learned of a considerable store of gunpowder in Bermuda.

George Washington himself wrote a letter "To the Inhabitants of the Island of Bermuda." After stating the resolve of the Americans to win, he declared, "We have turned our eyes to you, Gentlemen, for relief. We are informed there is a very large magazine in your island under a very feeble guard."

No one ever completely revealed just how 100 barrels of gunpowder were whisked from the magazine at St. George's (just across the water from Tucker's Town). Historians suspect that persons very high in the social structure were involved and, therefore, that clews were carefully obscured.

In any event, on August 26, 1775, the Pennsylvania Committee of Public Safety received a letter from one Henry Tucker, "Chairman of the Deputies of the several parishes of Bermuda." By a "coincidence," Tucker enclosed a bill for 1182 pounds of gunpowder.

After a period as the site of a whaling station, Tucker's Town reached its present condition when, in 1923, the Furness-Withy Lines, searching for the site for a proposed international resort hotel, chose it for its eminence, scenic values and the view it commanded of three bodies of water. The Castle Harbour was built and it opened in 1931.

The hotel soon gained the soubriquet, "the Riviera of the Western Hemisphere," for its luxury. The Second World War, however, eclipsed and kept it dark 10 years. Now, once again vacationers from all over the world are romping around the 600-odd acres of Tucker's Town.

More than one million dollars was spent to rehabilitate The Castle Harbour. A new decor has been installed and an international staff recruited to restore the continental service for which the hotel was famous.

New Hampshire Ready For a New Season

Concord, N. H.—Both the folks who are going to take New Hampshire vacations and the folks who provide those vacations are planning early this year, the State Planning and Development commission reports.

Not only are inquiries on where to go and what to do in New Hampshire pouring in at the commission's Concord office, but news of vacation events and opening dates of attractions is being received daily, it was announced.

Mineral Springs

Interest in the curative properties of Colorado's mineral springs is bringing increased numbers of visitors to the State. In Steamboat Springs (U. S. Hwy. 40) there are over 150 springs with a discharge of approximately 2000 gallons of water per minute—three million gallons a day.

Virginia Beach Cavalier Club Opens Friday

VIRGINIA BEACH, VA.—Friday, May 19, has been set by Sidney Banks, president of the Cavalier Hotel, for the opening of his Cavalier Beach and Cabana Club.

An innovation this year is the installation of private telephones in each cabana. The entire club has been refurnished throughout and newly painted in a Bermuda decor of coral, aqua, yellow and Mediterranean blue. Nautical styled deck chairs in harmonizing colors will complete the general face lifting.

First name band of the season to debut at the Cabana Club will be Don McCrane and his Orchestra who will play for dancing on the spacious show-boat deck overlooking the Atlantic. McCrane has enjoyed two years runs at the Stevens Hotel in Chicago and Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe in New York.

The club's cabana kitchen will serve sandwiches, salads, light snacks and beverages throughout the day.

The children's playground adjacent to the Cabana Club will again be in full operation under the direction of a registered nurse. Swings, slides, sandboxes and other playtime equipment have been set up and pet ponies will complete the picture.

Gaels to Meet In Nova Scotia

CAPE BRETON, N. S.—The first handcraft produced by white men on this continent was turned out here in 1606, and today the old skills are being revived so that throughout Nova Scotia the visitor may purchase expertly fashioned pottery, leather work, woolens and many other articles.

The Nova Scotia handcraft center is at St. Anne's Cape Breton, where the Gaelic Mod and Highland gathering is held each summer, this year on August 9-12. Those attending the Mod may purchase tartan weave by the yard, scarves and neckties besides hooked rugs which are sold in many communities. Some visitors like to return home with items of carved wood or brass or leatherwork, and all are available.

The residents of Cheticamp and other towns in Cape Breton have been turning out fine hooked rugs for years, colored with specia dyes whose formulas have been handed down from generation to generation. So many have been sold that they must be decorating homes from Florida to Maine.

Virginia Beach Has New Pier

VIRGINIA BEACH.—Summer vacationers in Virginia Beach for the 1950 season will view for the first time a 750-foot fishing and amusement pier.

The pier, which has been built by private capital, extends from the present seawall at the site of the Casino Park at 14th and 15th sts.

The new attraction has been designed to satisfy the desires of the fisherman, and amusements and a restaurant will be a feature of the structure. The restaurant is located midway on the pier with fishing facilities available on the T-shaped end of the pier.

A parking lot to accommodate upward of 300 automobiles has been provided at the pier's entrance. Construction of a pier has always been a perennial project for the resort, says the Virginia Travel Council, but it has now become a reality.

Another Summer Sans Bugs Pledged By Ocean City, N.J.

Ocean City, N. J.—Ocean City visitors have been promised another mosquitoless summer. As through the past few years, the city commissioners will again wage an aggressive warfare against these little pests that can bulk so large in the enjoyment of a vacation.

For the first time since the war, the Atlantic Coast Championship Tennis Tournament has been scheduled. The little contest, which attracts the upper 10 top-flight amateur players of the country, will be battled out on the courts of the Ocean City Tennis Club, July 10-15. The junior championship tournament is set for August 7-12.

Another event to be revived and slated for the Flanders Hotel Pool on the boardwalk, July 7, is the open swim meet which includes a series of swimming races and high diving.

Two Travelers Strike Wearily Back

The bears have become very fond of tourists

By Orval Hopkins

TWO GENTLEMEN named Ewing Krainin and Horace Sutton have put together a book entitled "Happy Holiday—A Photographic Travel Guide, Sort Of." It is due from Simon & Schuster any minute and it will cost a buck. S. & S. have sent me a small brochure in which the attitude of the book is succinctly set forth and some of the photographs are reproduced. I have taken the liberty of reproducing above a few of the pictures, with the captions that accompanied them.

The attitude, contained in a paragraph of an introduction, is indicated by the following: "Anyone wishing further information in the form of catalogues or brochures on any of the resorts and vacation spots described should get his head examined."

Clearly, Krainin and Sutton are men apart.

TRAVEL a La Car is a little booklet put out by Carol Lane of the Shell Touring Service. It's done principally from the woman's aspect of things, but is full of Miss Lane's concise counsel on packing, what to wear, where to stop, etc., when traveling by car. You can get the book for free at 50 West 50th st., New York 20.

THE BARGE on the C & O Canal will make two one-way trips today, leaving Lock 3, one block south of M st. on 30th st. nw., at 2 p. m. and returning from Lock 5, Brookmont, at 4. Tickets available at the barge. Also on the schedule of the National Park Service for today is a walk along the canal towpath to be held from 3 to 5 p. m., starting from stop 24 on the Glen Echo carline, and a bird walk in the vicinity of the Miller Cabin in Rock Creek Park to begin at Military rd. and Beach dr. nw. at 7 a. m.

THE RENAULT WINERY near Egg Harbor City, N. J., provides free guided tours for visitors between the hours of 9 and 4, Mondays through Fridays. Hmm . . . Man named James T. Landon, Florida State Hotel Commissioner, reports that Florida has more food and lodging places today than ever before in its history. The State now has supervision over 29,552 places offering 513,995 rooms for rent, an increase of 70,322 rooms in the past 18 months. Restaurant seating capacity is up 32,985 to a figure of 560,270.

MONEY for vacation travel—air transportation, clothes, even ticket cash—is now available through a banking arrangement made by National Airlines. A traveler can drop in, National says, at a National Airlines ticket office or a travel agency and arrange his tour, his plane reservation, his vacation fund application all in one visit. The application is a credit form which asks for the individual's name, address, banking affiliation, etc. National reports that within 48 hours, if all goes well, the bank can have the application approved and the check for the desired amount in the hands of the traveler. The loan is repayable over a year's time. Union Trust Co. is the Washington bank handling the deal.

TRACKS, the C & O Railway magazine, carries a piece this issue entitled "Home Is the Crummy." I congratulate the author, Fred Stauffer, on a great title. Good story, too. All about how some people took old railroad cabooses and lived in them.

THE U. S. National Student Association says it is acquiring the Svalbard, a Norwegian extroopship, to be used for student summer travel. The ship will leave New York for Rotterdam or Le Havre on June 22, returning to New York by September 10. Cost will be about $310 round trip. The association is at 304 N. Park st., Madison 5, Wis.

OCEAN CITY, Md., has a new bandstand and hopes to use it today for Mother's Day business. It also will be used for summer concerts by the new municipal band, under direction of Frank Sacca, and will be available for other concerts, as a reviewing stand for parades, and such. The Independent and Retail Grocers and Meat Dealers are meeting today and tomorrow at the George Washington in Ocean City.

SUMMER FARE to Cuba has been set by National Airlines at $112.90 round trip (plus tax, I suppose, though, it doesn't say here).

VIRGINIA Trailways announces special round trip excursion rates to some Southeastern points. Example: Washington to Charlotte, N. C., $12.30 plus tax. Among other points are Miami Atlanta, Ashville, Raleign, Lynchburg and Tampa. Trailways also has begun its daily tour through Shenandoah National Park via the Skyline Drive. Coaches leave the terminal at 8 a. m. (E.S.T.).

A VACATION in the dude ranch country is only 13 hours away for Washington residents, cries Northwest Airlines, which has issued a booklet called "Dude Ranch Guide, 1950." This is said to list "dozens of Montana, Washington, Wyoming and Idaho ranches, with their identifying brands locations, owners, attractions and rates. Some Canadian ranches also are listed."

52 Over 14,000 Feet

Colorado has 52 mountain peaks of 14,000 feet or over elevation. Far-famed Pikes Peak ranks 28th at 14,110. Longs Peak is 14th, 14,255. The three highest are Elbert, 14,431; Massive, 14,416 and Harvard, 14,399.

Visa Regulations

Damascus (AP).—Syria and Lebanon are making visa regulations tougher for tourists and other visitors.

In the past a visa for either nation was honored by the other for any number of trips between them. Now they have decided a visa for one country can be used for only one trip into the other.

Where Volcanoes Sleep

Active volcanoes once existed in nine sections of New Mexico. U. S. hwys. 66 and 380 both cross arge lava flows in this State.

More and More Wheels Rolling Across Border

The volume of highway traffic between Canada and the United States has increased year by year from the low levels of the wartime period. The total number of vehicles to cross the border into Canada has grown from between two and three million in 1943 to close to 10 million in 1949. The number of non-Canadian vehicles which entered Canada for longer than 48 hours in 1949 was 9 percent higher than the previous record, established in 1948.

Vacation Best on Budget, Is AAA Advice

YOU'LL get more out of your vacation this year, and more for your money, if you work up a travel budget before you leave home.

This advice comes from Elmer Jenkins, national travel director of the American Automobile Association, who feels that many vacationists spoil their trips through poor planning and overspending at the wrong times.

"The major problem is that some people travel too far for their pocketbooks, spending too freely during the first few days and then are forced to squeeze pennies in order to arrive back home in any shape at all."

Sample Budget

AS A GUIDE for motor vacationists, Jenkins has developed a standard budget for a family of four traveling in their own car. Here's how the daily allowance works:

Car operation	$ 9.00
Meals	12.00
Overnight accommodations	6.00
Admissions and amusements	2.00
Roadside refreshments	1.00
Total daily expense	$30.00

And here's how Jenkins arrives at his figures:

The vacationing family travels an average of 100 miles every three hours and 300 miles a day, while the cost of car operation is estimated at 3 cents a mile—for a daily total of $9.

Meals, comprising the largest travel expenditure, are based on an average daily outlay of 75 cents per person for breakfast; 75 cents for lunch, and $1.50 for dinner.

Overnight accommodations now are available at some 50,000 hotels, motor courts and wayside inns throughout the country. For clean and comfortable quarters the average family might spend anywhere from $4 to $9, with $6 a useable figure for budget purposes.

Watch Admissions

TWO ITEMS which many vacationists overlook in pretrip calculations are admissions—to to caverns, historic shrines and scenic attractions—and amusements, including movies and an occasional odd quarter in the juke box. The family on the road generally spends about $2 a day on these. In addition, there are roadside refreshments, soft drinks, coffee, ice cream and other incidentals that average out to $1 a day for a family of four.

Totaling the basic daily expense of $30 a day for a family of four, a one-week vacation can be budgeted at $210; two weeks at $420, and a full month at $840. The A.A.A. recommends adding on 15 percent for extra incidentals and emergencies.

In addition to budgeting, Jenkins offers these three suggestions for stretching vacation dollars:

1. Do your driving during the early part of the day, stopping with plenty of time to find the type of accommodations you want at the price you want to pay.
2. Visit travel attractions that have something worth while to offer, steering clear of free zoos and other gyp joints that make a practice of luring in suckers.
3. If you can, plan your vacation for the spring or autumn, avoiding the peak travel seasons when roads and overnight accommodations are crowded and prices at their highest.

Club Cautions Motorists to Check Routes

WITH extensive highway improvement programs already getting under way throughout the country, the Keystone Automobile Club urges motorists planning long trips to check carefully on routes before starting.

"Difficulties can be avoided," said Ernest R. Brett, manager of the Washington Club, "if motorists take the precaution to check the routes they propose to use. Many construction projects are under way in Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, and Ohio.

"Experience of most motorists is that the delays incident to tedious driving in construction areas warrant the use of alternate routes wherever available.

"For this reason, we strongly urge drivers to check on construction and detour information. Motorists who rely on maps alone may find their trip beset by inconvenience, if not actual hardship, but when maps are used in conjunction with adequate road data, there is no reason why difficulties should be encountered."

Going Abroad? Be Sure to Plan Ahead

By Julia N. Easley

THE British Isles are opening a wide door tourist-wise this year.

In this best tourist year since the war, great hordes of travelers are sure to follow the beckoning "Come to Britain" posters. But chances are there will be many a quiet corner in the isles away from it all. This to the true junketer is important.

This does not mean that you could neglect plans and reservations before reaching England, Scotland or Ireland. The wise traveler, beyond avoiding the largest number of tourists, spends at least as much time on previous planning as on the actual trip.

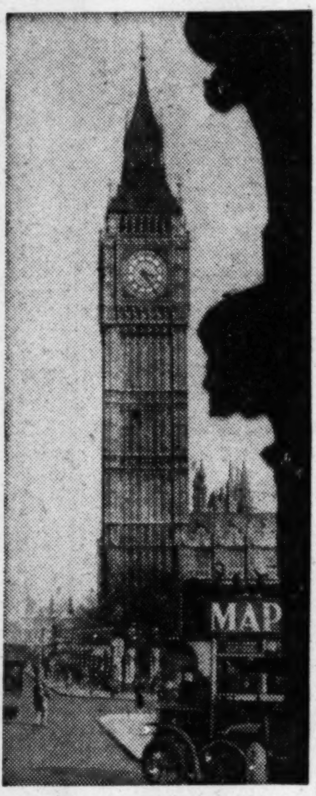
Reserve Ahead

AND I wouldn't dare set foot in London without some advance notice of my arrival; even last autumn I spent two nights in room 68-B — a bed temporarily set up in a large bathroom. It was quite worth any inconvenience, for I became partial to that particular cozy hotel, not only because of its lovely Belgravia location but also because two of the attendants said they would take me for an Englishwoman, except for my "slight accent." What could make one feel more at home?

Last October, when I made my first crossing of the Channel, I lost part of my heart to the island country with the misty glimpse just out of Folkestone. I continued to lose more of it as time passed.

Afternoon tea or high tea—as you would—served on the comfortably modern boat train when all were through customs, brought tangibly the charm and sincere friendliness of the British people. Over our teacups the family of three with whom I shared a compartment explained to me the LSD (pounds, shillings and pence).

Helpful Busmen



Big Ben . . . patiently accepts homage of tourists

AN ENGLISH bobbie is notedly one of the most jovial people in the world, but the busmen are pleasantly helpful, too. This I discovered on that first evening in London when I boarded a southbound bus on my way to N.W. 8 from S.W. 1. The ticket collector said Americans always got confused because we are accustomed to the "wrong" side of the street.

After a day or so of walking alone and studying maps, I knew as much of the geography of London as I did of Washington. And for getting your bearings before your arrival, it is good foresight to study the literature which the British Travel Association offers.

This will enable you also to be selective in your plans. There are not only maps and folders on the various sections of the isles, but also specific calendars of events, from fishing seasons to music festivals.

Along with a program to suit almost any taste, Britain offers a characteristic of its people, a delightfully relaxed yet constant enjoyment of life tangible in the traditional interspersed day-in-the-country or the light refreshment served between acts in the theater.

The Washington Philatelist

Second of 'Sesqui' Stamps Will Be Issued on June 12

By William M. Stuart

STUART

SECOND in the series of National Capital Sesquicentennial commemorative stamps will be issued June 12, 1950. It will be released to coincide with Post Office Department Day. The Post Office Department, the first Federal Department in the city of Washington, was established June 11, 1800. The design of the new stamp depicts the south view of the White House, a worthwhile subject, although the stamp itself commemorates the establishment of the new Post Office Department.

In this series—a total of four —there are two sesquicentennials yet to be issued. The order for the initial printing of the second stamp calls for 125,000,000. As all 1950 commemorative stamps will be issued in millions, collectors are warned not to purchase sheets beyond the number they expect to use in their collections.

It is, after all, most unwise to invest largely in new stamps. When it is time to reduce stocks and the market is going down, remember the Department or the hobby is not to blame—the trouble lies with the collector who thinks only of the investment feature of collecting.

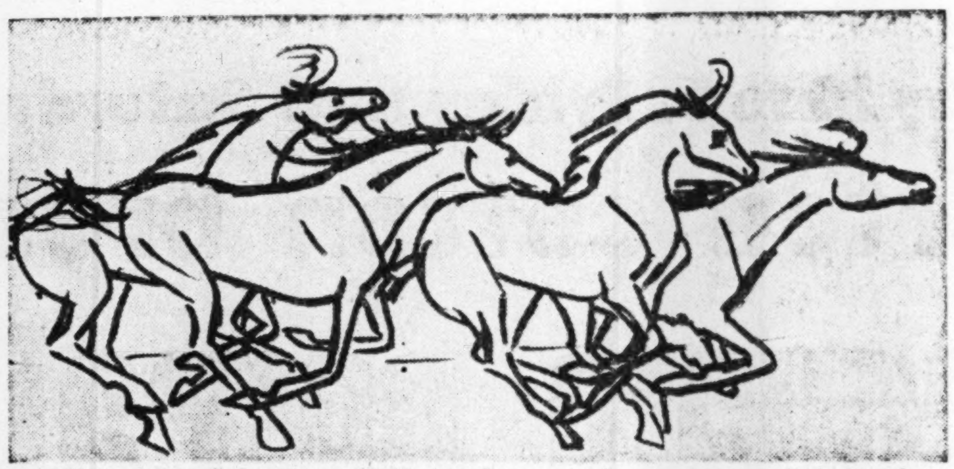
EDVARD MUNCH

Munch Show Due May 28

COMING May 28 to the Phillips Gallery is the long awaited exhibition of paintings and prints by the great Norwegian expressionist, Edvard Munch. It is the first comprehensive display of his work this side of the Atlantic. Chief United States organizer was James S. Plaut, director of the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston, where the show opened. It will come here from the Museum of Modern Art in New York, where it closes May 20. The work of Munch, one of the founders of the expressionist movement, has been little known in this country. The exhibit, a major event in the art world, was made possible by the Norwegian Government, which has contributed generously to the enterprise.



"Galloping Horses," by 12-year-old Virginia Patterson, whose work is on display at the Phillips Gallery

Character Shows in Israel's Art

By Jane Watson Crane

THERE is a brooding, introspective quality about the paintings by 50 Israeli artists now on view in Washington at the Temple of the Hebrew Congregation. From the group, "Portrait of a Boy" by Moshe Mokady was the unanimous choice of Duncan Phillips, Macgill James and Hermann Williams, local museum directors who were asked to make a recommendation for purchase. It is hoped that the canvas will be bought with contributions from the Congregation as the first step toward a permanent art collection.

Mokady's work is a sensitive figure study; using a low-keyed palette the artist has relied mostly on tones of grey. More subtle than forceful, the painting is, nevertheless, somewhat reminiscent of the work of the late Soutine, Paris artist. Mokady was born in Galicia at the turn of the century; he studied in Vienna and Zurich, but made his home in Palestine, where he taught at Haifa and later directed an art school in Jerusalem. Recently, he has been doing stage decoration.

Professional Work

FROM a country still struggling for establishment and survival, the evidence of emphasis on the creative arts is remarkable. Most of the artists represented spend the major part of their time in work that ranges from manual labor to teaching. Yet the show has a serious professional look. In a sense, it is propaganda, but of the subtlest variety. There is no drum-beating; no clamor for attention.

It reflects to some extent the influence of the French painters, particularly Matisse and Rouault, a natural outcome since many of the Israeli artists have at one time studied in Paris. Sometimes the recollections of Matisse may be no more than due to a mutual interest in Oriental color, as in the work of Sionah Tagger, one of the few native-born artists. Despite defects of lighting, the intense blues and reds of Joseph Castel's canvases stand out, and the silent drama of "Old City, Jerusalem," by Isaak Frankel comes through. Much of the work has religion in theme or feeling.

There are no formal portraits, but some character studies. A head of a child by Ouded Bourla, native-born artist who came to Washington for the opening, is the only painting to have been shown here before. Another arresting head is the work of Chaim Apteker, an agricultural worker from the Ein Harod Settlement. He was granted time from his labors by the Settlement to go abroad and study in Paris. On his return, through his interest, a museum created by and for the farmers has been established in the community.

The strength of the show is in the depth of emotional feeling it conveys. Defects in drawing and the handling of paint seem minor by comparison, but these show up the harsh lighting. The Congregation's director, Sydney Kellner, plans to make art exhibits a permanent part of the cultural program. A new building is in prospect and improved facilities for the installation of shows. The paintings for the current exhibit came recently from Israel; more than 700 people turned out for the opening reception here. They will continue on view until June 4.

TO HAVE work exhibited at the Phillips Gallery is an honor coveted by many artists. This time it has been accorded to a 12-year-old girl, Virginia Patterson, who has a remarkable series of drawings of horses and other animals.

At an age when most children's creative efforts are inclined to tighten up and become self-conscious as they strive for more realistic presentation and technical skill, these drawings are unusually free. The show is enjoyable because of the natural rhythm in the movements of the animals, the firmness of line and the spontaneity of expression.

Virginia Patterson is the daughter of former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patterson. Her mother wisely refrained from bringing her down for the opening of her show, which incidentally is not her first in an art museum. The drawings may be seen at the Phillips through May 22.

Opening Wednesday at the Institute of Contemporary Arts, 1322 New York ave. nw., is an exhibition of modern sculpture, including work by Giacometti, Flannagan, Marini, Geissbuhler and Henry Moore. The show will be on display Monday through Saturdays from 1 to 6 p. m. until June 11.

Washington 1950 as seen by Washington artists is the theme of a new exhibit at the Whyte Gallery, 1518 Connecticut ave. nw., to run to May 31. Outstanding one-man shows in Washington this month are Peter Blanc's exhibit at the D. C. Public Library, 9th and K sts. nw., and Mary Orwen's at the Dupont Theater Gallery on Dupont Circle; in Alexandria, Mary Snow's show at Chequire House.

The Report Card

G. W. Will Try to Meet Shortage Of Elementary School Teachers

By Elsie Carper

A PLAN for meeting the critical shortage of elementary school teachers will be tried on an experimental basis this summer at George Washington University.

Thirty-five selected college graduates will be given an intensive 13-week course designed to prepare them to teach in elementary schools. While they will not complete their studies by fall, all are assured of jobs in the Virginia schools next term.

The students will be either liberal arts graduates or teacher college graduates trained for the junior and senior high school field.

A 1950 Study

THE need for emergency measures to provide elementary school teachers was outlined last week in the 1950 National Teacher Supply and Demand Study, published by the National Commission on Teacher Education and Professional Standards.

The study, prepared by Dean Ray C. Maul, State Teachers College, Emporia, Kans., found that the shortage of elementary teachers next year will be the worst in the history of the Nation's schools.

Although colleges and universities will graduate record classes, only a fifth of the number of new elementary teachers needed this fall will be among students receiving diplomas.

The study found that 22,460 elementary teachers will be graduated in June and experience has shown that not all of these qualified graduates will enter teaching.

100,000 Needed

WITH elementary school enrollment expected to increase by almost a million children in the fall, at least 100,000 new elementary teachers are needed.

Normal replacement of teachers retiring would take care of half that number. The additional 50,000 teachers are required to cut classrooms down to 30 students a teacher and to begin a ten-year program of replacing teachers not qualified for the jobs they hold.

While there is a shortage of elementary school teachers there is a surplus of teachers trained for the secondary school field.

The same study showed that this spring the colleges will graduate 84,730 high school teachers for an estimated 30,000 vacancies.

The Department of Labor's current report on the labor market shows that there will be a shortage of jobs this year in other fields requiring college training. There will be a surplus of students crowding into law, journalism, personnel work, engineering, business administration and accounting.

The program at George Washington University is an effort to convert these college graduates who will be looking for jobs into elementary teachers.

May Be Model

IF THE summer's experiment proves successful, the program will be expanded next year and will serve as a model for other teacher training institutions.

Dean James Harold Fox of the university's school of education said that the course will be one of the most intensive offered at the university. Students who enroll will be expected to forget about the eight-hour day.

During the first two weeks they will study child growth and development, the principles of teaching and the nature of the learning process.

A one-week program of lectures and reading on the background of the elementary school will follow. Students will discuss purposes of the elementary school, its organization and its problems.

Practice Teaching

FOR the next two weeks the students will spend half a day observing teaching in the Arlington summer schools. The remainder of each day will be spent in class. During the four following weeks the students will spend mornings practice teaching in Arlington and afternoons studying elementary school curriculum. When the practice teaching period is over another four-week period will be devoted to classroom study.

Jobs for Goal

STUDENTS will not be fully certified for permanent teaching posts but will be hired on a temporary basis in Virginia. Completion of a six-hour credit course during the winter term will qualify them for permanent jobs in Virginia. With additional study next summer and during the fall term of 1951, they will be eligible for jobs in Maryland and the District.

GAS HEATING SECTION VII

Gas Heated Homes Here Tripled Since 1945

This subdivision in nearby Maryland is typical of new developments in which every house is equipped for gas heating

Fuel Is Piped Here From Texas

IT WASN'T the longest pipeline ever laid, nor the biggest. It was just the toughest!

When contractors first looked at the mountainous terrain of central West Virginia over which the line had to go, they tentatively dubbed it the "Pipeline in the Sky." But after about one week of work, the romantic name was dropped for a much more realistic one. They called it the "Toughest Inch."

This 26-inch line, completed last December, was built to meet increasing demands for natural gas in the Washington area. It brings us gas both from the Appalachian fields—formerly this city's sole supply—and from a main supply line from the fields of Texas.

Running 262 miles from a point near Charleston, W. Va., to Rockville, Md., the Toughest Inch winds through some of the roughest country east of the Rockies. Some idea of the difficulties encountered in constructing it is conveyed by the cost of laying it—about $15 a foot, or $79,000 a mile. The whole project cost more than 20 million dollars.

It was vitally needed, however. In 1948 over 14 billion cubic feet of natural gas were required to keep Washington supplied. On the basis of estimated growth over 22 billion cubic feet will be needed by 1953, an increase of about 57 percent in five years.

The line had to cross 216 roads and highways, nine railroads, and the Potomac and Shenandoah Rivers. At each of these rivers multiple crossings were necessary, the pipe being split up into four smaller lines which were reunited on the opposite bank. The placid Potomac turned out to be one of the stubbornest streams in the United States to cross, requiring 30 tons of dynamite to blast a crease through its solid rock bed.

Before a line could be run over the rugged, wooded mountain slopes, a road had to be bulldozed and blasted into existence and a trench scooped out of the ground. It took 160 freight cars to move the equipment alone and another 2500 to move the material—to the tune of a freight bill totaling about one million dollars. The construction crews moved more than 135 million cubic feet of earth and rock with the help of a million pounds of dynamite and batteries of the biggest tractors, bulldozers and ditch diggers made.

THE WASHINGTON GAS Light Co., which today supplies the Washington area with gas for heating and other uses, was chartered by Congress just over a century ago, to provide gas illumination. That was in 1848—the same year that saw the end of the war with Mexico, the discovery of gold in California, and the laying of the cornerstone for the Washington Monument. See page 11 for further data about the company.

Forging through the uplands of West Virginia was not without its perils. Sometimes the crews killed as many as 104 poisonous snakes in two days. And once a huge ditcher and two "back hoes" fell off the mountain face.

The Toughest Inch, vitally needed to keep Washington amply supplied with natural gas, is a monument to the energy and perseverance of those who saw the job to completion.

Pilot Light Keeps Your Furnace Dry

USERS of gas heat are advised not to turn off gas furnace pilots for the summer months. Besides having the equipment in readiness for an early fall cold snap, a lighted pilot will keep summer dampness out of furnace sections, helping to prevent corrosion and prolonging the life of the equipment. The cost of keeping the pilot lighted varies, but usually is less than $1.50 a month, gas officials estimate.

"The Toughest Inch" Cost $15 per foot to build over this rugged terrain

Change to Natural Gas Won New Customers

GAS—for house heating—has gone to town hereabouts during the past three years. Gas heating equipment has been, and is being, installed in an overwhelming majority of the homes resulting from Washington's tidal wave of new construction, according to a recent survey by the Washington Gas Light Co. The survey reveals also that change-overs from other fuels have been made in hundreds of older homes in the area.

The company now has more than 77,000 heating customers, with 90,000 predicted for the end of this year. More than 50,000 have been acquired since the war, most of them since 1947.

What is in back of this sudden growth? A combination of several factors, the chief ones relating to Washington's postwar conversion to straight natural gas. This has permitted rates to remain at a level competitive with other fuels, according to the company, which reports that its recent study of relative present-day costs shows gas occupies a most favorable position.

Following the change from manufactured or mixed gas, the utility's supply of natural gas was greatly increased by construction of a huge transmission pipeline which assures an ample flow.

One of the features claimed for gas heating is the refined nature of the fuel, which eliminates waste material to be removed and assures cleanliness. Another is its constant dependability, a readily available supply at all times. Basement space conserved by the compactness of the heating unit and elimination of fuel storage often makes it possible to create an additional room for workshop, laundry or recreation.

In the replacement field, a possible application of gas for heating is by way of a conversion burner which can be installed in many existing coal boilers. Other methods call for a gas-designed boiler to be connected with an existing radiation system or a forced warm-air gas furnace with existing ducts.

No Bad Hump

Budget Plan Equalizes Gas Bills

KEEPING monthly bills for gas heat constant despite fluctuations in winter weather is one of the most popular services offered by the local gas utility.

Although there are seven months in the year when homes must be heated, fuel requirements vary greatly from month to month.

For example, in a house where the heating bill comes to $100 in an average year, $20.40, or approximately one-fifth of the whole season's heating costs, would be run up in the cold month of January. The milder months of October and April, on the other hand, would require only $6.40 and $8.70, respectively, to keep the house warm.

The Washington Gas Light Co.'s budget payment plan allows customers to equalize their heating bills by budgeting them in eight equal monthly payments.

Modern Fuel Had Rough Origin

Primeval Ooze Keeps You Warm

WHAT is this mysterious element called "natural gas" that is piped into our homes to provide them with automatic heat and other essential services? How was it formed, where is it found, how does it get to us?

The story starts millions of years ago when the earth was still young, when the only life was countless billions of microscopic plants and marine organisms on the shores or in the water that covered practically all of the earth.

As the earth's inner core of molten metal cooled and shrank, the outer crust collapsed in one place, was flung high in another. Torrential rains and hot winds swept the heaving surface, carrying before them the numberless tiny plants and organisms.

This teeming mass of life collected as a fine organic mud, an ooze hundreds of feet deep in the waters. More gigantic upheavals of land, coupled with the erosive action of rain and wind, brought down layers of sediment, then more ooze, and then more sediment. Through heat and compression, this organic mud fermented, decayed and finally assumed its present gaseous form.

Got His Goat

ANCIENT peoples were mystified and frightened by accidental discoveries of natural gas seeping from the ground. Sometime about 1000 B. C., a Greek herdsman noticed his goats acting strangely when they neared a crevice on the side of Mount Parnassus. The only explanation he could advance was here was a a manifestation of some supernatural agency. A priestess was appointed, a temple built, and the Oracle of Delphi was established.

It was probably the Chinese who first put natural gas to an industrial use. Obtaining it from wells 2000 feet deep, they transmitted it through bamboo pipes to evaporate brine in saltmaking.

Early in the seventh century fire temples were erected near Baku, on the Caspian Sea. From Persia and India, fire worshipers by the thousands came to visit these shrines, one of which was in use as late as 1880. Dismantling of this temple about 1900 revealed a secret pipe built to conduct natural gas from a rock fissure to the altar. The constant flame that had inspired worshipers with a belief in the supernatural powers of a priest of Zoroaster, was the same flame used today for heating homes from Washington to California.

'Burning Spring'

FIRST hint of natural gas in this country is found in an early record of a "burning spring" near Charleston, W. Va., dedicated as a national park in 1775 by George Washington. And it was near a similar spring at Fredonia, N. Y., that the first gas well in this country — 27 feet deep — was drilled in 1821.

In 1859, the petroleum industry was born when oil was struck at Titusville, Pa., but tragic waste of natural gas accompanied this boom in "rock oil." Early oil men valued natural gas only as a means of pushing oil to the surface; gas wells which did not produce oil were lighted and allowed to burn themselves out.

The "hunch" and "wiggle stick" of these early wildcatters came to be replaced by the scientific methods of the geophysicist. The magnetometer is one instrument used to measure abnormal magnetic forces and thereby indicate land formations favorable for gas and oil accumulations; the torsion balance, measuring variations in specific gravity at different points on the earth's surface, is another. The seismograph measures sound waves and earth shocks induced by dynamite charges, thus charting the location of a dense structure or rock salt dome where gas would exist.

251,330-Mile Web

THE discovery of natural gas would have been of small value, however, without the means for rapid and economical transmission of this fuel over many hundreds of miles

In the late 1920s, a seamless, thin-walled pipe was perfected, capable of withstanding great pressure from booster stations. Today a network of long-distance pipelines conducts natural gas from its source in 22 States to consumers in 34 States and the District. This underground system totals 251,330 miles—17,000 miles more than this country's main railroad tracks. Texas natural gas will soon reach New York by way of an 1800-mile line, costing more than $100,000 a mile.

The natural gas industry of the United States supplies straight natural gas to some 11,300,000 homes, 850,000 commercial establishments and 45,000 industrial plants. Natural gas mixed with manufactured gas is served to 1,650,000 homes, 89,000 commercial establishments and 11,000 industrial plants.

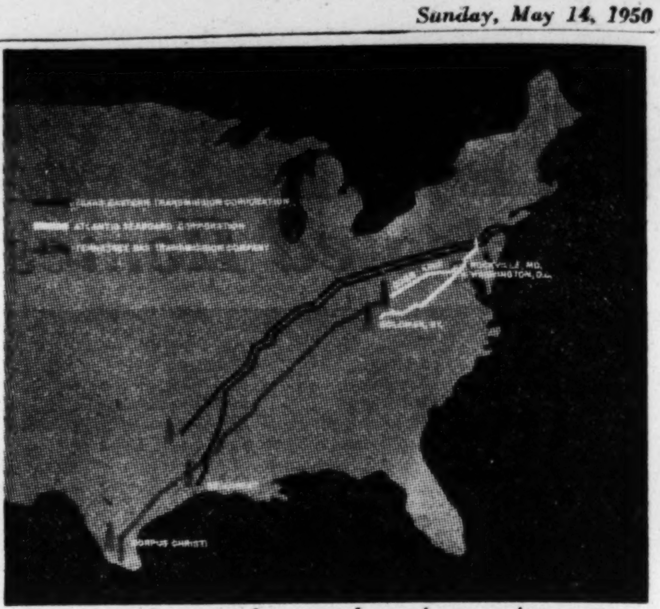
Despite an all-time record of consumption, the United States ended 1949 with more proved reserves of natural gas than ever before in its history. Six trillion cubic feet were added that year, raising the total of assured underground supply to 180 trillion.

Stored Underground

LAST year about a trillion cubic feet of gas was pumped back into the earth to repressure active wells, or was put in storage in beds from which gas had been previously exhausted. A reserve supply guarantees that even in a sudden or prolonged cold spell the gas pressure will stay constant. It also permits a uniform rate of withdrawal from active wells, thus prolonging their life.

Modern man is awakened by an alarm clock whose spring or electric motor was heat-treated in a gas furnace. He bathes and shaves with gas-heated water, dresses in textiles whose processing required large quantities of gas. He eats a gas-cooked breakfast, reads a newspaper whose ink was dried by gas, listens to news on a radio whose tubes were formed in a gas flame.

Gas heaters keep railroad switches open in sleet and blizzard. Gas flames cut metal in shipyards and iron works. Gas is used in making tin cans in which food is stored. It fires cement and brick and is burned as the "Flame of Eternal Peace" atop the Gettysburg Memorial.



How natural gas reaches your home from as far away as Texas. Such transmission facilities permit piping of the fuel to points many hundreds of miles from its source

Although five billion years old, natural gas is a tool for the modern miracle of atomic power. The Atomic Energy Commission plans to feed 60 million cubic feet daily into steam plants at Oak Ridge, Tenn. Natural gas—helping to build our future with energy reserves from a remote past.

New Code Governs Installations

HEATING problems of Washington home purchasers can be minimized under a program of gas-fired forced warm air installation standards which has been developed here through the voluntary action of heating contractors in cooperation with the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington and the Washington Gas Light Co.

The program is based on standards of installation procedure prepared by a committee representing the heating contractors and approved by the cooperating group.

Subject to the general provisions and fundamental requirements, the specific number and location of outlets, the duct layout and the sizing of ducts for individual installation are left to the judgment of the heating contractor. It is required that the system deliver to each room an adequate supply of air, that proper provisions be made for return air, that air velocities be limited and that specific rules be followed in the general design and construction of the distribution system.

The standards take in various elements of safety and accessibility for servicing, as well as operating efficiency. Reference is also made to location and ventilation of the furnace room, erection of the heating unit, installation of piping, flue and electrical connections and design and installation of the thermostat and other controls.

The program offers a Certificate of Compliance which can be placed on installations meeting the requirements of the voluntary standards. The certificate bears the signature of the subcontractor making the installation.

Provisions for certification are:

1. The equipment is approved by the American Gas Association and complies will all local codes,

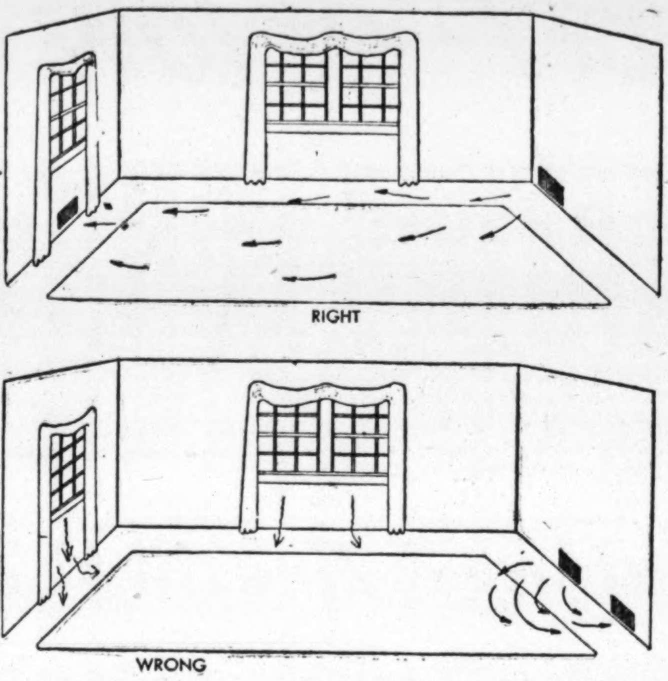
2. Installation of the equipment is in accordance with local code requirements.

3. Design and installation of the heating system conforms to the gas-fired forced warm air heating standards adopted by a conference of Metropolitan Washington warm-air contractors October 1, 1948, and indorsed by the Washington Gas Light Co. and the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington.

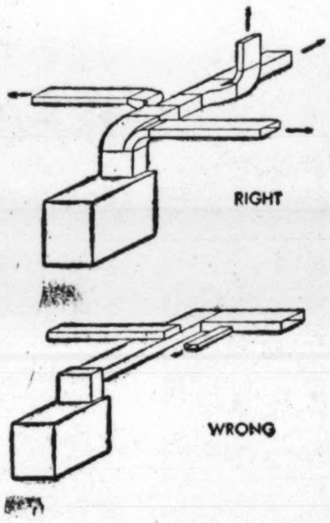
4. Facilities are available for service when needed, as well as an adequate local supply of repair parts.

This program has the technical assistance of the gas company, whose cooperation was solicited by a majority group of warm-air heating contractors initiating the project.

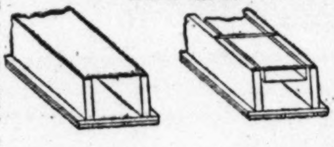
Any heating equipment that has the approval of the AGA testing laboratory and is designed and installed in compliance with local codes is eligible under the standards.



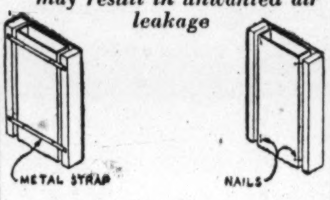
Right and wrong way to locate grills in winter air conditioning installations. Proper method is shown by the bottom picture. Supply and return grills should be so located as to deliver heat to the point of greatest heat loss and prevent spreading of cold drafts



Adequate heat delivery is dependent upon proper air flow which usually requires streamlined duct design and avoidance of sharp and awkward turns



Use of duct spaces without metal lining for air passage may result in unwanted air leakage



Nails driven through ducts do not give proper support and bracing, and lead to air leaks

For Comfort

66 Degrees About Right On Average

MANY homes are overheated. This would occur less frequently if the temperature in the house could be kept at a steady, uniform level without drafts and with the proper degree of humidity. Five degrees added to the temperature in the house may add as much as 15 percent to your fuel bill.

Tests involving hundreds of people have enabled the research staff of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers to determine conditions under which most people are comfortable. The term effective temperature is used to represent a number of different combinations of temperature and humidity under which 97 percent of the people felt equally comfortable. Some winter comfort conditions expressed by the term "66°F. effective temperature" are:

66°	F.	and	100%	humidity
68	"	"	75%	"
69	"	"	65%	"
70	"	"	50%	"
71	"	"	40%	"
72	"	"	30%	"
74	"	"	10%	"

Humidity between 30 and 70 percent is generally considered most comfortable.

Advantages of Gas

BECAUSE of its simple molecular form, gas burns readily without smoke and is often called an ideal fuel. Its advantages for home heating are: No storage space required as it is piped to the customer as needed; payment is made only as the fuel is used; there is no ash disposal necessary and first cost of the equipment for burning gas is comparatively low. Automatic controls are desirable and are commonly installed when gas is used as fuel.

65 Degrees Outdoors Is Par Inside House

WHEN you read that the Weather Bureau says the 1948-49 year (from July 1 to June 30) was the warmest on record, you may wonder how in the world the men figure it out. The fact that you could go without a coat some January days or that the temperature didn't go below freezing very often isn't any real proof that the winter we had a year ago was the mildest on record.

The real proof is in the record of deficiency degrees measured by the unit called a "degree day."

To find out the number of degree days in any 24-hour period, first of all you add the highest and lowest temperatures recorded for the day and divide by two. This gives you the average temperature for the day as reported by the Weather Bureau. Then subtract this figure from 65 degrees and you have the degree days—the deficiency degrees for that day.

Heating engineers and experts on the subject have concluded that when the temperature is 65 degrees outside, no heat is required inside the home to be reasonably comfortable. As the temperature drops below 65 outside, heat for comfort must be supplied.

Therefore, the heat requirements are readily determined by finding the difference between 65 degrees and the average for the day. For instance, if on a given day the average temperature was 60 degrees, the degree days, or deficiency degrees, would be 5 for that day.

Degree days are accumulated for an entire heating season or any portion of it and used for purposes of comparison with any similar period in a previous year—or with the average of many years. This is useful in considering fuel costs.

As a matter of record, this city's coldest year was 1903-04. The lowest Washington thermometers have ever dropped was on February 11, 1899, when they fell to a shivering 14.9 degrees below zero.

New Homes Feature 'Treated' Air

IF YOU are buying a new home in the Washington area, within reach of gas company mains, chances are good that you will find it equipped for automatic gas heating.

Most of the new gas-heated homes — about 93 percent of them—are provided with winter air conditioning system. In this kind of installation, forced warm air distributes the heat, the central unit having a motor-driven fan to circulate air through ducts in the walls. Used air is returned to the heating unit, providing constant movement of the entire air content of the home. In addition to heating the air, the central unit adds sufficient moisture through a humidifier and removes dust and other impurities through filters.

In summer, circulation of air alone can be maintained by operation of the furnace fan. Some purchasers of homes equipped with winter air conditioning look forward to future installation of summer air conditioning. A number of the recently completed homes have complete air conditioning for winter and summer provided by the Servel All-Year Air Conditioner.

Several types of radiation are featured in the new homes which offer hot water or steam heat. A type which is engaging the interest of both builders and buyers of new homes is radiant heating, various interpretations of which are found in current new home offerings. In such installations, pipes are completely concealed in the floors, walls or ceilings.

Needs Little Space

BUILDERS report economies in construction can often be effected by the use of gas heating equipment. A wide choice of unit location is permitted, space usually being conserved by its compactness. All gas-fired equipment installed in Washington and surrounding territory must bear the American Gas Association Testing Laboratories' seal of approval to insure compliance with local code requirements.

While central gas heating has a universal appeal for single-family dwellings, it is also being used to an extent, in the multiple-housing field. Traditionally, gas has predominated in Washington's numerous four-family flat buildings where small individual hot water boilers are placed in the kitchen and connected to radiators in the various rooms.

A newer application is to the heating problem in the garden-type apartment, where a modified form of central heating is employed. In this type of construction, each of the several buildings comprising the project can have its own gas-fired boiler to supply heat to the 12 or so dwelling units in it. This method of heating was introduced in some of the 1949 apartment developments.

Architects cooperate with builders in providing the type of housing which minimizes heating problems through proper installation and the selection of construction material.

Cost of Insulating Home Comes Back in Savings

WHEN it comes to insulating a gas-heated home, the pleasure is all yours.

That's what the president of a Washington insulation firm says, and what he means is that if it's your home, your heating bill may be as much as 40 percent less next winter.

The official is E. C. Hearn, head of an insulation and improvement company at 928 5th st. nw. His company is distributor of Johns-Manville rock wool insulation in this area.

According to Hearn, gas heating experts advise home owners to insulate their dwellings in order to provide full efficiency for the equipment and the lowest operating expense.

If an owner plans on installing a $300 gas heating unit in his home, the heating expert suggests that he buy a $250 unit instead—provided the difference in output of heat is made up by having the house insulated.

When rock wool is put over top floor ceilings and in outside frame wall areas it practically eliminates the loss of heat by convection, conduction, and radiation in those areas, Hearn explains.

Gas heat and rockwool, according to the insulation man, make for the comfort and health of home owners. Gas heat, he points out, is always ready for service—no worry about empty tanks or bins. It gives maximum heat to the furnace a few seconds after the thermostat pushes it into action.

As heat is transferred throughout the house, Hearn says, the rock wool insulation conserves it. Then, it enables the house to be more evenly heated. Drafts are fewer, ceilings and floors are warmer.

Getting back to possible savings: In an average two-story row house where the cost of gas heat may be $100 without insulation, fuel money saved by installing rock wool over the ceiling will be $20 to $30 a year and will pay for the cost of the insulation in three to four years."

Taking it farther, Hearn says: "In large frame homes, where the gas heating cost may be $200 without insulation, the savings with complete insulation in walls and ceilings can be as much as $60 to $80 a year. Insulation cost will be paid for in approximately five to ten years."

Organized in 1858

First natural gas corporation in this country was the Fredonia Gas Light and Water Works Co., organized in 1858. In 1873, Titusville was supplied with gas through a 2-inch iron pipe, five miles long.

Color for Copper

The popular new copper color can be obtained by mixing a chrome yellow paint or enamel with a small quantity of burnt sienna color-in-oil.●

It Pays to Be Honest With the Thermostat

THE house doesn't heat up any faster if the thermostat is set at a higher temperature than is actually desired, the Washington Gas Light Co. advises. The company has published a booklet on economy which says:

"The temperature at which most of us are comfortable in winter months is around 70 degrees. Try to leave your thermostat set at that temperature except at night after retiring, when it should be turned down to 60 degrees. If you desire at any time during the heating season to air out your house, turn the thermostat down to 50 degrees while this is being done. Setting the thermostat up will increase your cost about 3 percent for each degree above 70."

The booklet adds:

"Always close fireplace dampers when fireplaces are not in use. One of the biggest wasters of heat in the home is the undampered fireplace. When the fireplace is not in use the chimney becomes a perfect air shaft and causes an abnormal circulation of cold air. This is particularly evident when the weather is windy. When the fireplace is left open in windy weather, you will notice that the room is drafty. The installation of simple dampers in your fireplaces will have a decidedly beneficial effect upon your fuel bill."

The company recommends storm windows and doors. Warm air is lost through loose openings. In addition, the winter winds force a large amount of cold air into the house. This waste can be stopped by the application of good storm windows and doors. A good grade of metal weather stripping is also of great help in this regard. Nothing will reap more dividends in comfort and heating economy than the application of these types of weather-proofing. This suggestion does not apply to the openings to the furnace room, since an adequate supply of outside air is essential at all times for proper operation of the heating unit regardless of fuel used.

Insulation of top floor ceiling or roof area is highly recommended because warm air rises inside the house. Insulation is simple and one of the wisest of investments. In winter it makes the upstairs warmer and in summer it protects your home against the heat of the sun, making for a cooler, livable second floor.

If your garage is attached to your home, heating dollars can be saved by keeping the garage doors closed as much as possible. Remember that the partitions between the garage and the other rooms are not always constructed to withstand outdoor temperatures. Such rooms should be insulated in the event that the garage is not heated.

Note: Never leave motor running with garage doors closed.

Network Is Vast

A network of long-distance transmission pipe lines carries natural gas from its origin in 22 States to consumers in 34 States and the District of Columbia. This vast underground system now totals 251,330 miles. It is 17,000 miles longer than main railroad tracks; it exceeds the Nation's oil pipe lines by 100,000 miles. Another 15,000 miles of natural gas lines are awaiting approval by the Federal Power Commission, and may be built as rapidly as steel supplies permit.

11,300,000 Home Users

In 1948, the natural gas industry of the United States served directly some 11,300,000 homes; 850,000 commercial establishments; 45,000 industrial plants. These customers received straight natural gas.

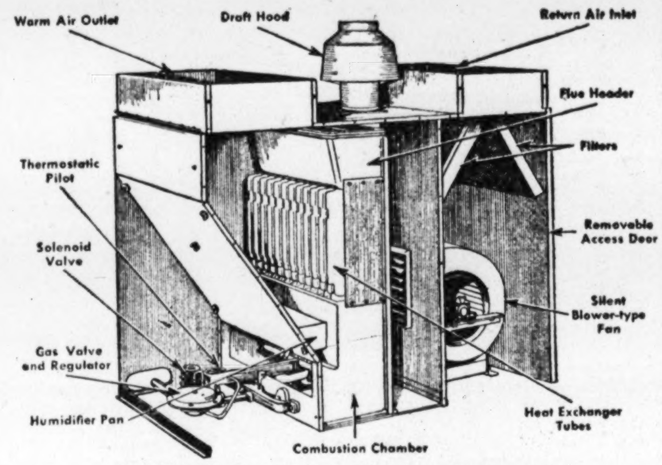
Compact Heating Unit Leaves Room for Play



Sectional view of typical warm air furnace

WHAT is the first step in turning the basement into a recreation room?

To a man who has been in a lot of basements, that's an easy one. The answer, John P. Leavitt says, is to make sure the basement is large enough for conversion purposes—and if it isn't make it large enough.

Leavitt, who represents the Bryant Gas Equipment Corp. at 828 Evarts st. ne., goes along for the ride every now and then when they head out to install a new heating plant in somebody's home.

During the course of his busman's holiday, Leavitt reports, home owners generally come up with an observation along this line:

"Now can we make a game room out of it."

"It," of course, is the basement, and if the owner hasn't planned already to turn the old hole in the ground into a spotless recreation room, he gets the idea after the heating equipment is installed.

The reason is, Leavitt says, that the equipment is so small it's like adding another room to the basement in many instances.

He says take the coal bin, for instance. It displaces a lot of space—space that is wasted many months of the year. With gas heating, the coal bin can be ripped out and the area turned over to year 'round use.

That's no less true, Leavitt avows, of the bulky coal furnace, and those head-cracking pipes. He says it's possible to add up to one-third more space in a basement by converting to gas heat—or by putting it in in the first place.

As a basement habitue, Leavitt says the compact heating equipment and hot water boiler give "pride of ownership" to persons who have it installed. He's seen it happen "time and time again." It amounts to trading the house's worst looking area for a small, neat, clean furnace and additional space for any purpose.

In the average row house, the equipment will take up less than half the space used by other types of heating, Leavitt says. A unit 16 inches wide, 32 inches high and 30 inches long will do the trick, he reports.

Town Lighted Up

In 1821 at Fredonia, N. Y., the first gas well in this country was drilled to a depth of 27 feet. Four yars later, gas from this well lighted the town.

Known to Chinese

A thousand years ago, the Chinese obtained natural gas from wells 2000 feet deep, transmitted it through bamboo pipes and used it to evaporate brine in salt-making.

Small in Proportion

Of three million square miles surface area in this vast country, less than 20,000 cover natural gas fields.

CONSTRUCTION FEATURES of Columbia Gas-Fired Winter Air Conditioning Units

1 LOW RESISTANCE to air flow is obtained by the streamlined design of the primary heating surfaces, resulting in less electricity being used by blower motor.

2 LOW STACK TEMPERATURE is obtained by ample secondary heating surfaces and proper baffling of hot gases. Less heat wasted up the chimney.

3 HIGH EFFICIENCY in fuel consumption is obtained by using a proven and tested type of gas burner especially designed to fit the unit on which it is used. It has a fixed secondary air adjustment and requires no adjustment in the field.

4 HIGH CO$_2$ is obtained by using a patented burner head designed especially to obtain a hot and thorough mixture of air and gas quickly after starting. This means fuel saving on those short runs in mild weather.

5 SAFE OPERATION can be depended on as the entire equipment including controls has been approved by AGA and meets all their safety requirements.

6 QUIET OPERATION free from vibration is obtained by an oversized blower placed on rubber mounts. Blower and motor bearings are further suspended in rubber mounts and the blower is protected from contact with the casing by felt insulating strips.

7 CLEAN OPERATION is obtained by an efficient filter that removes dust and other dirt from all air passed through the system.

8 SMOOTH OPERATION is obtained by ample supply and return openings which do not allow for choking the air before it enters the duct system and causing high velocities and noise.

9 BEAUTY in appearance is obtained by a two-toned baked-on Wrinkle Enamel in blue-gray and black with chrome trim.

10 ACCESSIBILITY to all parts is made possible by the design of the burner in the rear. This allows for easy service at low cost.

New Unit Sneers at Weatherman

ONE central unit to provide both summer cooling and winter heating is now offered by Servel all-year air conditioning With this gas-operated system, it is possible to have automatic control of temperature and humidity throughout the year.

In the changeable weather of late spring and early fall, performance can be made to alternate automatically between the summer cycle and the winter cycle. With the thermostat set at 70 degrees, this unit keeps the house at that temperature regardless of whether the outside temperature goes down to 50 or up to 90.

The method used by Servel for summer cooling is basically the same as that used in the Servel gas refrigerator. For winter heating, use is made of the forced warm-air method which has largely replaced hot-water systems in this area.

The same ducts and other distribution equipment are used for both cooling and heating operations. The air is thoroughly filtered and the moisture content properly regulated in proportion to the temperature change required. When neither heating nor cooling is desired, selective air circulation alone is bad.

The only "machinery" in the whole system is the fan which keeps the air stream moving. A generator-absorber combination is substituted for the compressor found in mechanical refrigeration units. The refrigerant, water, in conjunction with the absorbant, a common salt, is actuated by low-pressure steam to cool the circulated air.

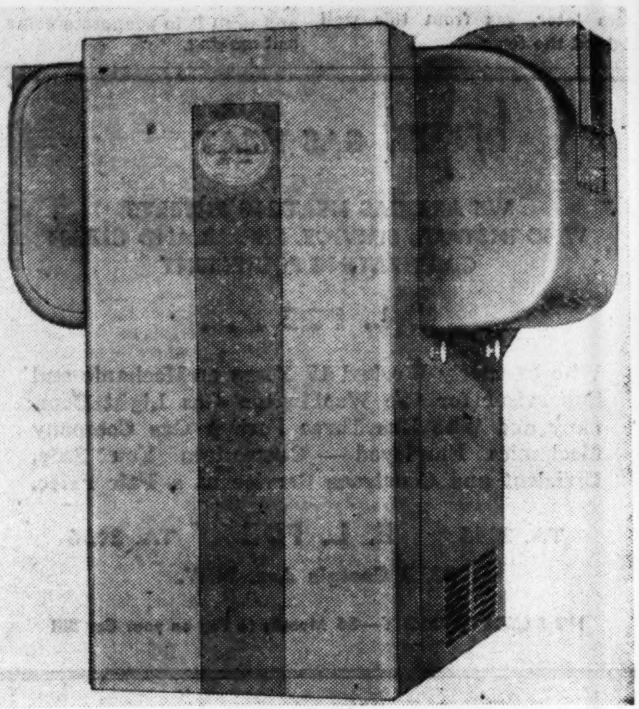
Installation costs for new structures can be partially offset by savings on other items. In a home with a Servel conditioner, for example, window screens serve no usful purpose, fresh air being circulated through the air conditioner, not through open windows. And since windows need never be opened, many modern homebuilders are installing the fixed-sash type which, in addition to being less expensive, are impervious to drafts and dust.

Even more marked economy—and often improvement in appearance—can be effected by eliminating the screened porch, which loses its importance when the temperature inside the house constantly remains more comfortable.

Summer months operating costs are reported to average about one half the cost of heating the house in winter.

While new construction offers an ideal opportunity for Servel all-year air conditioning provisions, installations can easily be made in most existing structures equipped with ducts for the warm-air type of heating.

The Washington Gas Light Co. announces that complete inspection and engineering service is available to anyone wishing information on this Servel system.



In this Servel All-Year Conditioner one gas unit provides heating for winter and cooling for summer

Full Line of Gas Heating Equipment at Home Show

GAS heating applicances are a major item of display equipment at the Home Show at the D. C. National Guard Armory. Expressing gratification at the emphasis accorded such equipment, Executive Director James W. Pearson of the Washington Builders Association, sponsors of the show, states the heating system of a home is second only to the importance of its being structurally sound.

Several interesting exhibits of the Washington Gas Light Co. show the full line of gas heating equipment, including boilers for hot water or steam systems, forced warm air units for winter air conditioning systems and central units for providing both summer and winter air conditioning—as well as conversion burners adaptable for use in existing installations.

In addition to the gas company exhibit, several prominent manufacturers of gas-fired heating equipment and their local distributors have educational displays of their lines, showing interesting applications to the various new construction requirements of this section.

The gas company's exhibit area, in addition to an arresting display of heating equipment, contains an array of the latest models of automatic gas-water heaters, modern gas ranges, gas clothes driers and the year-round gas air conditioner.

Trained attendants are on duty throughout home show hours to demonstrate the equipment in a colorful setting of simulated basements and modern kitchens, the latter replete with the latest in cabinet installations.

One of the display kitchens, a $1000 Lesco natural wood cabinet installation, will be given free in a "homemakers' sweepstake." Other prizes include four 1950 Ford cars and several thousand dollars worth of furniture and household appliances.

Turn Off the Heat In Unused Room

IF ANY rooms in your house are not in use in the winter, turn off the heat in those rooms and keep the doors closed. If there is a wide crack at the bottom of the door, put on a piece on weatherstripping.

Open outside doors as seldom as possible and close them promptly. If an outside door opens directly into the living quarters, it might be possible to avoid using that door during the most severe weather and keep it closed, with a small rug close to the door to cover the crack at the bottom.

At night when bedroom windows are opened, turn off the heat in the bedroom and close the door. Check the fires so that the temperature in the remainder of the house drops no more than ten degrees.

Heat the garage only enough to prevent freezing.

Survey Determines Figure

'Heat Loss' Is the Key To Size of the Furnace

GAS-HEATING installation information is available through numerous registered plumbers and heating contractors in the District area, as well as the Washington Gas Light Co.

First step is a survey of the premises to determine heating requirements. These are based on the size of the house and details of its construction. The result of many measurements and calculations—using well-established factors—is the heat loss expressed in BTUs per hour, which allow for the difference between an indoor temperature of 70 and an outdoors temperature of zero. In the case of a hot-water heating system, a simple formula reduces "heat loss" to required square feet of radiation.

The size of the heating unit needed is easily ascertained from the amount of radiation required. For houses with existing radiation, it is a common practice also to take into account the amount of such installed radiation. An average is then arrived at between the "required radiation" and the "installed radiation," and it is this "allowable average" which is the basis for the size of the heating unit. In the case of forced warm air, the square feet of radiation—required or otherwise—are ignored and the furnace size is determined directly on the basis of the heating loss in BUTs per hour.

The matter of fixing the size of any type of heater is merely one of insuring that its output of BTUs will be equal to the heat loss in BTUs of the place to be heated.

When the size of the heating unit needed is determined, the prospective customer is given a quotation which includes the equipment and its installation. Payment is usually arranged for an extended period—up to 36 months—often with no initial payment being required. These monthly payments can be included with the gas bill, even though the installation was not made by the gas company, provided the registered plumber or heating contractor is a participant in a cooperative financing plan.

The same heat-loss information used for determining equipment size is also employed in estimating fuel consumption. Such estimates are predicated on a 20-year average of weather conditions in the area, and they provide for a day temperature of 70 degrees and a night temperatures of 60.

Plumbers Offer Economy Tips

A SPRING PROGRAM to help home owners save on fuel dollars while prolonging the life of heating systems has been advanced by the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

1. Developing an elementary understanding of the heating system, its operation and maintenance.
2. Posting an explanatory chart of manual on operation and maintenance on the wall near the equipment.
3. Conducting regular inspections of the heating equipment.
4. Attending to minor repairs promptly so they will not turn into major replacements.
5. Adopting new appliances as they become available to save fuel and improve the system's efficiency.

Sort of Grew Up Together

Gas Co. and Monument Are Kin

THE Washington Gas Light Co. was one of the first metropolitan utilities on the Eastern Seaboard to convert its customers to natural gas. The change-over here was completed as the local company was rounding out 100 years of service to the Nation's Capital.

This institution is the oldest utility chartered by Congress. It was brought into being in 1848—year of the Washington Monument cornerstone laying. For the first years of its existence, the Washington Gas Light Co. relied solely on revenue from public building and street lighting. Service was extended to the public in 1851 when oil lamps and candles in homes and business places began to be replaced by the new illuminating gas. First application of gas for cooking was at Willard's original hotel, the National, in 1856.

As Washington grew, the gas company acquired new properties and expanded its facilities to provide the more modern applications of gas to homes, industry and Government establishments.

Growth of the company has been most marked in the last 10 years. In that period, meter installations increased more than 46 per cent. The present company, together with its suburban subsidiaries, the Washington Gas Light Co. of Maryland, Inc., and the Rosslyn Gas Co., now supplies service to more than 320,000 users.

Its property, plant and equipment are valued in excess of 60 million dollars, a gain of better than 100 per cent in the last ten years.

Gross revenues, showing a 10 year gain of 113 per cent in 1949, are now at the rate of more than 20 million dollars a year. In 1949 alone, more than two million dollars in taxes were paid by the company. With average basic pay of all employes having more than doubled since 1939, total operating and construction salaries in 1949 amounted to $8,140,000.

Investors in the company have been paid dividends for each year since 1852—a record exceeded by only one other issue of common stock listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

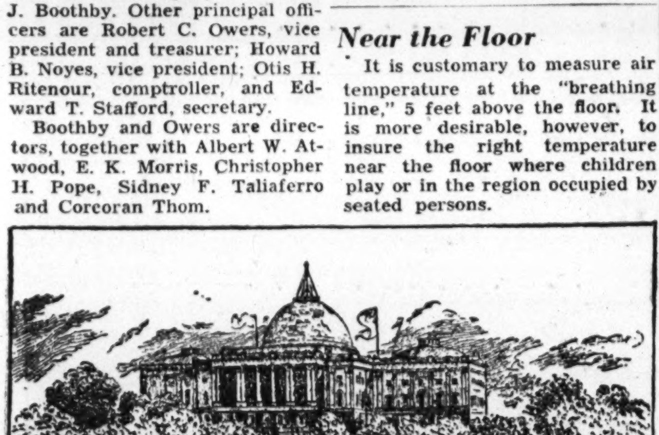
The Washington Gas Light Co. is now owned by 8555 stockholders, 61 per cent of whom are located in the area served by the company and its subsidiaries. Many are among the company's 2250 employes.

Women constitute the largest single group, owning 39 per cent of the outstanding shares. The largest single shareholder has less than 2 per cent of the company stock, and 73 per cent of all stockholders own less than 100 shares each.

Headquarters of the Washington Gas Light Co. are now located in one of the city's most modern office buildings at Eleventh and H sts. nw. President of the company is Everett J. Boothby. Other principal officers are Robert C. Owers, vice president and treasurer; Howard B. Noyes, vice president; Otis H. Ritenour, comptroller, and Edward T. Stafford, secretary.

Boothby and Owers are directors, together with Albert W. Atwood, E. K. Morris, Christopher H. Pope, Sidney F. Taliaferro and Corcoran Thom.

Headquarters of the Washington Gas Light Co. at 11th and H sts. This modern structure was completed in 1942



One of the earliest applications of gas in Washington was in 1847, when it was used to light a beacon on an 80-foot mast atop the Capitol dome. Visible for several miles, it is said to have lighted the entire Capitol grounds

To Cut Heat Losses, Look To the Doors and Windows

DOORS and windows are the most vulnerable part of the house from the standpoint of heat losses. The use of storm windows and doors may produce fuel savings of 20 to 30 percent when the outdor temperature is zero.

The percentage of fuel saved by these means in any particular house depends on the kind of wall construction, the relative extent of window and door area and the size and type of house, and will be proportionately less in milder weather. The storm sash must be tight-fitting to be fully effective.

Storm windows and doors add to the comfort of people sitting in the room. The downward drafts of cold air usually present at unprotected windows are reduced. The infiltration of cold air is cut down so that the temperature in the region of the floor is increased. The inside surfaces of window panes and doors are warmer, too.

Storm windows and doors also reduce the troubles of housekeeping. The dirt and soot which otherwise sift through the window cracks are practically eliminated. Furniture joints stay together because higher indoor relative humidity may be maintained without causing water to condense on the window panes. Either weather stripping or duplex glass panes may be used satisfactorily, although neither of these used alone will be equally as effective as storm sash.

Near the Floor

It is customary to measure air temperature at the "breathing line," 5 feet above the floor. It is more desirable, however, to insure the right temperature near the floor where children play or in the region occupied by seated persons.

Heaters of Varying Sizes Keep You in Hot Water

JUST AS LONG as grandma's memory is the list of housekeeping boons science has come up with in recent years to ease the job of being a homemaker.

There is the automatic clothes washer, for instance, to make Monday morning a cinch. And the automatic dishwasher, easy winner over those forbidding stacks of dishes. And the garbage disposal unit, and . . .

When grandma spots any one of these, or countless others, she's likely to hearken back to the days when hot water generally had to be heated on a range and then hand-carried to its destination.

Those were the days, all right. But in these days, what with the automatic dishwasher, clothes washer, and all the rest, what is called for is more hot water.

For small families, a gas-fired water heater is available with a storage rating of 20 gallons—enough to take care of below-average hot-water demands and a limited amount of laundering.

For average-size families—three or four persons—the home water heater should have a storage rating of from 30 to 50 gallons. Families with four to six members will get best results with a water heater of more than 50-gallon capacity.

As an indication of hot water requirements, if your home has more than one bathroom, a 50-gallon heater is essential. Or, if your weekly laundry is enough to make up three successive loads in an automatic washer, a 50-gallon water heater is necessary.

Manufacturers now rate their water heaters on performance as well as storage capacity. This means that a 30-gallon tank with a temperature setting of 180 degrees will provide more hot water than a 30-gallon heater set at 160 degrees.

Other features, such as rustproof tanks and automatic gas shut-offs enhance the safe smooth operation of compact, gas-fired water heaters.

$1,500,000 Plan Failed

In 1870 a free-burning well at Bloomfield, N. Y., was extinguished and connected to a 25-mile pipe line, made of white pine logs bored with an 8-inch hole. In 1872, this gas was turned into the mains of the Rochester Gas Co., but the $1,500,000 venture soon failed.

People like you ... like Wheaties!

I've heard tell that only about 2% of all the wheat grown in the United States meets the high requirements set up for Wheaties.

Seems like those Wheaties we get now are fresher, crisper and better tasting than ever.

From Maine to California—people are eating Wheaties! Baseball players. Home makers. Farmers. Insurance salesmen. Auto mechanics. Great grandparents and toddlers, too.

Yes, Wheaties are the whole wheat flakes America likes best. More families eat Wheaties than any other whole wheat cereal!

How about you? Have you had your Wheaties today?

Everybody knows how nourishing whole wheat is. Glad my family gets good whole wheat nourishment from Wheaties.

"Wheaties" and "Breakfast of Champions" are registered trade marks of General Mills, Inc.

"My idea of a swell-tasting breakfast dish is Wheaties with lots of milk and sliced bananas," says Vern Stephens, famous Boston Red Sox slugger. A Wheaties eater for 12 years, Vern hit 39 homers last season—batted in 159 runs!

GENE SARAZEN: he couldn't believe what he'd done . . .

My Happiest Day!

Gene Sarazen tells about his 'miracle shot'

In 1935, Gene Sarazen made what is generally thought to have been the most spectacular play in the history of golf. Sarazen, who has just published his autobiography, "Thirty Years of Championship Golf," describes for PARADE that day—the happiest in his life.

By GENE SARAZEN

AS THE FINAL DAY'S PLAY in the 1935 Masters Tournament at Augusta began, I was trailing Craig Wood by three strokes. At about 5:30 P.M., I was approaching the 485-yard 69th hole when an ear-splitting roar erupted from the gallery jammed around the final green to watch Wood finish. Craig had holed a birdie three on the 72nd for a total of 282. And as I teed off I could see the photographers snapping pictures of the happy winner.

I did some calculating. I was two strokes off with four holes to go but I figured I still had a chance. I hit a 250-yard drive down the fairway. Then I took a stance with my four-wood and rode into the second shot with every ounce of strength I could muster.

The split second I hit the ball I knew it was good. It tore for the flag at a very low trajectory, no more than 30 feet in the air. Running forward to watch its flight, I saw the ball land on the green, still dead in line. I saw it hop straight for the cup and then, while I was straining to see how close it was, the gallery behind the green let out a terrific shout and began to jump wildly in the air. I knew then that the ball had gone in—for a three-under-par double eagle.

I parred the next three holes, tied Wood and beat him next day in a playoff. But that double-eagle really won the tournament for me. The day that I hit it was the happiest day of my life.

Has made a reservation for the first Interplanetary Tours. Please present at Hayden Planetarium when announcement of flights is made

Moon explorers prepare for return to earth. Ship landed on tail, is in firing position.

Astronomers offer space ship reservations—and 10,000 customers get in line!

By KARL KOHRS

THE HARASSED young woman at the reservation desk was doing her best to accept applications and answer a dozen questions at once: "When does the first ship leave for Mars?" "In case I change my mind, do I still have to go to the moon if I sign up now?" "What's the gravitational pull on Jupiter?" "Will the rocket company provide space suits?"

This is the kind of bargain-basement rush that has resulted since the famous Hayden Planetarium in New York, run by astronomers of the American Museum of Natural History, recently set up the first reservation desk for interplanetary travel. To make it official, the Planetarium has announced it will place the reservations in a permanent file—for the next 50 or 100 years, if necessary—and will turn them over to the first organized interplanetary service.

What started out as an amusing stunt to promote the Planetarium's solar show, "Conquest of Space," has snowballed into a man-sized travel-booking job. (You can make your own reservations by filling out the form on the opposite page. Your name will be carefully listed, but don't expect a reply – for some years yet!)

Applications Are Still Pouring In

THE RUSH CONTINUES. In four weeks, more than 10,000 children and grown-ups made bona fide reservations for the Moon, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The hard-working Planetarium staff was swamped. Applications averaged 300 a day, with about one out of every three signed by an adult. And they're still coming in.

Nobody knows what the trip will cost, and nobody is worrying about that—now.

During those first four weeks "Conquest of Space" gave applicants a preview of the ride. With the help of the Planetarium's projector, it took visitors on a 2,500,000,000-mile non-stop tour in 45 minutes—a trip that would normally take 10 years traveling at 25,000 miles an hour.

Now that the idea has been launched the Planetarium is giving it the works. There are formal reservation forms and schedules (see facsimiles). There are flamboyant travel posters the Moon and Mars!

advertising stop-over solar cruises. There is a flight bulletin board announcing: "Flight No. RM-1; Ship: Lunaria; Destin.–Moon; Lv–0800 EST; Arr–1730 EST; Flight No. RS-1; Ship: Saturnia; Destin.–Saturn; Lv–Apr. 1, 1975; Arr–Feb. 1, 1979; Remarks: Delay, probably 2-7 days, meteor showers."

Letters poured in. An aircraft pilot in South Africa wrote for "a reservation on a space ship immediately–destination immaterial."

A New York fur broker has written that he is interested now in investigating fur-trapping rights for other planets.

From Copenhagen, a tourist bureau wrote: "Please inform us about taking over a planetary tourist agency. We are interested, even if the present news is ahead of reality."

No Gamblers Allowed?

THIS COMES from a man in Arlington, Va.: "Please let me know how much room there is on the ship. On a recent voyage across the Pacific, I traveled in a small stateroom with three other fellows. By the time I landed in San Francisco, those poker players had all my money. I do hope poker playing will not be allowed on this voyage."

A man in West Virginia wrote: "I have been a moon maniac for many years. The trip would be a realization of my greatest wish."

From Ft. Wayne, Ind., came a letter written in a childish scrawl: "Please reserve a seat. If I am not alive when the ship leaves, I shall assign one of my relatives. But I should be alive if you make it before 2000."

And the following has been received from a woman in New York: "Change my reservations for trips to all the planets to one for Mars only. When you send the refund for the cancelled tours, send it in interplanetary currency."

Planetarium officials stress that "Conquest of Space" is not an exaggerated science fiction fantasy. It was designed to present facts of space travel as astronomers now know them.

What the "preview travelers" saw during the "Conquest of Space" Show made them gasp. The Planetarium dome slowly darkened.

"We take you now to the rocket station," said the lecturer, "where we will board the ship."

A rocket in firing position flashed to life on the wall of the auditorium. Then voices boomed: "Alert firing crew . : . stand by for time-beat . . . Five–four–three–two–one–Zero. Rocket away!"

There was a blinding flash of light and the rocket went screeching into the sky.

"We are now out in space," the lecturer intoned, "and will soon approach the moon."

The projected image of the moon, rapidly enlarged from normal size to a dazzling globe 20 feet in diameter, gave so perfect an illusion of nearness that several youngsters whimpered.

Space travelers, now only 150 miles off the moon, looked at the rocky craters through an "electronic televiewer."

From the moon, the rocket ship turned toward Mars, then Jupiter and finally Saturn, 1,333 days and 790,000,000 miles from the earth.

Escape from Warfare?

ON THE WAY BACK to Earth, the Planetarium lecturer told his dazed audience: "Having explored the planets, man some day might want to explore the stars. But that would be difficult.

"If his space ship traveled at 186,000 miles a second–the speed of light–it would take him four and one-third years to reach the nearest star."

What impresses officials about their offer is the public's acceptance of rocket travel as something that is going to be real.

"It's the public's faith in gadgets," commented Frank Forrester, Planetarium meteorologist.

"As usual, Americans believe gadgets will get them there. But it's also a mass demonstration of escape psychology. With atomic warfare on their minds, people want to get away from this planet fast, even if it means going to Jupiter. As is usual with escapists, they don't realize that they'll take their problems with them."

Summing up the prospects for space travel, Robert R. Coles, associate curator of the Planetarium says: "Landing on the moon may happen within our present century.

"The first step, of course, would be an unmanned rocket, then an unmanned satellite rocket, which would go around the earth on its own orbit. Then would follow a manned satellite, and eventually a manned rocket to the moon. A trip to the planets is a space problem of another sort. Going to the moon is like walking across the street. In comparison, going to Mars would be like walking from New York to Tokyo."

SPACE FANS of tomorrow jam reservation desk at Hayden Planetarium, sign up for 2,500,000,000-mile tour.

Where and why they want to go:

W. C. O'Brien, New York: "I chose the moon. (I prefer a local to an express!) My seven kids signed up for the more distant planets. I believe we'll have space travel in about 15 years. I think we're ready now, except for the return trip."

Beatrice Brittingham, Washington, D. C.: "I would like to visit Mars. I think the idea of space travel is wonderful because it expands the mind beyond petty problems. Once we get the feeling of space, perhaps we can do away with war."

Lynn Burch, 16, New York: "I signed up to go to the moon and Mars. Mars is more interesting because there might be life there. The way rockets are being developed now, I think we might go in 35 years. I'd like to be the first."

Helen Bass, Cranford, N.J., (with Harrison Huster, 10, and Richard Babinec, 9): "No, I'm not signing up, because it would be too hard to decide where to go. Harrison says he's not interested in going, either, but Richard says he wants to visit Mars."

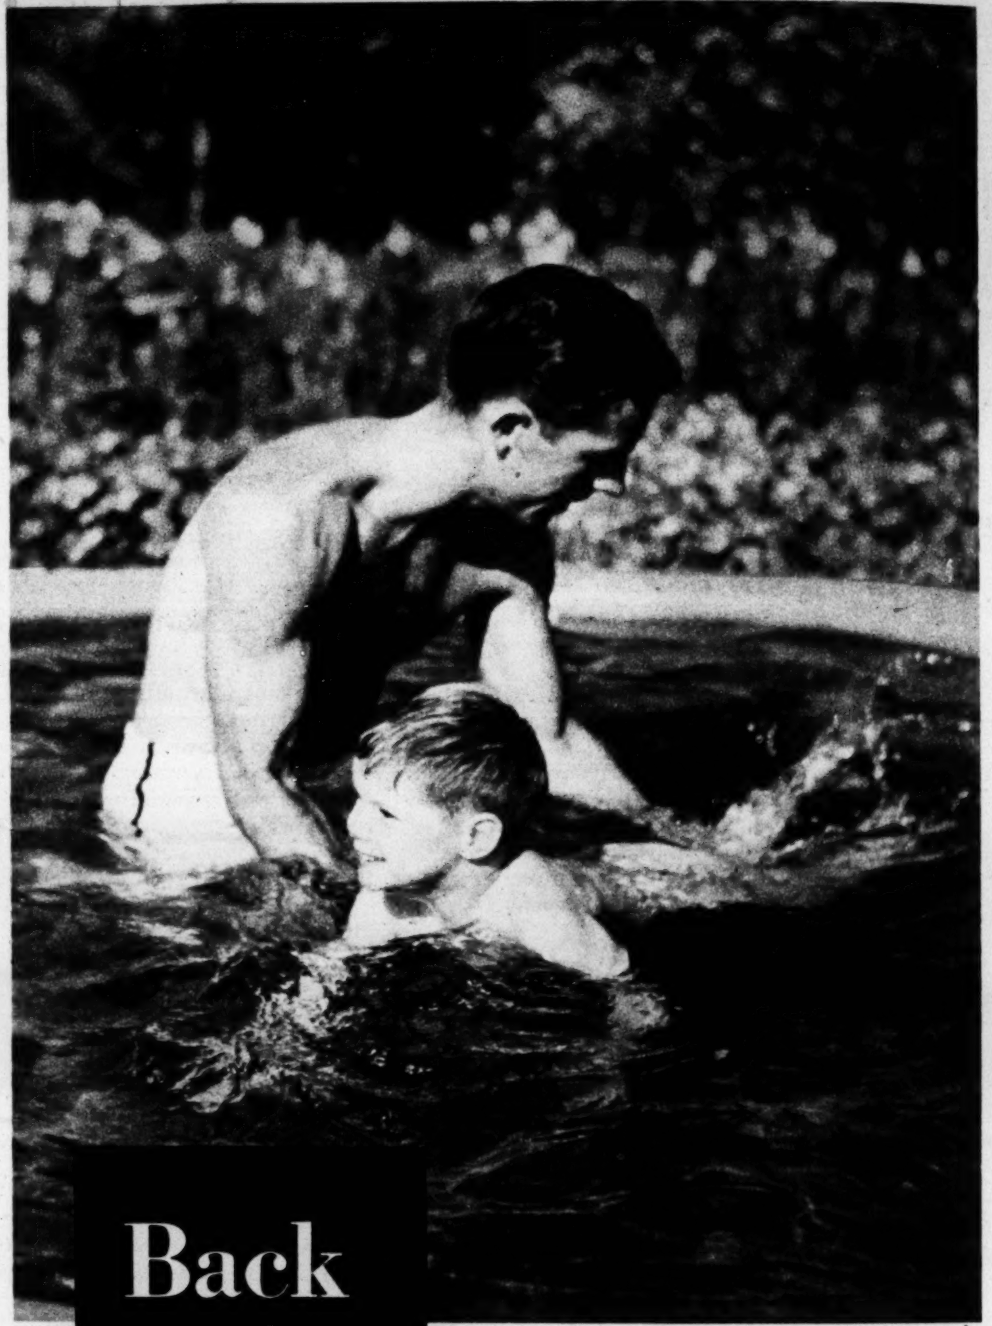
Who's Got a Chance to Outdo Ruth?

The 1950 baseball season may offer the biggest attraction in sport: a slugger who goes the immortal Babe Ruth one better, and hits more than 60 homers in a season. There are at least six hitters who could qualify. Read about them in PARADE next week.



Back Yard Lakes

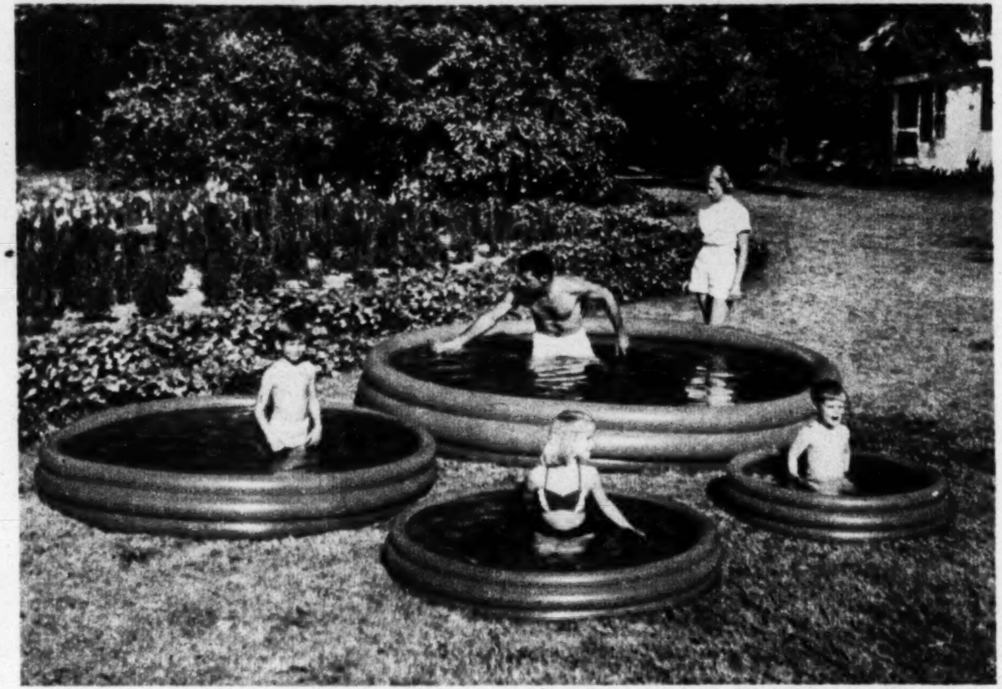
Plastic pools are getting bigger and bigger. Latest will hold a family.

"DEAR, GO OUT and blow up the lake," may be a wifely command this summer. Inflatable lawn swimming pools have grown in four years from only 3⅓ to nine feet across. This year's newest pool, largest yet marketed, is 20 inches deep. It is shown in the photograph above.

Called a "Family Lake," this 700-gallon pool of soft, tough Vinylite plastic, can be set up anywhere, including indoors, that Dad can reach with the garden hose and a bicycle pump. Once up, and filled, it can stay in position with nothing but a little daily addition of air and water. It costs $60.

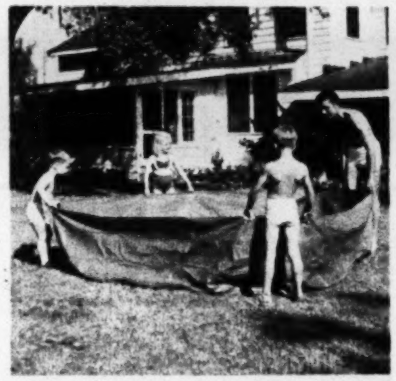
Smaller pools (see photo at top right) cost from $9-$22. And even larger ones than the big "Family Lake" may be in the offing.

(Editor's note: see also PARADE's report, July 17, '49, on concrete pools for the family at $250 and up.)

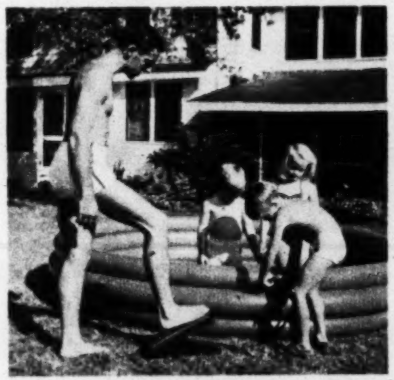


PRIVATE pools for your lawn range from the "Family Lake" down to one 3⅓ feet wide and 9 inches deep. Smallest costs $9, can be pumped up in 5 minutes. Water stays for days.

Here's how you set up—and empty—your pool:



STEP #1: Uninflated pool is unrolled from package, spread out in circle where convenient. Bottom is built-in.



STEP #2: Foot-operated auto pump or any other type inflates one ring at a time. Garden hose fills it in minutes.

STEP #3: To empty pool, child steps on the rim, water spills out. Tough 12-gauge plastic takes hard usage.

Bayer Aspirin
Is Ready To Go
To Work!

MAKE THIS TEST!

To actually see how fast it's ready to go to work, drop a Bayer Aspirin in a glass of water and time its disintegrating speed. What happens in the glass, happens in your stomach.

When you want really fast relief from ordinary headache, neuritic or neuralgic pain, use genuine Bayer Aspirin. It brings you relief with amazing speed because it starts disintegrating almost instantly you take it. Timed by stopwatch, it's actually ready to go to work in two seconds.

But fast relief isn't the only reason why it pays to use Bayer Aspirin. Also important is the fact that you can take it with complete confidence. For Bayer Aspirin's single active ingredient is not only so effective that doctors regularly prescribe it for pain relief, but is so gentle to the system mothers give it even to small children on their doctors' advice.

So when you're in pain, don't experiment with drugs that have not been proved by years of successful use. For the fast relief you want—and the dependable relief that's important to your health—take Bayer Aspirin. And be sure to ask for it by the name "Bayer" when you buy.

*Because no other pain reliever can match its record of use by millions of normal people, without ill effect, one thing you can take with complete confidence is genuine

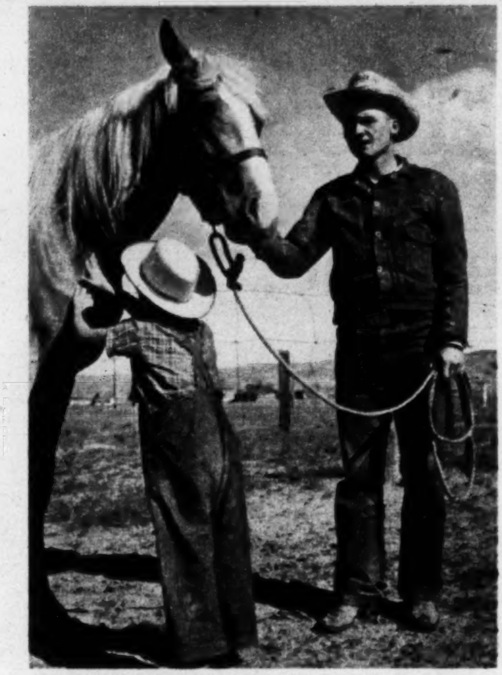
Donnie gets a pal (omino)



THANKS went to the colt's father as well as to his own for long-awaited "dream horse."

Donnie leads colt's mother, Rancher Hodgson's favorite cow pony, out to green grass.

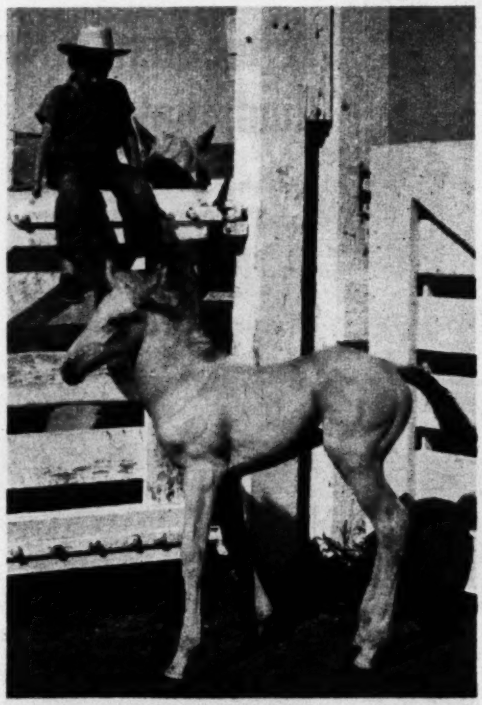
Small boy, small horse, face ranch life together

On THE endless ranchlands of Alberta, Canada, a man is never quite a man unless he owns a horse.

It was a simple truth born into the marrowbones of five-year-old Donnie Hodgson, who lives on a 1,000-acre Red Deer River ranch with 600 head of cattle and 15 horses, all owned by his father.

Donnie neared man's estate when his father's golden palomino saddle horse was mated to a black Arabian mare. Donnie was promised the expected colt when it was born.

Donnie sat on the whitewashed fence and waited. After weeks of waiting, the Arabian foaled a replica of the palomino. Donnie was a MAN.



LOST in wonder and admiration, Donnie sits on corral gate, gazes on new friend, Little Buck.

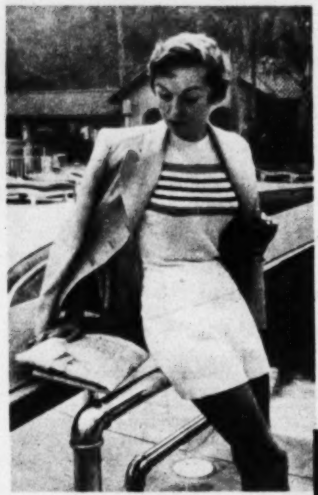
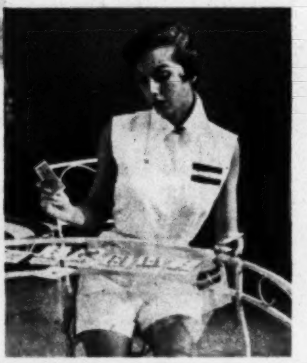
Mixmates

for this Summer

A fast-spreading, California-born idea gives a woman more sports clothes for less money!





Mix at Will

Here's one combination (above): jacket, $17.95; toile de lin shorts; tricot blouse, $8.95; all by Hollywood Premiere. Right: pique weskit and shorts, both designed by Joy Kingston, are about $10.00 each.

MIXMATES, as every mother and daughter knows, are clothes that (1) give you more to wear on the same style budget, and (2) keep fathers happy because they're not expensive.

The idea, which began in California several seasons ago, this year is booming to great popularity. You buy, say, five items: jacket, sweater, shorts, blouse and skirt. It's like drawing cards from a deck. The combinations you can make with the help of a few extra summer accessories are virtually endless.

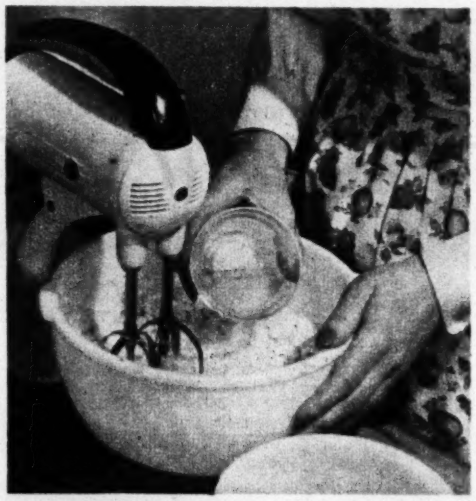
A delicate, fluffy cake, lavishly filled and frosted with fruit cocktail in whipped cream.

Here's a New Cake!



ADD 1 TEASPOON baking powder, 3 egg yolks, almond extract to package of white cake mix.

THIS NEW TRICK with cake mix makes two deep, fluffy nine-inch layers—a big cake for a festive occasion. Handsome, too, with its fruit and whipped cream topping. Save the syrup from the fruit; serve with ice, dry ginger ale and a dash of lime juice, in tall, frosty glasses.

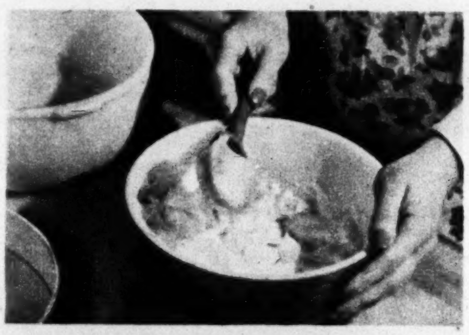
1 teaspoon baking powder
3 eggs, separated
1 teaspoon almond extract
⅔ cup water
Salad oil
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
½ pint heavy cream
1 No. 2 can fruit cocktail

Empty cake mix into bowl, stir in baking powder. Add egg yolks and almond extract; mix well. Measure water; add enough salad oil to fill cup to ¾ mark. Add ½ water-oil mixture to batter; stir to blend; beat 1 minute. Add remaining water-oil mixture; beat 1 minute longer. Beat egg whites in large bowl until frothy. Add cream of tartar; beat until very stiff. Add cake batter slowly to egg whites, mixing lightly until blended. Pour into 2 greased 9 inch layer cake pans. Bake in moderate oven, 350°F., 30 to 35 minutes. Cool. Whip cream. Drain cocktail. Fold fruit into whipped cream; fill and top cake.

NEXT, measure ⅔ cup water and add enough salad oil to fill cup to ¾ mark; add as directed.



BEAT 3 egg whites, cream of tartar, very stiff. Add cake batter slowly to beaten egg whites.

On the other hand, a Pittsburgh girl sued a bottling company because a bottle exploded in her hands. The accident, she claimed, impaired her marriageability. FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy . . . you feel weak, worn-out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

Nurses know the advantages of Tampax

Great numbers of these busy women use it themselves for comfort, medical soundness too

While in training, the young nurse becomes very familiar indeed with the medical principle of internal absorption. Tampax is made of long-fibered surgical cotton compressed in applicators for quick and dainty insertion.... Here are some of the advantages of internally-worn Tampax. It has no belts, pins or external pads. No chafing is possible. No odor can form. No bulges or edges can show even in the snuggest swim suit. May be worn in tub or shower. Changing is quick and disposal easy.... Tampax comes in 3 absorbencies—Regular, Super, Junior. Buy at drug or notion counter. An average month's supply slips into your purse. POLITE, patient, but hungry, high-man Mike, middle-man Jake and low-man Silver keep watch outside kitchen door.

Eyes Right...

A farmer left his ladder standing by the kitchen door . . . and came back later to find this fuzzy totem pole!

On his farm at Boonville, N. Y., photographer Tony Linck went looking for his ladder. But his cats, Mike, Jake and Silver, had found it first, standing in the warm sun by the kitchen door. Their eyes sprang to attention as someone rattled the knob, a sign they might be admitted to the warm, sweet-smelling kitchen.

MEDICAL DISCOVERY

A Germ-killer for Your Home

PARADE brings you the first report on a new antiseptic which has some remarkable qualities

By LAWRENCE GALTON

SOMETIME in the next two weeks you may be able to buy what promises to be one of the most useful antiseptics ever put in your medicine chest.

Its name is Bactine, and it is a powerful bacteria-killer. It looks like plain water and it doesn't stain. It's mildly anesthetic and will help stop some of the itching and burning of such things as rashes, sunburn, insect bites, poison ivy.

Moreover, researchers who developed it say it has been found to knock out fungi–including those that cause athlete's foot.

Rub it on your hands and it does more than kill bacteria and fungi already there. Researchers say it protects the skin against the germs for four hours or more. It can be used to clean dishes, clothing and bedding used by a sick member of the family. A mother with a sick child can disinfect her hands, not only after tending the child but for four hours to come.

Business Uses, Too

This long-lasting germicidal action is finding new and practical uses in such places as dentists' offices, barber shops, beauty parlors. One airline plans to have flight attendants use it on their hands before serving food. Germs on the hands of cooks and waiters are a serious health hazard everywhere; now the hazard can be reduced if Bactine is used as a hand lotion twice a day.

Bactine is the result of several years work at the Miles Research Laboratory in Elkhart, Indiana.

Four years ago, researchers began looking for a safe new family antiseptic. Since 1908, a group of substances known as quaternary ammonium compounds have been recognized as having antiseptic action. But little attention was paid to them until recently when new and more powerful members of the family were developed. Hyamine 10X, one of these, was found to have amazing qualities.

Put it under the powerful electron microscope and you can watch it literally "explode" germs.

It's also "surface active." That means it makes water wetter, penetrates the smallest cracks, even gets under surface skin layers. It lifts off dirt.

Tests with Athlete's Foot

The investigators went farther. They added a tiny amount of another synthetic detergent to Hyamine 10X to further strengthen its cleansing qualities.

Then they wondered: could they incorporate a fungus-killer, too? A remedy for athlete's foot?

A drug called chlorothymol finally seemed to fill the bill.

Then the investigators added camphor and menthol. But the big problem was to combine all these ingredients for maximum safety.

Tests soon showed that the formula killed a wide variety of bacteria. From the laboratories came

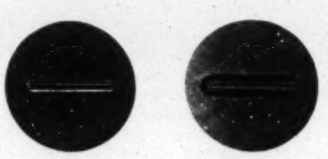

PLATE 1 PLATE 2

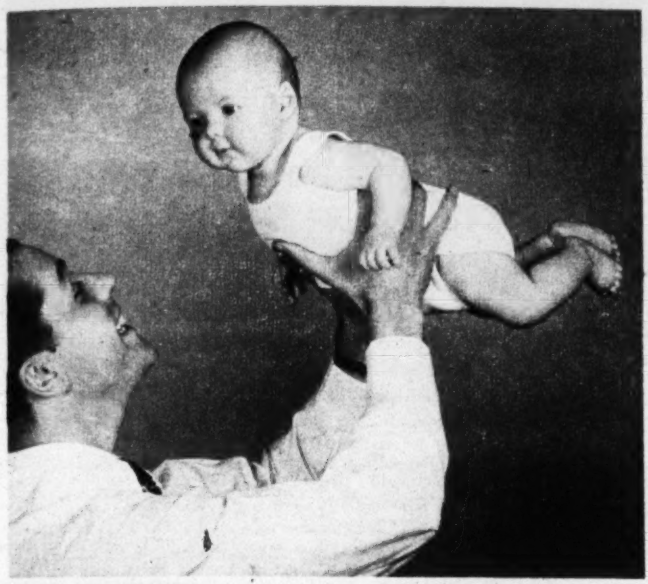
HOW BACTINE WORKS: Plate 1 shows alcohol-sterilized glass rod in thriving bacteria colony (specks). Plate 2: Bactine-sterilized rod is surrounded by germ-free strip.



NEW ANTISEPTIC protects hands for four hours, guards baby's health. It is useful, too, for sickroom workers.

reports indicating it hit germs among those responsible for blood and heart infections and even for such assorted ills as boils, carbuncles, strep sore throats, pneumonia, typhoid fever, urinary and kidney infections.

Many tests were made on human skin. Even when people deliberately soiled their hands with street slush and actual bacteria cultures, they proved to be uncontaminated four hours later.

Killing fungi is slower business than killing bacteria and a 100 percent kill in half an hour is considered good. Yet undiluted Bactine killed 13 of 14 fungi in five minutes. A dilution of three parts to one of water killed even the toughest fungus in 14 minutes.

Twenty-one patients with athlete's foot were treated daily, six days a week, with constant checking by microscopic examination. There were satisfactory results after four to 10 weeks' treatment, and no evidence of irritation remained.

Studies were made with animals to determine whether Bactine would be poisonous if accidentally swallowed. The tests suggested that several six-ounce bottles of Bactine would have to be consumed by a human before serious harm could result.

Other important uses for the preparation have been found:

It's a true deodorant. This means it destroys, and does not merely mask obnoxious odors. It's effective as a douche. It removes onion and garlic odors from hands. It eliminates odors from soiled diapers, rugs, mattresses.

It ends dog and cat odors.

May End Diaper-Boiling

For mothers who launder diapers, it promises to eliminate the need for boiling diapers. A four percent solution reduces living bacteria to the vanishing point on soiled diapers—bacteria that cause diaper rash. And since the diapers keep their antibacterial power after such a rinse, unpleasant diaper odors can be avoided.

Recently, the new preparation was distributed to several hundred families in two cities for trial use. Among enthusiastic reports was an all-out one from a woman. "It's very good for everything," she declared.

It's not good for everything, of course, but it does seem likely to be a valuable aid to you in guarding your family's health.

A Posse in Jeeps!

THROUGH THE BRAMBLES of mountain forest, two members of jeep posse accompany a town marshal in search for escaped convict.

By TOM MATHEWS

DROP THAT DERRINGER, Polecat Pete, and head for the hills! Better yet, stay out of the hills and give up entirely. For posses are on the trail again–this time in jeeps!

In Bountiful City, Utah, which has seen its share of gunplay in the past, civilians have formed a jeep posse, dedicated not only to law and order but also to fire control, rescue work and good neighborliness–and fun.

The posse functions entirely without pay. In four years it has fought fires in the hills, planted trees for the park department, raised funds for municipal charities, freed snowbound motorists from drifts, rescued treed children and pets, gunned for bobcat and bear and occasionally tracked down a lawbreaker through the mountain brush.

Excitement on the Job

Its members, who when off-duty earn their livings as physicians, merchants, ranchers, interior decorators and vacuum cleaner salesmen, all own their own jeeps.

Each man in the posse is a past master at the art of driving a car. He can drive across a late spring snow crust as thin as a hall mirror or through a mud flat as thick as a bowl of beef stew. Yet even these experts sometimes make a mistake

Answering alarm from Utah's Wasatch Mountains, jeep posse speeds up rough road.

Utah's Jeeps Can Climb Like Mountain Goats

When posseman Jim Burningham was tooling along in 18 inches of water on a sandbar he suddenly disappeared into 30 feet of brine. On another occasion Clive Calder missed a mountain turn, soared off the road in a flight through space, hit the ground, soared off again for 60 feet, and landed in a rock pile. "I was out cold for two hours," says Calder. But not even his jeep's windshield was cracked.

"You gotta have a car," says Merk Christensen, posse commander, "that can climb like a mountain goat."

The Case of the Stranded Sedan

Typical of the posse's rescue work was a call Christensen and his crew answered recently. Summoned to save a sedan stranded on a mountain ledge, the posse started up the steep wall of nearby Francis Peak. Halfway up Art Jolliffe's jeep crawled too far out on a slope and began to teeter. Jolliffe jumped out, grabbed the tailboard and with his 275 pounds as ballast, held it until help came.

Then the posse moved on, staked the stranded sedan with chains and hauled it down the mountain.

"In this outfit," says Christensen, "we believe that when anyone gets into trouble, you gotta help him out."

FIREFIGHTERS in posse are outfitted on jeep for fight on tinder blaze.

WHEN this plane pancaked on Great Salt Lake, jeep posse aided in rescue.

BULL SESSION in posse clubrooms traditionally follows every exploit.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES
by GEORGE WUNDER
LHASSA, HONEY, WHEN WE LEFT YOU AND BIG STOOP HOLDING HANDS A WHILE BACK, WE FIGURED YOU'D GET SPLICED—BUT HOW DOES HUBBY LIKE THE IDEA OF THE LITTLE WOMAN RUNNING AN UNDERGROUND GUERRILLA OUTFIT?
LHASSA IS LEADER OF HER MOUNTAIN PEOPLE. WHEN THEY FIGHT THE INVADING USURPER, IT IS RIGHT TO COMMAND THEM AS HER ANCESTORS DID WHEN THE OTHER CONQUERORS CAME.
ONCE IT WAS THE MONGOL KHANS, GENGHIS AND KUBLAI, WHO CRUSHED ALL BEFORE THEM. AFTER CAME THE DESERT TARTAR CALLED TAMERLANE WHO LOOTED AND SLEW. WE OF THE MOUNTAINS DEFEND OUR BARREN ROCKS AGAINST ALL.
WHEN THESE OTHERS COME, THEY BRING PROMISEFUL TALK AND FINE SLOGANS, BUT WE BARBARIANS CANNOT UNDERSTAND THE LEAFLETS AND BANNERS. WE SEE ONLY THE WHIPS AND GUNS. THIS WE UNDERSTAND.
5-14
SO, BECAUSE THE TASTE OF SLAVERY IS BITTER, WE FIGHT WITHOUT HOPE OF VICTORY.
IN A WAY, I'M GLAD WE CAN'T ESCAPE AND MUST JOIN YOUR OUTFIT... IT OUGHT TO BE A DILLY OF A BRAWL.

No Other Dentifrice Offers Proof of Such Results! Proof That Using

COLGATE DENTAL CREAM HELPS STOP TOOTH DECAY!

2 Years' Research at FIVE LEADING UNIVERSITIES Proves That Using Colgate's Right After Eating Helps Stop Tooth Decay Before It Starts!

THE MOST CONCLUSIVE PROOF IN ALL DENTIFRICE RESEARCH ON TOOTH DECAY! Proof based on 2 years' research at leading universities—hundreds of case histories! Conclusive proof that when teeth are brushed with Colgate's right after eating, Colgate's helps stop decay before it starts! Colgate Dental Cream has been proved to contain all the necessary ingredients, including an exclusive patented ingredient, for effective daily dental care.

YES, THE TOOTHPASTE YOU USE TO CLEAN YOUR BREATH WHILE YOU CLEAN YOUR TEETH, offers a safe, proved way to reduce tooth decay! Modern science shows decay is caused by mouth acids which are at their worst right after eating. Brushing teeth with Colgate's as directed, helps remove these acids before they harm enamel. And Colgate's penetrating foam gets between teeth where food particles often lodge.

CHILDREN LOVE COLGATE'S FLAVOR! By the time they enter school, 9 out of 10 children have one or more decayed teeth. Children love Colgate's flavor—so it's easy to start them on the proved Colgate way to reduce decay! No dentifrice can stop all tooth decay, or help cavities already started. But using Colgate's as directed is a safe way to reduce cavities—help stop tooth decay! And only Colgate Dental Cream offers proof of such results!

Always Use Colgate's To Clean Your Breath While You Clean Your Teeth—and Help Stop Tooth Decay!

Prince Valiant IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
BY HAROLD R FOSTER
Synopsis: KING AGUAR LOOKS AT THE THREE MEN WHO ARE BROUGHT BEFORE HIM. FROM THEM HE WILL LEARN ABOUT CHRISTIANITY-- THE FAITH OF HIS SON PRINCE VALIANT, OF KING ARTHUR AND ALL HIS KNIGHTS.
THESE MEN DARE TO PREACH TO HIS TURBULENT PEOPLE, TO SUFFER HARDSHIP, CRUELTY AND EVEN DEATH WITHOUT FLINCHING FOR THE SAKE OF THEIR MISSION.
THE KING WISHES TO BRING KING ARTHUR'S CREED TO THULE, THAT RIGHT MAY COME BEFORE MIGHT, THAT JUSTICE BE FOR ALL AND THE RIGHTS OF THE WEAK RESPECTED. PERHAPS CHRISTIANITY IS THE ANSWER!
SO HE ASKS THE THREE PILGRIMS TO INSTRUCT HIM. AND GREAT IS HIS DISAPPOINTMENT WHEN HE DISCOVERS THAT THESE, LIKE SO MANY OF THE EARLY, MILITANT EVANGELISTS, ARE SINCERE AND HONEST BUT SO POORLY INFORMED THAT THEY EVEN DISPUTE BITTERLY AMONG THEMSELVES!
THEN THEY GO THEIR SEPARATE WAYS AMONG THE SAVAGE PAGANS, EACH TO PREACH THE WORD AS BEST HE MAY.
SPRING COMES ONCE AGAIN TO THULE TO UNLOCK THE RIVERS AND LAKES AND WASH AWAY THE BITTER MEMORIES OF WINTER.

HAL FOSTER
AND THE KING IS SAYING TO PRINCE VALIANT: "PERHAPS THE TEACHINGS OF THE GENTLE CHRIST CAN CALM THE FIERCE SPIRIT OF MY PEOPLE AND TURN THEM FROM VIOLENCE AND PIRACY. SO I AM SENDING YOU FAR TO THE SOUTH TO ASK THE HEAD OF YOUR FAITH TO SEND LEARNED AND COMPETENT TEACHERS TO US."
